INTRODUCTION

i.

i.1 Recollecting the Name of Moonlight is a short dhāraṇī preserved in the Degé Kangyur in two nearly identical versions, one in the Tantra section and the other in the Dhāraṇī section.

i.2 Recollecting the Name of Moonlight opens with a brief homage to the buddha named Moonlight. It lacks the customary title (in Sanskrit and Tibetan) at the beginning and has no narrative frame or interlocutors. The dhāraṇī concludes with an enumeration of the benefits that accrue from reciting the dhāraṇī: a son or a daughter of good family who recites this invocation of the Buddha Moonlight every morning after rising will remember all their past lives during forty thousand kalpas. Furthermore, they will not fall into the lower realms after death and will attain the attributes of awakening.

i.3 Recollecting the Name of Moonlight also lacks a translators' colophon. Therefore, we do not know who the translators were or when it was translated. To our knowledge, no Sanskrit text of this dhāraṇī is extant and it does not appear to have been translated into Chinese. The catalogs of the early imperial translations, the Denkarma and Phangthangma, do not list it, but it is listed under the title zla 'od kyi mtshan rjes su dran pa in the catalog of translated works in the Kangyur that is included in Butön's monumental fourteenth-century History of Buddhism.<sup>1</sup> This gives us a very wide time frame for a possible date of its translation, namely, sometime between the ninth century and the first quarter of the fourteenth century.<sup>2</sup>

i.4 Texts like Recollecting the Name of Moonlight can be understood in the context of the Mahāyāna doctrine of the parallel existence of countless buddhas in different universes, and the idea that hearing, remembering, and reciting the names of these buddhas can become a condition for attaining awakening.<sup>3</sup> A buddha named Candraprabha ("Moonlight") is mentioned in several important Mahāyāna sūtras, and that might be the figure intended here.<sup>4</sup>

i.5        This English translation was prepared based on the two witnesses in the Degé Kangyur (Toh 535<sup>5</sup> and Toh 868<sup>6</sup>), in consultation with the versions in the Narthang Kangyur, the Stok Palace Kangyur, and the Comparative Edition (dpe bsdur ma) of the Kangyur.

The Translation

[F.82.b] [F.99.b]

1.1 Homage to the thus-gone, worthy [F.83.a] [F.100.a], fully and perfectly awakened Moonlight!

1.2 *tadyathā | candre candre | sucandre | maticandra candrakiraṇa | siri siri |
buddhādhiṣṭhite | kili kili | dharmādhiṣṭhite | kili kili | saṃghādhiṣṭhite svāhā.*

1.3 A son or daughter of good family who, every morning after rising, recollects the name of the tathāgata Moonlight, will remember all their former lives during forty thousand kalpas and will not fall into the lower realms. By recollecting Moonlight's name, one will attain those attributes.

NOTES

- n.1 Butön Rinchen Drup, folio 175.a/ 980.
- n.2 Most scholars consider the Denkarma to have been completed sometime in the first half of the ninth century (for a discussion of the different possible dates, see Herrmann-Pfandt 2008, xvii–xxii). Bu ston completed his History of Buddhism sometime before the year 1326 (for a detailed discussion, see van der Kuijp 2016, pp. 227–35).
- n.3 See the introduction to Bouquet of Flowers (Kusumasañcaya, Toh 266), i.1–i.9, for a discussion of this. Other sūtras that similarly teach the efficacy of hearing, remembering, and reciting the names of various buddhas include The Questions of Guṇaratnasaṅkusumita (<http://read.84000.co/translation/toh78.html>) (Guṇaratnasaṅkusumitaparipṛchā, Toh 78), The Questions of Ratnajālin (<http://read.84000.co/translation/toh163.html>) (Ratnajāliparipṛchā, Toh 163), The Eight Buddhas (<http://read.84000.co/translation/toh271.html>) (Aṣṭabuddhaka, Toh 271), and The Twelve Buddhas (<http://read.84000.co/translation/toh273.html>) (Dvādaśabuddhaka, Toh 273).
- n.4 See, e.g., Bouquet of Flowers (me tog gi tshogs, Toh 266), 1.45, 1.111 and Calling Witness with a Hundred Prostrations (dpang skong phyag brgya pa, Toh 267), 1.11.
- n.5 Two sets of folio references have been included in this translation due to a discrepancy in volume 88 (rgyud, na) of the Degé Kangyur between the 1737 par phud printings and the late (post par phud) printings. In the latter case, an extra work, Bodhimaṇḍasyālaṅkāralakṣadhāraṇī (Toh 508, byang chub snying po'i rgyan 'bum gyi gzungs), was added as the second text in the volume, thereby displacing the pagination of all the following texts in the same volume by 17 folios. Since the eKangyur follows the later printing, both references have been provided, with the highlighted one linking to the eKangyur viewer.

n.6 Note that there is a discrepancy among various databases for cataloging the Toh 868 version of this text within vol. 100 or 101 of the Degé Kangyur. See Toh 868, n.6 (<https://read.84000.co/translation/toh868.html#UT22084-088-029-90>), for details.

g.1 Daughter of good family

rigs kyi bu mo

རིགས་ཀྱི་བུ་མོ།

kuladuhitṛ

The female equivalent of the term Son of good family.

g.2 kalpa

bskal pa

བསྐྱལ་པ།

kalpa<sup>AD</sup>

Definition from the 84000 Glossary of Terms:

A cosmic period of time, sometimes equivalent to the time when a world system appears, exists, and disappears. According to the traditional Abhidharma understanding of cyclical time, a great eon (mahākalpa) is divided into eighty lesser eons. In the course of one great eon, the universe takes form and later disappears. During the first twenty of the lesser eons, the universe is in the process of creation and expansion; during the next twenty it remains; during the third twenty, it is in the process of destruction; and during the last quarter of the cycle, it remains in a state of empty stasis. A fortunate, or good, eon (bhadrakalpa) refers to any eon in which more than one buddha appears.

g.3 Lower realms

ngan song

ངན་སོང།

Rebirth in one of the three lower states of existence, namely, the hell realm, the realm of hungry ghosts, or the animal realm.

g.4 Son of good family

rigs kyi bu

རིགས་ཀྱི་བུ།

kulaputra<sup>AD</sup>

While this is usually a characteristic pertaining to Brahmins (i.e., born in the Brahmin caste to seven generations of Brahmin parents), the Buddha redefined noble birth as determined by an individual's ethical conduct and integrity. Thus, someone who enters the Buddha's Saṅgha is called a "son or daughter of noble family" and is in this sense "good" or "noble" and considered born again (dvija, or "twice born").

g.5 tathāgata

de bzhin gshegs pa

དེ་བཞིན་གཤེགས་པ།

tathāgata<sup>AD</sup>

Definition from the 84000 Glossary of Terms:

A frequently used synonym for buddha. According to different explanations, it can be read as tathā-gata, literally meaning “one who has thus gone,” or as tathā-āgata, “one who has thus come.” Gata, though literally meaning “gone,” is a past passive participle used to describe a state or condition of existence. Tatha(tā), often rendered as “suchness” or “thusness,” is the quality or condition of things as they really are, which cannot be conveyed in conceptual, dualistic terms. Therefore, this epithet is interpreted in different ways, but in general it implies one who has departed in the wake of the buddhas of the past, or one who has manifested the supreme awakening dependent on the reality that does not abide in the two extremes of existence and quiescence. It is also often used as a specific epithet of the Buddha Śākyamuni.
