compounded sensory contact, and why do they not train in order to accept or negate mentally compounded sensory contact? Why do they not train in order to accept or negate feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, why do they not train in order to accept or negate feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, why do they not train in order to accept or negate feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, why do they not train in order to accept or negate feelings [F.87.b] conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, why do they not train in order to accept or negate feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and why do they not train in order to accept or negate feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact? Why do they not train in order to accept or negate the earth element, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the water element, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the fire element, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the wind element, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the space element, and why do they not train in order to accept or negate the consciousness element? Why do they not train in order to accept or negate ignorance, why do they not train in order to accept or negate formative predispositions, why do they not train in order to accept or negate consciousness, why do they not train in order to accept or negate name and form, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the six sense fields, why do they not train in order to accept or negate sensory contact, why do they not train in order to accept or negate sensation, why do they not train in order to accept or negate craving, why do they not train in order to accept or negate grasping, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the rebirth process, why [F.88.a] do they not train in order to accept or negate birth, and why do they not train in order to accept or negate aging and death? Why do they not train in order to accept or negate the perfection of generosity, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the perfection of ethical discipline, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the perfection of tolerance, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the perfection of perseverance, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the perfection of meditative concentration, and why do they not train in order to accept or negate the perfection of wisdom? Why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of internal phenomena, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of external phenomena, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of emptiness, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of great extent, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of ultimate reality, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of the unlimited, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of [F.88.b] that which has neither beginning nor end, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of nonexclusion, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of inherent nature, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of all phenomena, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of nonentities, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of essential nature, and why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities? Why do they not train in order to accept or negate the applications of mindfulness, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the correct exertions, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the supports for miraculous ability, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the faculties, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the powers, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the branches of enlightenment, and why do they not train in order to accept or negate the noble eightfold path? Why do they not train in order to accept or negate the truths of the noble ones, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the meditative concentrations, why [F.89.a] do they not train in order to accept or negate the immeasurable attitudes, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the formless absorptions, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the liberations, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the serial steps of meditative absorption, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the extrasensory powers, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the meditative stabilities, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the dhāraṇī gateways, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the powers of the tathāgatas, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the fearlessnesses, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the kinds of exact knowledge, why do they not train in order to accept or negate great loving kindness, why do they not train in order to accept or negate great compassion, and why do they not train in order to accept or negate the distinct qualities of the buddhas? Why do they not train in order to accept or negate the fruit of having entered the stream, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the fruit of once-returner, [F.89.b] why do they not train in order to accept or negate the fruit of non-returner, why do they not train in order to accept or negate arhatship, why do they not train in order to accept or negate individual enlightenment, why do they not train in order to accept or negate the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and why do they not train in order to accept or negate all-aspect omniscience?"

16.74 "Venerable Śāradvatīputra," replied Subhūti, "it is because there is no acceptance of physical forms—no acceptance of physical forms as physical forms, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of feelings—no acceptance of feelings as feelings, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of perceptions—no acceptance of perceptions as perceptions, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of formative predispositions—no acceptance of formative predispositions as formative predispositions, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of consciousness—no acceptance of consciousness as consciousness, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena.

16.75 "It is because there is no acceptance of the eyes—no acceptance of the eyes as the eyes, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the ears—no acceptance of the ears as the ears, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the nose—no acceptance of the nose as the nose, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the tongue—no acceptance of the tongue as the tongue, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the body—no acceptance of the body as the body, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. [F.90.a] It is because there is no acceptance of the mental faculty—no acceptance of the mental faculty as the mental faculty, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of sights—no acceptance of sights as sights, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of sounds—no acceptance of sounds as sounds, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of odors—no acceptance of odors as odors, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of tastes—no acceptance of tastes as tastes, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of tangibles—no acceptance of tangibles as tangibles, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of mental phenomena—no acceptance of mental phenomena as mental phenomena, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of visual consciousness—no acceptance of visual consciousness as visual consciousness, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of auditory consciousness—no acceptance of auditory consciousness as auditory consciousness, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of olfactory consciousness—no acceptance of olfactory consciousness as olfactory consciousness, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of gustatory consciousness—no acceptance of gustatory consciousness as gustatory consciousness, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of tactile consciousness—no acceptance of tactile consciousness as tactile consciousness, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of mental consciousness—no acceptance of mental consciousness as mental consciousness, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. [F.90.b] It is because there is no acceptance of visually compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of visually compounded sensory contact as visually compounded sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of aurally compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of aurally compounded sensory contact as aurally compounded sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of nasally compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of nasally compounded sensory contact as nasally compounded sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of lingually compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of lingually compounded sensory contact as lingually compounded sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of corporeally compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of corporeally compounded sensory contact as corporeally compounded sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of mentally compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of mentally compounded sensory contact as mentally compounded sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact as feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact as feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact as feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact as feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, [F.91.a] owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact as feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact—no acceptance of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact as feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena.

- 16.76 “It is because there is no acceptance of the earth element—no acceptance of the earth element as the earth element, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the water element—no acceptance of the water element as the water element, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the fire element—no acceptance of the fire element as the fire element, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the wind element—no acceptance of the wind element as the wind element, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the space element—no acceptance of the space element as the space element, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the consciousness element—no acceptance of the consciousness element as the consciousness element, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena.

16.77 “It is because there is no acceptance of ignorance—no acceptance of ignorance as ignorance, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of formative predispositions—no acceptance of formative predispositions as formative predispositions, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of consciousness—no acceptance of [F.91.b] consciousness as consciousness, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of name and form—no acceptance of name and form as name and form, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the six sense fields—no acceptance of the six sense fields as the six sense fields, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of sensory contact—no acceptance of sensory contact as sensory contact, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of sensation—no acceptance of sensation as sensation, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of craving—no acceptance of craving as craving, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of grasping—no acceptance of grasping as grasping, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the rebirth process—no acceptance of the rebirth process as the rebirth process, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of birth—no acceptance of birth as birth, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of aging and death—no acceptance of aging and death as aging and death, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena.

16.78 “It is because there is no acceptance of the perfection of generosity—no acceptance of the perfection of generosity as the perfection of generosity, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the perfection of ethical discipline—no acceptance of the perfection of ethical discipline as the perfection of ethical discipline, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the perfection of tolerance—no acceptance of the perfection of tolerance as the perfection of tolerance, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the perfection of perseverance—no acceptance of the perfection of perseverance [F.92.a] as the perfection of perseverance, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the perfection of meditative concentration—no acceptance of the perfection of meditative concentration as the perfection of meditative concentration, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the perfection of wisdom—no acceptance of the perfection of wisdom as the perfection of wisdom, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena.

- 16.79 “It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of internal phenomena—no acceptance of the emptiness of internal phenomena as the emptiness of internal phenomena, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of external phenomena—no acceptance of the emptiness of external phenomena as the emptiness of external phenomena, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena—no acceptance of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena as the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of emptiness—no acceptance of the emptiness of emptiness as the emptiness of emptiness, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of emptiness of great extent—no acceptance of the emptiness of great extent as the emptiness of great extent, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of ultimate reality—no acceptance of the emptiness of ultimate reality as the emptiness of ultimate reality, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena—no acceptance of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena as the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena—no acceptance of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena as the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance [F.92.b] of the emptiness of the unlimited—no acceptance of the emptiness of the unlimited as the emptiness of the unlimited, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end—no acceptance of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end as the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of nonexclusion—no acceptance of the emptiness of nonexclusion as the emptiness of nonexclusion, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of inherent nature—no acceptance of the emptiness of inherent nature as the emptiness of inherent nature, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of all phenomena—no acceptance of the emptiness of all phenomena as the emptiness of all phenomena, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics—no acceptance of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics as the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended—no acceptance of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended as the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of nonentities—no acceptance of the emptiness of nonentities as the emptiness of nonentities, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of essential nature—no acceptance of the emptiness of essential nature as the emptiness of essential nature, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities—no acceptance of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities as the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, owing to the emptiness of [F.93.a] external and internal phenomena.

16.80 “It is because there is no acceptance of the applications of mindfulness—no acceptance of the applications of mindfulness as the applications of mindfulness, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the correct exertions—no acceptance of the correct exertions as the correct exertions, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the supports for miraculous ability—no acceptance of the supports for miraculous ability as the supports for miraculous ability, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the faculties—no acceptance of the faculties as the faculties, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the powers—no acceptance of the powers as the powers, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the branches of enlightenment—no acceptance of the branches of enlightenment as the branches of enlightenment, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena.

It is because there is no acceptance of the noble eightfold path—no acceptance of the noble eightfold path as the noble eightfold path, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena.

16.81 “It is because there is no acceptance of the truths of the noble ones—no acceptance of the truths of the noble ones as the truths of the noble ones, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the meditative concentrations—no acceptance of the meditative concentrations as the meditative concentrations, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the immeasurable attitudes—no acceptance of the immeasurable attitudes as the immeasurable attitudes, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. [F.93.b] It is because there is no acceptance of the formless absorptions—no acceptance of the formless absorptions as the formless absorptions, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the liberations—no acceptance of the liberations as the liberations, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the serial steps of meditative absorption—no acceptance of the serial steps of meditative absorption as the serial steps of meditative absorption, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation—no acceptance of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation as the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the extrasensory powers—no acceptance of the extrasensory powers as the extrasensory powers, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the meditative stabilities—no acceptance of the meditative stabilities as the meditative stabilities, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the dhāraṇī gateways—no acceptance of the dhāraṇī gateways as the dhāraṇī gateways, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the powers of the tathāgatas—no acceptance of the powers of the tathāgatas as the powers of the tathāgatas, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the fearlessnesses—no acceptance of the fearlessnesses as the fearlessnesses, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the kinds of exact knowledge—no acceptance of the kinds of exact knowledge as the kinds of exact knowledge, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of great loving kindness—no acceptance of great loving kindness as great loving kindness, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of great compassion—no acceptance of [F.94.a] great compassion as great compassion, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the distinct qualities of the buddhas—no acceptance of the distinct qualities of the buddhas as the distinct qualities of the buddhas, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of knowledge of all the dharmas—no acceptance of knowledge of all the dharmas as knowledge of all the dharmas, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of the knowledge of the aspects of the path—no acceptance of the knowledge of the aspects of the path as the knowledge of the aspects of the path, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. It is because there is no acceptance of all-aspect omniscience—no acceptance of all-aspect omniscience as all-aspect omniscience, owing to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena.

16.82 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, so it is that they will be emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of there being no acceptance of any phenomena.”

16.83 “Venerable Subhūti, will bodhisattva great beings who train in this manner, having trained in the perfection of wisdom, be emancipated in all-aspect omniscience?” asked Śāriputra.

16.84 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra,” replied [F.94.b] Subhūti, “bodhisattva great beings who train in this manner, having trained in the perfection of wisdom, will be emancipated in all-aspect omniscience by way of there being no acceptance of any phenomena.”

16.85 “Venerable Subhūti, how will bodhisattva great beings training in this manner, having trained in order to accept or negate all phenomena, be emancipated in all-aspect omniscience?” asked Śāriputra.

16.86 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra,” replied Subhūti, “here, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of physical forms. If you ask why, it is because physical forms do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of physical forms. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of feelings. If you ask why, it is because feelings do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of feelings. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of perceptions. If you ask why, it is because perceptions do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of perceptions. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, [F.95.a] and do not observe the increase of formative predispositions. If you ask why, it is because formative predispositions do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of formative predispositions. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of consciousness. If you ask why, it is because consciousness does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of consciousness.

- 16.87 “They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the eyes. If you ask why, it is because the eyes do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the eyes. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the ears. If you ask why, it is because the ears do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the ears. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the nose. If you ask why, it is because the nose does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the nose. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the [F.95.b] increase of the tongue. If you ask why, it is because the tongue does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the tongue. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the body. If you ask why, it is because the body does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the body. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the mental faculty. If you ask why, it is because the mental faculty does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the mental faculty.

- 16.88 “They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of sights. If you ask why, it is because sights do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of sights. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of sounds. If you ask why, it is because sounds do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of sounds. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of odors. If you ask why, it is because odors do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of odors. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe [F.96.a] the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of tastes. If you ask why, it is because tastes do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of tastes. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of tangibles. If you ask why, it is because tangibles do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of tangibles. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of mental phenomena. If you ask why, it is because mental phenomena do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of mental phenomena.

- 16.89 “They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of visual consciousness. If you ask why, it is because visual consciousness does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of visual consciousness. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of auditory consciousness. If you ask why, it is because auditory consciousness does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of auditory consciousness. They do not observe the arising, do not observe [F.96.b] the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of olfactory consciousness. If you ask why, it is because olfactory consciousness does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of olfactory consciousness. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of gustatory consciousness. If you ask why, it is because gustatory consciousness does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of gustatory consciousness. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of tactile consciousness. If you ask why, it is because tactile consciousness does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of tactile consciousness. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of mental consciousness. If you ask why, it is because mental consciousness does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of mental consciousness.

- 16.90 “They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of visually compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because visually compounded sensory contact does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature [F.97.a] of visually compounded sensory contact. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of aurally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because aurally compounded sensory contact does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of aurally compounded sensory contact. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of nasally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because nasally compounded sensory contact does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of nasally compounded sensory contact. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of lingually compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because lingually compounded sensory contact does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of lingually compounded sensory contact. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of corporeally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because corporeally compounded sensory contact does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of mentally compounded sensory contact. If [F.97.b] you ask why, it is because mentally compounded sensory contact does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of mentally compounded sensory contact.

- 16.91 “They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact [F.98.a] do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact. [B8]

- 16.92 “They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the earth element. If you ask why, it is because the earth element does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the earth element. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the water element. If you ask why, it is because the water element does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the water element. They do not observe [F.98.b] the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the fire element. If you ask why, it is because the fire element does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the fire element. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the wind element. If you ask why, it is because the wind element does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the wind element. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the space element. If you ask why, it is because the space element does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the space element. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the consciousness element. If you ask why, it is because the consciousness element does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the consciousness element.

- 16.93 “They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of ignorance. If you ask why, it is because ignorance does not exist and [F.99.a] is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of ignorance. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of formative predispositions. If you ask why, it is because formative predispositions do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of formative predispositions. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of consciousness. If you ask why, it is because consciousness does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of consciousness. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of name and form. If you ask why, it is because name and form do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of name and form. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the six sense fields. If you ask why, it is because the six sense fields do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the six sense fields. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because sensory contact does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of sensory contact. [F.99.b] They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of sensation. If you ask why, it is because sensation does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of sensation. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of craving. If you ask why, it is because craving does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of craving. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of grasping. If you ask why, it is because grasping does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of grasping. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the rebirth process. If you ask why, it is because the rebirth process does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the rebirth process. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of birth. If you ask why, it is because birth does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of birth. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe [F.100.a] the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of aging and death. If you ask why, it is because aging and death do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of aging and death.

- 16.94 “They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the perfection of generosity. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of generosity does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the perfection of generosity. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the perfection of ethical discipline. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of ethical discipline does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the perfection of ethical discipline. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the perfection of tolerance. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of tolerance does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the perfection of tolerance. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the perfection of perseverance. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of perseverance does not exist [F.100.b] and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the perfection of perseverance. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the perfection of meditative concentration. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of meditative concentration does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the perfection of meditative concentration. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of wisdom does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the perfection of wisdom.

- 16.95 “They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of internal phenomena. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of internal phenomena does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of external phenomena. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of external phenomena does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of external phenomena. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of [F.101.a] the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of emptiness. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of emptiness does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of emptiness. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of great extent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of great extent does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of great extent. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of ultimate reality. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of ultimate reality does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, [F.101.b] do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of the unlimited. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of the unlimited does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of the unlimited. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of nonexclusion. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of nonexclusion does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of inherent nature. If you ask why, it is because [F.102.a] the emptiness of inherent nature does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of inherent nature. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of all phenomena. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of all phenomena does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of all phenomena. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of nonentities. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of nonentities does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of nonentities. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, [F.102.b] do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of essential nature. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of essential nature does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of essential nature. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

- 16.96 “They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the applications of mindfulness. If you ask why, it is because the applications of mindfulness do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the applications of mindfulness. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the correct exertions. If you ask why, it is because the correct exertions do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the correct exertions. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the supports for miraculous ability. If you ask why, it is because the supports for miraculous ability do not [F.103.a] exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the supports for miraculous ability. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the faculties. If you ask why, it is because the faculties do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the faculties. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the powers. If you ask why, it is because the powers do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the powers. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the branches of enlightenment. If you ask why, it is because the branches of enlightenment do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the branches of enlightenment. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the noble eightfold path. If you ask why, it is because the noble eightfold path does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the noble eightfold path.

16.97 “They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, [F.103.b] do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the truths of the noble ones. If you ask why, it is because the truths of the noble ones do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the truths of the noble ones. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the meditative concentrations. If you ask why, it is because the meditative concentrations do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the meditative concentrations. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the immeasurable attitudes. If you ask why, it is because the immeasurable attitudes do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the immeasurable attitudes. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the formless absorptions. If you ask why, it is because the formless absorptions do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the formless absorptions. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the liberations. If you ask why, it is because the liberations [F.104.a] do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the liberations. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the serial steps of meditative absorption. If you ask why, it is because the serial steps of meditative absorption do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the extrasensory powers. If you ask why, it is because the extrasensory powers do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the extrasensory powers. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the meditative stabilities. [F.104.b] If you ask why, it is because the meditative stabilities do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the meditative stabilities. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the dhāraṇī gateways. If you ask why, it is because the dhāraṇī gateways do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the dhāraṇī gateways. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the powers of the tathāgatas. If you ask why, it is because the powers of the tathāgatas do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the powers of the tathāgatas. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the fearlessnesses. If you ask why, it is because the fearlessnesses do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the fearlessnesses. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the kinds of exact knowledge. If you ask why, it is because the kinds of exact knowledge do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the kinds of exact knowledge. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe [F.105.a] the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of great loving kindness. If you ask why, it is because great loving kindness does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of great loving kindness. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of great compassion. If you ask why, it is because great compassion does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of great compassion. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the distinct qualities of the buddhas. If you ask why, it is because the distinct qualities of the buddhas do not exist and are not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of knowledge of all the dharma. If you ask why, it is because knowledge of all the dharma does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of knowledge of all the dharma. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of the knowledge of the aspects of the path. If you ask why, it is [F.105.b] because the knowledge of the aspects of the path does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path. They do not observe the arising, do not observe the cessation, do not observe the appropriation, do not observe the rejection, do not observe the defilement, do not observe the purification, do not observe the accumulation, do not observe the diminishing, do not observe the decrease, and do not observe the increase of all-aspect omniscience. If you ask why, it is because all-aspect omniscience does not exist and is not apprehended by way of an essential nature of all-aspect omniscience.

16.98 “Venerable Śāradvatīputra, so it is that bodhisattva great beings, having trained in the perfection of wisdom for the sake of the nonarising, noncessation, nonappropriation, nonrejection, nondefilement, nonpurification, nonaccumulation, nondiminishing, nondecrease, and nonincrease of all phenomena, are emancipated, by way of not training and not being emancipated, in all-aspect omniscience.”

16.99 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, asked the venerable Śāradvatīputra, “Venerable monk Śāradvatīputra, where should bodhisattva great beings⁶⁶⁶ search for the perfection of wisdom?”

16.100 “Mighty lord of the gods, they should search for the bodhisattva great beings’ perfection of wisdom in the discourse of Subhūti,” replied Śāradvatīputra.

16.101 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, said to the venerable Subhūti, “It is through your power, it is through your blessing, that the venerable monk Śāradvatīputra has said, ‘They should search for [F.106.a] the bodhisattva great beings’ perfection of wisdom in the discourse of Subhūti.’ ”

“Kauśika,” replied Subhūti, “it is not through my power. It is not through my blessing.”

16.102 “Venerable monk Subhūti, in that case, whose power is it? Whose blessing is it?” asked Śakra.

“Kauśika,” replied Subhūti, “it is the power of the tathāgatas. It is the blessing of the tathāgatas.”

16.103 Śakra then inquired, “Venerable monk Subhūti, if all phenomena are without blessing, how can it be said that this is the power of the tathāgatas, this is the blessing of the tathāgatas? The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended as other than the reality of phenomena that is without blessing. The existence of the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended as other than the real nature.”⁶⁶⁷

16.104 “Kauśika, it is so, it is so!” replied Subhūti. “The existence of the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended as other than the reality of phenomena that is without blessing. The existence of the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended as other than the real nature.

16.105 “The tathāgatas also cannot be apprehended in the reality of phenomena that is without blessing, nor can the reality of phenomena that is without blessing be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature, nor can the real nature be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

16.106 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of physical forms, nor can the real nature of physical forms be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of physical forms,⁶⁶⁸ nor can the reality of physical forms be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of feelings, nor can the real nature of feelings be apprehended in the tathāgatas; [F.106.b] the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of feelings, nor can the reality of feelings be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of perceptions, nor can the real nature of perceptions be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of perceptions, nor can the reality of perceptions be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of formative predispositions, nor can the real nature of formative predispositions be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of formative predispositions, nor can the reality of formative predispositions be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of consciousness, nor can the real nature of consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of consciousness, nor can the reality of consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

16.107 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the eyes, nor can the real nature of the eyes be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the eyes, nor can the reality of the eyes be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the ears, nor can the real nature of the ears be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the ears, [F.107.a] nor can the reality of the ears be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the nose, nor can the real nature of the nose be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the nose, nor can the reality of the nose be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the tongue, nor can the real nature of the tongue be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the tongue, nor can the reality of the tongue be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the body, nor can the real nature of the body be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the body, nor can the reality of the body be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the mental faculty, nor can the real nature of the mental faculty be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the mental faculty, nor can the reality of the mental faculty be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

16.108 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of sights, nor can the real nature of sights be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of sights, nor can the reality of sights be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of sounds, nor can the real nature of sounds be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of sounds, nor can the reality of sounds be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of odors, [F.107.b] nor can the real nature of odors be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of odors, nor can the reality of odors be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of tastes, nor can the real nature of tastes be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of tastes, nor can the reality of tastes be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of tangibles, nor can the real nature of tangibles be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of tangibles, nor can the reality of tangibles be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of mental phenomena, nor can the real nature of mental phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of mental phenomena, nor can the reality of mental phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

16.109 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of visual consciousness, nor can the real nature of visual consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of visual consciousness, nor can the reality of visual consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of auditory consciousness, nor can the real nature of auditory consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of auditory consciousness, nor can the reality of auditory consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended [F.108.a] in the real nature of olfactory consciousness, nor can the real nature of olfactory consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of olfactory consciousness, nor can the reality of olfactory consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of gustatory consciousness, nor can the real nature of gustatory consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of gustatory consciousness, nor can the reality of gustatory consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of tactile consciousness, nor can the real nature of tactile consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of tactile consciousness, nor can the reality of tactile consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of mental consciousness, nor can the real nature of mental consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of mental consciousness, nor can the reality of mental consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

- 16.110 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of visually compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of visually compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of visually compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of visually compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of aurally compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of aurally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of aurally compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of aurally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas [F.108.b] cannot be apprehended in the real nature of nasally compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of nasally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of nasally compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of nasally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of lingually compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of lingually compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of lingually compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of lingually compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of corporeally compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of corporeally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of mentally compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of mentally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of mentally compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of mentally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

- 16.111 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of feelings conditioned by visually compounded [F.109.a] sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas. [F.109.b] The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact, nor can the real nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact, nor can the reality of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

16.112 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the earth element, nor can the real nature of the earth element be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the earth element, nor can the reality of the earth element be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the water element, nor can the real nature of the water element be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the water element, nor can the reality of the water element be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the fire element, nor can the real nature of the fire element be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the fire element, nor can the reality of the fire element be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the wind element, nor can the real nature of the wind element be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the wind element, nor can the reality of the wind element be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the space element, nor can the real nature of the space element [F.110.a] be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the space element, nor can the reality of the space element be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the consciousness element, nor can the real nature of the consciousness element be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the consciousness element, nor can the reality of the consciousness element be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

16.113 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of ignorance, nor can the real nature of ignorance be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of ignorance, nor can the reality of ignorance be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of formative predispositions, nor can the real nature of formative predispositions be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of formative predispositions, nor can the reality of formative predispositions be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of consciousness, nor can the real nature of consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of consciousness, nor can the reality of consciousness be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of name and form, nor can the real nature of name and form be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of name and form, nor can the reality of [F.110.b] name and form be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the six sense fields, nor can the real nature of the six sense fields be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the six sense fields, nor can the reality of the six sense fields be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of sensory contact, nor can the real nature of sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of sensory contact, nor can the reality of sensory contact be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of sensation, nor can the real nature of sensation be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of sensation, nor can the reality of sensation be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of craving, nor can the real nature of craving be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of craving, nor can the reality of craving be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of grasping, nor can the real nature of grasping be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of grasping, nor can the reality of grasping be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the rebirth process, nor can the real nature of the rebirth process be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the rebirth process, nor can the reality of the rebirth process be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas [F.111.a] cannot be apprehended in the real nature of birth, nor can the real nature of birth be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of birth, nor can the reality of birth be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of aging and death, nor can the real nature of aging and death be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of aging and death, nor can the reality of aging and death be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

- 16.114 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the perfection of generosity, nor can the real nature of the perfection of generosity be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the perfection of generosity, nor can the reality of the perfection of generosity be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the perfection of ethical discipline, nor can the real nature of the perfection of ethical discipline be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the perfection of ethical discipline, nor can the reality of the perfection of ethical discipline be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the perfection of tolerance, nor can the real nature of the perfection of tolerance be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the perfection of tolerance, nor can the reality of the perfection of tolerance be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of [F.111.b] the perfection of perseverance, nor can the real nature of the perfection of perseverance be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the perfection of perseverance, nor can the reality of the perfection of perseverance be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the perfection of meditative concentration, nor can the real nature of the perfection of meditative concentration be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the perfection of meditative concentration, nor can the reality of the perfection of meditative concentration be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the perfection of wisdom, nor can the real nature of the perfection of wisdom be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the perfection of wisdom, nor can the reality of the perfection of wisdom be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

- 16.115 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of internal phenomena, nor can the reality of the emptiness of internal phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of external phenomena, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of external phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of external phenomena, nor can the reality of the emptiness of external phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, nor can the real nature of the emptiness [F.112.a] of external and internal phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, nor can the reality of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of emptiness, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of emptiness be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of emptiness, nor can the reality of the emptiness of emptiness be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of great extent, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of great extent be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of great extent, nor can the reality of the emptiness of great extent be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of ultimate reality, nor can the reality of the emptiness of ultimate reality be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, nor can the reality of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena [F.112.b] be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, nor can the reality of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of the unlimited, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of the unlimited be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of the unlimited, nor can the reality of the emptiness of the unlimited be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, nor can the reality of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of nonexclusion, nor can the reality of the emptiness of nonexclusion be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of inherent nature, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of inherent nature be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of inherent nature, nor can the reality of the emptiness of inherent nature be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of all phenomena, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of all phenomena [F.113.a] be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of all phenomena, nor can the reality of the emptiness of all phenomena be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, nor can the reality of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, nor can the reality of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of nonentities, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of nonentities be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of nonentities, nor can the reality of the emptiness of nonentities be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of essential nature, nor can the real nature of the emptiness of essential nature be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of essential nature, nor can the reality of the emptiness of essential nature be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, [F.113.b] nor can the real nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, nor can the reality of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities be apprehended in the tathāgatas. [B9]

16.116 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the applications of mindfulness, nor can the real nature of the applications of mindfulness be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the applications of mindfulness, nor can the reality of the applications of mindfulness be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the correct exertions, nor can the real nature of the correct exertions be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the correct exertions, nor can the reality of the correct exertions be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the supports for miraculous ability, nor can the real nature of the supports for miraculous ability be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the supports for miraculous ability, nor can the reality of the supports for miraculous ability be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the faculties, nor can the real nature of the faculties be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the faculties, nor can the reality of the faculties be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the powers, [F.114.a] nor can the real nature of the powers be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the powers, nor can the reality of the powers be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the branches of enlightenment, nor can the real nature of the branches of enlightenment be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the branches of enlightenment, nor can the reality of the branches of enlightenment be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the noble eightfold path, nor can the real nature of the noble eightfold path be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the noble eightfold path, nor can the reality of the noble eightfold path be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

16.117 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the truths of the noble ones, nor can the real nature of the truths of the noble ones be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the truths of the noble ones, nor can the reality of the truths of the noble ones be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the meditative concentrations, nor can the real nature of the meditative concentrations be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the meditative concentrations, nor can the reality of the meditative concentrations be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the immeasurable attitudes, nor can the real nature of [F.114.b] the immeasurable attitudes be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the immeasurable attitudes, nor can the reality of the immeasurable attitudes be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the formless absorptions, nor can the real nature of the formless absorptions be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the formless absorptions, nor can the reality of the formless absorptions be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the liberations, nor can the real nature of the liberations be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the liberations, nor can the reality of the liberations be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption, nor can the real nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the serial steps of meditative absorption, nor can the reality of the serial steps of meditative absorption be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, nor can the real nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness [F.115.a] gateways to liberation, nor can the reality of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the extrasensory powers, nor can the real nature of the extrasensory powers be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the extrasensory powers, nor can the reality of the extrasensory powers be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the meditative stabilities, nor can the real nature of the meditative stabilities be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the meditative stabilities, nor can the reality of the meditative stabilities be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the dhāraṇī gateways, nor can the real nature of the dhāraṇī gateways be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the dhāraṇī gateways, nor can the reality of the dhāraṇī gateways be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

16.118 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the powers of the tathāgatas, nor can the real nature of the powers of the tathāgatas be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the powers of the tathāgatas, nor can the reality of the powers of the tathāgatas be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the fearlessnesses, nor can the real nature of the fearlessnesses be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the fearlessnesses, nor can the reality of the fearlessnesses [F.115.b] be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the kinds of exact knowledge, nor can the real nature of the kinds of exact knowledge be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the kinds of exact knowledge, nor can the reality of the kinds of exact knowledge be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of great loving kindness, nor can the real nature of great loving kindness be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of great loving kindness, nor can the reality of great loving kindness be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of great compassion, nor can the real nature of great compassion be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of great compassion, nor can the reality of great compassion be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas, nor can the real nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the distinct qualities of the buddhas, nor can the reality of the distinct qualities of the buddhas be apprehended in the tathāgatas.

16.119 “The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of knowledge of all the dharmas, nor can the real nature of knowledge of all the dharmas be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of knowledge of all the dharmas, nor can the reality of knowledge of all the dharmas be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in [F.116.a] the real nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path, nor can the real nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of the knowledge of the aspects of the path, nor can the reality of the knowledge of the aspects of the path be apprehended in the tathāgatas. The tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the real nature of all-aspect omniscience, nor can the real nature of all-aspect omniscience be apprehended in the tathāgatas; the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended in the reality of all-aspect omniscience, nor can the reality of all-aspect omniscience be apprehended in the tathāgatas.”

16.120 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of physical forms; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of physical forms; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of physical forms; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of physical forms. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of feelings; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of feelings; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of feelings; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of feelings. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of perceptions; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of perceptions; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature [F.116.b] of perceptions; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of perceptions. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of formative predispositions; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of formative predispositions; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of formative predispositions; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of formative predispositions. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of consciousness; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of consciousness.

16.121 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the eyes; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the eyes; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the eyes; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the eyes. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the ears; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the ears; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the ears; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the ears. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the nose; [F.117.a] is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the nose; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the nose; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the nose. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the tongue; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the tongue; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the tongue; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the tongue. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the body; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the body; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the body; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the body. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the mental faculty; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the mental faculty; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the mental faculty; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the mental faculty.

- 16.122 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of sights; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of sights; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of sights; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of sights. Kauśika, the tathāgata [F.117.b] is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of sounds; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of sounds; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of sounds; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of sounds. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of odors; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of odors; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of odors; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of odors. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of tastes; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of tastes; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of tastes; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of tastes. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of tangibles; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of tangibles; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of tangibles; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of tangibles. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of mental phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of mental phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of mental phenomena; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of mental phenomena. [F.118.a]

- 16.123 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of visual consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of visual consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of visual consciousness; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of visual consciousness. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of auditory consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of auditory consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of auditory consciousness; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of auditory consciousness. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of olfactory consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of olfactory consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of olfactory consciousness; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of olfactory consciousness. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of gustatory consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of gustatory consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of gustatory consciousness; and is neither conjoined with nor [F.118.b] disjoined from anything other than the reality of gustatory consciousness. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of tactile consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of tactile consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of tactile consciousness; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of tactile consciousness. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of mental consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of mental consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of mental consciousness; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of mental consciousness.

16.124 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of visually compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of visually compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of visually compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of visually compounded sensory contact. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of aurally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of aurally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of aurally compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with [F.119.a] nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of aurally compounded sensory contact. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of nasally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of nasally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of nasally compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of nasally compounded sensory contact. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of lingually compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of lingually compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of lingually compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of lingually compounded sensory contact. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of corporeally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of corporeally compounded sensory contact. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of mentally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of mentally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of mentally compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with [F.119.b] nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of mentally compounded sensory contact.

16.125 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined [F.120.a] from the reality of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact.

16.126 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the earth element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the earth element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the earth element; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than [F.120.b] the reality of the earth element. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the water element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the water element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the water element; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the water element. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the fire element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the fire element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the fire element; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the fire element. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the wind element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the wind element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the wind element; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the wind element. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the space element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the space element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the space element; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the space element. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither [F.121.a] conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the consciousness element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the consciousness element; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the consciousness element; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the consciousness element.

16.127 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of ignorance; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of ignorance; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of ignorance; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of ignorance. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of formative predispositions; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of formative predispositions; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of formative predispositions; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of formative predispositions. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of consciousness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of consciousness; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of consciousness. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature [F.121.b] of name and form; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of name and form; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of name and form; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of name and form. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the six sense fields; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the six sense fields; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the six sense fields; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the six sense fields. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of sensory contact; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of sensory contact; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of sensory contact. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of sensation; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of sensation; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of sensation; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of sensation. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of craving; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of craving; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than [F.122.a] the real nature of craving; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of craving. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of grasping; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of grasping; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of grasping; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of grasping. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the rebirth process; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the rebirth process; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the rebirth process; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the rebirth process. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of birth; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of birth; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of birth; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of birth. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of aging and death; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of aging and death; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of aging and death; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of aging and death.

- 16.128 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of [F.122.b] the perfection of generosity; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the perfection of generosity; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the perfection of generosity; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the perfection of generosity. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the perfection of ethical conduct; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the perfection of ethical conduct; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the perfection of ethical conduct; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the perfection of ethical conduct. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the perfection of tolerance; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the perfection of tolerance; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the perfection of tolerance; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the perfection of tolerance. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the perfection of perseverance; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the perfection of perseverance; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the perfection of perseverance; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the perfection of [F.123.a] perseverance. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the perfection of meditative concentration; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the perfection of meditative concentration; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the perfection of meditative concentration; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the perfection of meditative concentration. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the perfection of wisdom; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the perfection of wisdom; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the perfection of wisdom; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the perfection of wisdom.

- 16.129 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of internal phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of internal phenomena. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of external phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of external phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of external phenomena; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of [F.123.b] external phenomena. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of emptiness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of emptiness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of emptiness; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of emptiness. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of great extent; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of great extent; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of great extent; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of great extent. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of ultimate reality; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality. [F.124.a] Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of the unlimited; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of the unlimited; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of the unlimited; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of the unlimited. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of that which has [F.124.b] neither beginning nor end; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of nonexclusion; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of nonexclusion. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of inherent nature; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of inherent nature; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of inherent nature; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of inherent nature. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of all phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of all phenomena; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of all phenomena; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of all phenomena. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined [F.125.a] from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of nonentities; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of nonentities; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of nonentities; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of nonentities. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of essential nature; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness of essential nature; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of essential nature; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of essential nature. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from [F.125.b] the reality of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

- 16.130 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the applications of mindfulness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the applications of mindfulness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the applications of mindfulness; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the applications of mindfulness. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the correct exertions; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the correct exertions; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the correct exertions; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the correct exertions. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the supports for miraculous ability; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the supports for miraculous ability; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the supports for miraculous ability; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the supports for miraculous ability. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from [F.126.a] the real nature of the faculties; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the faculties; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the faculties; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the faculties. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the powers; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the powers; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the powers; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the powers. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the branches of enlightenment; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the branches of enlightenment; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the branches of enlightenment; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the branches of enlightenment. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the noble eightfold path; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the noble eightfold path; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the noble eightfold path; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the noble eightfold path.

- 16.131 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither [F.126.b] conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the truths of the noble ones; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the truths of the noble ones; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the truths of the noble ones; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the truths of the noble ones. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the meditative concentrations; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the meditative concentrations; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the meditative concentrations; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the meditative concentrations. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the immeasurable attitudes; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the immeasurable attitudes; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the immeasurable attitudes; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the immeasurable attitudes. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the formless absorptions; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the formless absorptions; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the formless absorptions; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the formless absorptions. Kauśika, the [F.127.a] tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the liberations; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the liberations; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the liberations; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the liberations. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the serial steps of meditative absorption; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the serial steps of meditative absorption. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from [F.127.b] the real nature of the extrasensory powers; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the extrasensory powers; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the extrasensory powers; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the extrasensory powers. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the meditative stabilities; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the meditative stabilities; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the meditative stabilities; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the meditative stabilities. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the dhāraṇī gateways; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the dhāraṇī gateways; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the dhāraṇī gateways; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the dhāraṇī gateways. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the powers of the tathāgatas; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the powers of the tathāgatas; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the powers of the tathāgatas; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the powers of the tathāgatas. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature [F.128.a] of the fearlessnesses; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the fearlessnesses; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the fearlessnesses; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the fearlessnesses. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the kinds of exact knowledge; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the kinds of exact knowledge; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the kinds of exact knowledge; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the kinds of exact knowledge. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of great loving kindness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of great loving kindness; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of great loving kindness; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of great loving kindness. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of great compassion; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of great compassion; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of great compassion; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of great compassion. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the distinct [F.128.b] qualities of the buddhas; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the distinct qualities of the buddhas; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

16.132 “Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of knowledge of all the dharmas; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of knowledge of all the dharmas; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of knowledge of all the dharmas; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of knowledge of all the dharmas. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of the knowledge of the aspects of the path; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the reality of the knowledge of the aspects of the path. Kauśika, the tathāgata is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the real nature of all-aspect omniscience; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from the reality of all-aspect omniscience; is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than the real nature of all-aspect omniscience; and is neither conjoined with nor disjoined from anything other than [F.129.a] the reality of all-aspect omniscience.

16.133 “Kauśika, the power of that which is not conjoined with and not disjoined from all those phenomena—this, by way of being devoid of a blessing, is its blessing. [B10]

16.134 “Kauśika, you asked, ‘Where should bodhisattva great beings search for the perfection of wisdom?’ Kauśika, they should not search for it in physical forms, nor should they search for it in anything other than physical forms; they should not search for it in feelings, nor should they search for it in anything other than feelings; they should not search for it in perceptions, nor should they search for it in anything other than perceptions; they should not search for it in formative predispositions, nor should they search for it in anything other than formative predispositions; and they should not search for it in consciousness, nor should they search for it in anything other than consciousness. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—physical forms, feelings, perceptions, formative predispositions, consciousness, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of searching—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics.

- 16.135 “Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the eyes, nor should they search for it in anything other than the eyes; they should not search for it in the ears, [F.129.b] nor should they search for it in anything other than the ears; they should not search for it in the nose, nor should they search for it in anything other than the nose; they should not search for it in the tongue, nor should they search for it in anything other than the tongue; they should not search for it in the body, nor should they search for it in anything other than the body; and they should not search for it in the mental faculty, nor should they search for it in anything other than the mental faculty. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the eyes, the ears, the nose, the tongue, the body, the mental faculty, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in sights, nor should they search for it in anything other than sights; they should not search for it in sounds, nor should they search for it in anything other than sounds; they should not search for it in odors, nor should they search for it in anything other than odors; they should not search for it in tastes, nor should they search for it in anything other than tastes; they should not search for it in tangibles, nor should they search for it in anything other than tangibles; and they should not search for it in mental phenomena, nor should they search for it in anything other than phenomena. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—sights, sounds, odors, tastes, tangibles, mental phenomena, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of [F.130.a] seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in visual consciousness, nor should they search for it in anything other than visual consciousness; they should not search for it in auditory consciousness, nor should they search for it in anything other than auditory consciousness; they should not search for it in olfactory consciousness, nor should they search for it in anything other than olfactory consciousness; they should not search for it in gustatory consciousness, nor should they search for it in anything other than gustatory consciousness; they should not search for it in tactile consciousness, nor should they search for it in anything other than tactile consciousness; and they should not search for it in mental consciousness, nor should they search for it in anything other than mental consciousness. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—visual consciousness, auditory consciousness, olfactory consciousness, gustatory consciousness, tactile consciousness, mental consciousness, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for [F.130.b] the perfection of wisdom in visually compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than visually compounded sensory contact; they should not search for it in aurally compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than aurally compounded sensory contact; they should not search for it in nasally compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than nasally compounded sensory contact; they should not search for it in lingually compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than lingually compounded sensory contact; they should not search for it in corporeally compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than corporeally compounded sensory contact; and they should not search for it in mentally compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than mentally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—visually compounded sensory contact, aurally compounded sensory contact, nasally compounded sensory contact, lingually compounded sensory contact, corporeally compounded sensory contact, mentally compounded sensory contact, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact; they should not search for it in feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact; [F.131.a] they should not search for it in feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact; they should not search for it in feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact; they should not search for it in feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact; and they should not search for it in feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics.

- 16.136 “Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the earth element, nor should they search for it in anything other than the earth element; they should not search for it in the water element, nor should they search for it in anything other than the water element; they should not search for it in the fire element, [F.131.b] nor should they search for it in anything other than the fire element; they should not search for it in the wind element, nor should they search for it in anything other than the wind element; they should not search for it in the space element, nor should they search for it in anything other than the space element; and they should not search for it in the consciousness element, nor should they search for it in anything other than the consciousness element. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the earth element, the water element, the fire element, the wind element, the space element, the consciousness element, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics.

16.137 “Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in ignorance, nor should they search for it in anything other than ignorance; they should not search for it in formative predispositions, nor should they search for it in anything other than formative predispositions; they should not search for it in consciousness, nor should they search for it in anything other than consciousness; they should not search for it in name and form, nor should they search for it in anything other than name and form; they should not search for it in the six sense fields, nor should they search for it in anything other than the six sense fields; they should not search for it in sensory contact, nor should they search for it in anything other than sensory contact; they should not search for it in sensation, nor should they search for it in anything other than sensation; [F.132.a] they should not search for it in craving, nor should they search for it in anything other than craving; they should not search for it in grasping, nor should they search for it in anything other than grasping; they should not search for it in the rebirth process, nor should they search for it in anything other than the rebirth process; they should not search for it in birth, nor should they search for it in anything other than birth; and they should not search for it in aging and death, nor should they search for it in anything other than aging and death. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—ignorance, formative predispositions, consciousness, name and form, the six sense fields, sensory contact, sensation, craving, grasping, the rebirth process, birth, aging and death, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics.

16.138 “Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the perfection of generosity, nor should they search for it in anything other than the perfection of generosity; they should not search for it in the perfection of ethical discipline, nor should they search for it in anything other than the perfection of ethical discipline; they should not search for it in the perfection of tolerance, nor should they search for it in anything other than the perfection of tolerance; they should not search for it in the perfection of perseverance, nor should they search [F.132.b] for it in anything other than the perfection of perseverance; they should not search for it in the perfection of meditative concentration, nor should they search for it in anything other than the perfection of meditative concentration; and they should not search for it in the perfection of wisdom, nor should they search for it in anything other than the perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, the perfection of wisdom, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics.

- 16.139 “Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the emptiness of internal phenomena, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of internal phenomena; they should not search for it in the emptiness of external phenomena, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of external phenomena; they should not search for it in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; they should not search for it in the emptiness of emptiness, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of emptiness; they should not search for it in the emptiness of great extent, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of great extent; they should not search for it in the emptiness of ultimate reality, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of ultimate reality; they should not search [F.133.a] for it in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; they should not search for it in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; they should not search for it in the emptiness of the unlimited, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of the unlimited; they should not search for it in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; they should not search for it in the emptiness of nonexclusion, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of nonexclusion; they should not search for it in the emptiness of inherent nature, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of inherent nature; they should not search for it in the emptiness of all phenomena, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of all phenomena; they should not search for it in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; they should not search for it in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; they should not search for it in the emptiness of nonentities, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of nonentities; they should not search for it in the emptiness of essential nature, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of essential nature; and they should not search for it in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of [F.133.b] emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics.

- 16.140 “Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the applications of mindfulness, nor should they search for it in anything other than the applications of mindfulness. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the applications of mindfulness, the bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the correct exertions, [F.134.a] nor should they search for it in anything other than the correct exertions. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the correct exertions, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the supports for miraculous ability, nor should they search for it in anything other than the supports for miraculous ability. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the supports for miraculous ability, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the faculties, nor should they search for it in anything other than the faculties. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the faculties, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings [F.134.b] should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the powers, nor should they search for it in anything other than the powers. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the powers, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the branches of enlightenment, nor should they search for it in anything other than the branches of enlightenment. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the branches of enlightenment, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the noble eightfold path, nor should they search for it in anything other than the noble eightfold path. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the noble eightfold path, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, [F.135.a] unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics.

- 16.141 “Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the truths of the noble ones, nor should they search for it in anything other than the truths of the noble ones. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the truths of the noble ones, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the meditative concentrations, nor should they search for it in anything other than the meditative concentrations. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the meditative concentrations, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the immeasurable attitudes, nor should they search for it in anything other than the immeasurable attitudes. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the immeasurable attitudes, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, [F.135.b] and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the formless absorptions, nor should they search for it in anything other than the formless absorptions. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the formless absorptions, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the liberations, nor should they search for it in anything other than the liberations. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the liberations, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the serial steps of meditative absorption, nor should they search [F.136.a] for it in anything other than the serial steps of meditative absorption. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the serial steps of meditative absorption, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, nor should they search for it in anything other than the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—

are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the extrasensory powers, nor should they search for it in anything other than the extrasensory powers. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the extrasensory powers, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking [F.136.b]—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the meditative stabilities, nor should they search for it in anything other than the meditative stabilities. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the meditative stabilities, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the dhāraṇī gateways, nor should they search for it in anything other than the dhāraṇī gateways. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the dhāraṇī gateways, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics.

- 16.142 “Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the powers of the tathāgatas, nor should they search for it in anything other than the powers of the tathāgatas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the powers [F.137.a] of the tathāgatas, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the fearlessnesses, nor should they search for it in anything other than the fearlessnesses. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the fearlessnesses, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the kinds of exact knowledge, nor should they search for it in anything other than the kinds of exact knowledge. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the kinds of exact knowledge, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom [F.137.b] in great loving kindness, nor should they search for it in anything other than great loving kindness. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—great loving kindness, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in great compassion, nor should they search for it in anything other than great compassion. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—great compassion, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the distinct qualities of the buddhas, nor should they search for it in anything other than the distinct qualities of the buddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the distinct qualities of the buddhas, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics.

- 16.143 “Moreover, [F.138.a] Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in knowledge of all the dharmas, nor should they search for it in anything other than knowledge of all the dharmas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—knowledge of all the dharmas, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in the knowledge of the aspects of the path, nor should they search for it in anything other than the knowledge of the aspects of the path. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—the knowledge of the aspects of the path, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics. Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings should not search for the perfection of wisdom in all-aspect omniscience, nor should they search for it in anything other than all-aspect omniscience. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena—all-aspect omniscience, bodhisattvas, the perfection of wisdom, and the act of seeking—are neither [F.138.b] conjoined nor disjoined, and are immaterial, impossible to indicate, unimpeded, and have only one defining characteristic, which is to say, they are without defining characteristics.

- 16.144 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because physical forms are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than physical forms; the real nature of physical forms is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of physical forms; and the reality of physical forms is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of physical forms. Feelings are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings; the real nature of feelings is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings; and the reality of feelings is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings. Perceptions are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than perceptions; the real nature of perceptions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of perceptions; and the reality of perceptions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of perceptions. Formative predispositions are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than formative predispositions; the real nature of formative predispositions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of formative predispositions; and the reality of formative predispositions [F.139.a] is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of formative predispositions. Consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than consciousness; the real nature of consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of consciousness; and the reality of consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of consciousness.

16.145 “The eyes are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the eyes; the real nature of the eyes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the eyes; and the reality of the eyes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the eyes. The ears are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the ears; the real nature of the ears is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the ears; and the reality of the ears is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the ears. The nose is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the nose; the real nature of the nose is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the nose; and the reality of the nose is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the nose. [F.139.b] The tongue is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the tongue; the real nature of the tongue is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the tongue; and the reality of the tongue is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the tongue. The body is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the body; the real nature of the body is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the body; and the reality of the body is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the body. The mental faculty is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the mental faculty; the real nature of the mental faculty is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the mental faculty; and the reality of the mental faculty is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the mental faculty.

16.146 “Sights are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than sights; the real nature of sights is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of sights; and the reality of sights is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of sights. Sounds are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than sounds; the real nature of sounds is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection [F.140.a] of wisdom other than the real nature of sounds; and the reality of sounds is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of sounds. Odors are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than odors; the real nature of odors is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of odors; and the reality of odors is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of odors. Tastes are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than tastes; the real nature of tastes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of tastes; and the reality of tastes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of tastes. Tangibles are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than tangibles; the real nature of tangibles is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of tangibles; and the reality of tangibles is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of tangibles. Mental phenomena are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than mental phenomena; the real nature of mental phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of mental phenomena; and the reality of mental phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom [F.140.b] other than the reality of mental phenomena.

- 16.147 “Visual consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than visual consciousness; the real nature of visual consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of visual consciousness; and the reality of visual consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of visual consciousness. Auditory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than auditory consciousness; the real nature of auditory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of auditory consciousness; and the reality of auditory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of auditory consciousness. Olfactory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than olfactory consciousness; the real nature of olfactory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of olfactory consciousness; and the reality of olfactory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of olfactory consciousness. Gustatory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than gustatory consciousness; the real nature of gustatory consciousness [F.141.a] is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of gustatory consciousness; and the reality of gustatory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of gustatory consciousness. Tactile consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than tactile consciousness; the real nature of tactile consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of tactile consciousness; and the reality of tactile consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of tactile consciousness. Mental consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than mental consciousness; the real nature of mental consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of mental consciousness; and the reality of mental consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of mental consciousness.

- 16.148 “Visually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than visually compounded sensory contact; the real nature of visually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of visually compounded sensory contact; and the reality of visually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection [F.141.b] of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of visually compounded sensory contact. Aurally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than aurally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of aurally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of aurally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of aurally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of aurally compounded sensory contact. Nasally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than nasally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of nasally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of nasally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of nasally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of nasally compounded sensory contact. Lingually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than lingually compounded sensory contact; the real nature of lingually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of lingually compounded sensory contact; and the reality of lingually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of lingually compounded sensory contact. Corporeally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than corporeally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact [F.142.a] is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of corporeally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of corporeally compounded sensory contact. Mentally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than mentally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of mentally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of mentally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of mentally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of mentally compounded sensory contact.

- 16.149 “Feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact [F.142.b] is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than [F.143.a] feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact. [B11]

- 16.150 “The earth element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the earth element; the real nature of the earth element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the earth element; and the reality of the earth element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the earth element. The water element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom [F.143.b] other than the water element; the real nature of the water element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the water element; and the reality of the water element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the water element.

The fire element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the fire element; the real nature of the fire element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the fire element; and the reality of the fire element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the fire element. The wind element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the wind element; the real nature of the wind element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the wind element; and the reality of the wind element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the wind element. The space element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the space element; the real nature of the space element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the space element; and the reality of the space element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the space element. The consciousness element [F.144.a] is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the consciousness element; the real nature of the consciousness element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the consciousness element; and the reality of the consciousness element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the consciousness element.

- 16.151 “Ignorance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than ignorance; the real nature of ignorance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of ignorance; and the reality of ignorance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of ignorance. Formative predispositions are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than formative predispositions; the real nature of formative predispositions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of formative predispositions; and the reality of formative predispositions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of formative predispositions. Consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than consciousness; the real nature of consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of consciousness; and the reality of consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom [F.144.b] other than the reality of consciousness. Name and form are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than

name and form; the real nature of name and form is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of name and form; and the reality of name and form is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of name and form. The six sense fields are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the six sense fields; the real nature of the six sense fields is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the six sense fields; and the reality of the six sense fields is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the six sense fields. Sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than sensory contact; the real nature of sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of sensory contact; and the reality of sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of sensory contact. Sensation is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than sensation; the real nature of sensation is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of sensation; and the reality of sensation is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of [F.145.a] sensation. Craving is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than craving; the real nature of craving is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of craving; and the reality of craving is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of craving. Grasping is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than grasping; the real nature of grasping is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of grasping; and the reality of grasping is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of grasping. The rebirth process is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the rebirth process; the real nature of the rebirth process is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the rebirth process; and the reality of the rebirth process is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the rebirth process. Birth is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than birth; the real nature of birth is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of birth; and the reality of birth is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of birth. Aging and death are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than [F.145.b] aging and death; the real nature of aging and death is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of aging and death; and the reality of aging and death is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of aging and death.

- 16.152 “The perfection of generosity is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of generosity; the real nature of the perfection of generosity is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of generosity; and the reality of the perfection of generosity is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the perfection of generosity. The perfection of ethical discipline is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of ethical discipline; the real nature of the perfection of ethical discipline is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of ethical discipline; and the reality of the perfection of ethical discipline is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the perfection of ethical discipline. The perfection of tolerance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of tolerance; the real nature of the perfection of tolerance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of tolerance; and the reality of the perfection of tolerance [F.146.a] is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the perfection of tolerance. The perfection of perseverance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of perseverance; the real nature of the perfection of perseverance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of perseverance; and the reality of the perfection of perseverance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the perfection of perseverance. The perfection of meditative concentration is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of meditative concentration; the real nature of the perfection of meditative concentration is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of meditative concentration; and the reality of the perfection of meditative concentration is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the perfection of meditative concentration. The perfection of wisdom is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of wisdom; the real nature of the perfection of wisdom is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of wisdom; and the reality of the perfection of wisdom is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than [F.146.b] the reality of the perfection of wisdom.

- 16.153 “The emptiness of internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of internal phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of internal phenomena. The emptiness of external phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of external phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of external phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of external phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of external phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of external phenomena. The emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. The emptiness of emptiness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of emptiness; the real nature of the emptiness of emptiness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of emptiness; and the reality of the emptiness [F.147.a] of emptiness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of emptiness. The emptiness of great extent is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of great extent; the real nature of the emptiness of great extent is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of great extent; and the reality of the emptiness of great extent is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of great extent. The emptiness of ultimate reality is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of ultimate reality; the real nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality; and the reality of the emptiness of ultimate reality is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of ultimate reality. The emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. The emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom [F.147.b] other than the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. The emptiness of the unlimited is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of the unlimited; the real nature of the emptiness of the unlimited is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of the unlimited; and the reality of the emptiness of the unlimited is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of the unlimited. The emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; the real nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; and the reality of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. The emptiness of nonexclusion is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of nonexclusion; the real nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion is not the perfection of [F.148.a] wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion; and the reality of the emptiness of nonexclusion is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of nonexclusion. The emptiness of inherent nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of inherent nature; the real nature of the emptiness of inherent nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of inherent nature; and the reality of the emptiness of inherent nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of inherent nature. The emptiness of all phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of all phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of all phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of all phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of all phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of all phenomena. The emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; the real nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; and the reality of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not the perfection of wisdom, [F.148.b] nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. The emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; the real nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; and the reality of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. The emptiness of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of nonentities; the real nature of the emptiness of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of nonentities; and the reality of the emptiness of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of nonentities. The emptiness of essential nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of essential nature; the real nature of the emptiness of essential nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of essential nature; and the reality of the emptiness of essential nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of essential nature. The emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom [F.149.a] other than the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the real nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; and the reality of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

16.154 “The applications of mindfulness are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the applications of mindfulness; the real nature of the applications of mindfulness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the applications of mindfulness; and the reality of the applications of mindfulness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the applications of mindfulness. The correct exertions are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the correct exertions; the real nature of the correct exertions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the correct exertions; and the reality of the correct exertions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the correct exertions. The supports for miraculous ability are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the supports for miraculous ability; the real nature of the supports for miraculous ability is not the perfection of wisdom, [F.149.b] nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the supports for miraculous ability; and the reality of the supports for miraculous ability is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the supports for miraculous ability. The faculties are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the faculties; the real nature of the faculties is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the faculties; and the reality of the faculties is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the faculties. The powers are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the powers; the real nature of the powers is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the powers; and the reality of the powers is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the powers. The branches of enlightenment are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the branches of enlightenment; the real nature of the branches of enlightenment is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the branches of enlightenment; and the reality of the branches of enlightenment is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the branches of enlightenment. The noble eightfold path is not the perfection of wisdom, [F.150.a] nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the noble eightfold path; the real nature of the noble eightfold path is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the noble eightfold path; and the reality of the noble eightfold path is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the noble eightfold path.

- 16.155 “The truths of the noble ones are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the truths of the noble ones; the real nature of the truths of the noble ones is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the truths of the noble ones; and the reality of the truths of the noble ones is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the truths of the noble ones. The meditative concentrations are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the meditative concentrations; the real nature of the meditative concentrations is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the meditative concentrations; and the reality of the meditative concentrations is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the meditative concentrations. The immeasurable attitudes are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the immeasurable attitudes; the real nature of the immeasurable [F.150.b] attitudes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the immeasurable attitudes; and the reality of the immeasurable attitudes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the immeasurable attitudes. The formless absorptions are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the formless absorptions; the real nature of the formless absorptions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the formless absorptions; and the reality of the formless absorptions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the formless absorptions. The liberations are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the liberations; the real nature of the liberations is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the liberations; and the reality of the liberations is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the liberations. The serial steps of meditative absorption are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the serial steps of meditative absorption; the real nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption is not the perfection of wisdom, [F.151.a] nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption; and the reality of the serial steps of meditative absorption is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the serial steps of meditative absorption. The emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; the real nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; and the reality of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. The extrasensory powers are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the extrasensory powers; the real nature of the extrasensory powers is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the extrasensory powers; and the reality of the extrasensory powers is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the extrasensory powers. The meditative stabilities are not [F.151.b] the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the meditative stabilities; the real nature of the meditative stabilities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the meditative stabilities; and the reality of the meditative stabilities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the meditative stabilities. The dhāraṇī gateways are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the dhāraṇī gateways; the real nature of the dhāraṇī gateways is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the dhāraṇī gateways; and the reality of the dhāraṇī gateways is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the dhāraṇī gateways. The powers of the tathāgatas are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the powers of the tathāgatas; the real nature of the powers of the tathāgatas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the powers of the tathāgatas; and the reality of the powers of the tathāgatas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the powers of the tathāgatas. The fearlessnesses are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the fearlessnesses; the real nature of the fearlessnesses is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than [F.152.a] the real nature of the fearlessnesses; and the reality of the fearlessnesses is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the fearlessnesses. The kinds of exact knowledge are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the kinds of exact knowledge; the real nature of the kinds of exact knowledge is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the kinds of exact knowledge; and the reality of the kinds of exact knowledge is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the kinds of exact knowledge. Great loving kindness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than great loving kindness; the real nature of great loving kindness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of great loving kindness; and the reality of great loving kindness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of great loving kindness. Great compassion is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than great compassion; the real nature of great compassion is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of great compassion; and the reality of great compassion is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of great compassion. The distinct qualities of the buddhas are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the distinct qualities of the buddhas; the real nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas; and the reality of the distinct qualities of the buddhas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom [F.152.b] other than the reality of the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

- 16.156 “knowledge of all the dharmas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than knowledge of all the dharmas; the real nature of knowledge of all the dharmas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of knowledge of all the dharmas; and the reality of knowledge of all the dharmas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of knowledge of all the dharmas. The knowledge of the aspects of the path is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the knowledge of the aspects of the path; the real nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path; and the reality of the knowledge of the aspects of the path is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the knowledge of the aspects of the path. All-aspect omniscience is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than all-aspect omniscience; the real nature of all-aspect omniscience is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of all-aspect omniscience; and the reality of all-aspect omniscience is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of all-aspect omniscience. [B12] [F.153.a]

- 16.157 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all those phenomena do not exist and cannot be apprehended. Since all phenomena do not exist and cannot be apprehended, physical forms are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than physical forms; the real nature of physical forms is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of physical forms; and the reality of physical forms is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of physical forms. Feelings are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings; the real nature of feelings is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings; and the reality of feelings is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings. Perceptions are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than perceptions; the real nature of perceptions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of perceptions; and the reality of perceptions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of perceptions. Formative predispositions are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than formative predispositions; the real nature of formative predispositions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of formative predispositions; and the reality of formative predispositions is not the perfection of [F.153.b] wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of formative predispositions. Consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than consciousness; the real nature of consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of consciousness; and the reality of consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of consciousness.

16.158 “The eyes are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the eyes; the real nature of the eyes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the eyes; and the reality of the eyes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the eyes. The ears are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the ears; the real nature of the ears is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the ears; and the reality of the ears is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the ears. The nose is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the nose; the real nature of the nose is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the nose; and the reality of the nose is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the nose. The tongue [F.154.a] is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the tongue; the real nature of the tongue is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the tongue; and the reality of the tongue is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the tongue. The body is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the body; the real nature of the body is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the body; and the reality of the body is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the body. The mental faculty is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the mental faculty; the real nature of the mental faculty is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the mental faculty; and the reality of the mental faculty is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the mental faculty.

16.159 “Sights are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than sights; the real nature of sights is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of sights; and the reality of sights is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of sights. Sounds are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than sounds; the real nature of sounds is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other [F.154.b] than the real nature of sounds; and the reality of sounds is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of sounds. Odors are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than odors; the real nature of odors is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of odors; and the reality of odors is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of odors. Tastes are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than tastes; the real nature of tastes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of tastes; and the reality of tastes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of tastes. Tangibles are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than tangibles; the real nature of tangibles is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of tangibles; and the reality of tangibles is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of tangibles. Mental phenomena are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than mental phenomena; the real nature of mental phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of mental phenomena; and the reality of mental phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of mental phenomena.

- 16.160 “Visual consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection [F.155.a] of wisdom other than visual consciousness; the real nature of visual consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of visual consciousness; and the reality of visual consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of visual consciousness. Auditory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than auditory consciousness; the real nature of auditory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of auditory consciousness; and the reality of auditory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of auditory consciousness. Olfactory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than olfactory consciousness; the real nature of olfactory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of olfactory consciousness; and the reality of olfactory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of olfactory consciousness. Gustatory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than gustatory consciousness; the real nature of gustatory consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of gustatory consciousness; and the reality of gustatory [F.155.b] consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of gustatory consciousness. Tactile consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than tactile consciousness; the real nature of tactile consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of tactile consciousness; and the reality of tactile consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of tactile consciousness. Mental consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than mental consciousness; the real nature of mental consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of mental consciousness; and the reality of mental consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of mental consciousness.

- 16.161 “Visually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than visually compounded sensory contact; the real nature of visually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of visually compounded sensory contact; and the reality of visually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of visually compounded sensory contact. Aurally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom [F.156.a] other than aurally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of aurally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of aurally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of aurally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of aurally compounded sensory contact. Nasally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than nasally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of nasally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of nasally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of nasally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of nasally compounded sensory contact. Lingually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than lingually compounded sensory contact; the real nature of lingually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of lingually compounded sensory contact; and the reality of lingually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of lingually compounded sensory contact. Corporeally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than corporeally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of corporeally compounded [F.156.b] sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of corporeally compounded sensory contact. Mentally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than mentally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of mentally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of mentally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of mentally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of mentally compounded sensory contact.

- 16.162 “Feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is [F.157.a] the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact [F.157.b] is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. Feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; the real nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; and the reality of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact.

- 16.163 “The earth element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the earth element; the real nature of the earth element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the earth element; and the reality of the earth element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the earth element. The water element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the water element; the real nature of the water element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the water element; and the reality of the water element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the water element. The fire

element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the fire element; the real nature of the fire element [F.158.a] is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the fire element; and the reality of the fire element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the fire element. The wind element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the wind element; the real nature of the wind element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the wind element; and the reality of the wind element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the wind element. The space element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the space element; the real nature of the space element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the space element; and the reality of the space element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the space element. The consciousness element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the consciousness element; the real nature of the consciousness element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the consciousness element; and the reality of the consciousness element is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the consciousness element. [F.158.b]

- 16.164 “Ignorance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than ignorance; the real nature of ignorance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of ignorance; and the reality of ignorance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of ignorance. Formative predispositions are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than formative predispositions; the real nature of formative predispositions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of formative predispositions; and the reality of formative predispositions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of formative predispositions. Consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than consciousness; the real nature of consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of consciousness; and the reality of consciousness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of consciousness. Name and form are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than name and form; the real nature of name and form is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of name and form; and the reality of name and form is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of name and form. [F.159.a] The six sense fields are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the six sense fields; the real nature of the six sense fields is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the six sense fields; and the reality of the six sense fields is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the six sense fields. Sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than sensory contact; the real nature of sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of sensory contact; and the reality of sensory contact is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of sensory contact. Sensation is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than sensation; the real nature of sensation is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of sensation; and the reality of sensation is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of sensation. Craving is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than craving; the real nature of craving is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of craving; and the reality of craving is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of craving. Grasping is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than grasping; the real nature of grasping [F.159.b] is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of grasping; and the reality of grasping is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of grasping. The rebirth process is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the rebirth process; the real nature of the rebirth process is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the rebirth process; and the reality of the rebirth process is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the rebirth process. Birth is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than birth; the real nature of birth is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of birth; and the reality of birth is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of birth. Aging and death are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than aging and death; the real nature of aging and death is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of aging and death; and the reality of aging and death is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of aging and death.

- 16.165 “The perfection of generosity is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of generosity; the real nature of the perfection of generosity is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of generosity; and the reality [F.160.a] of the perfection of generosity is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the perfection of generosity. The perfection of ethical discipline is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of ethical discipline; the real nature of the perfection of ethical discipline is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of ethical discipline; and the reality of the perfection of ethical discipline is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the perfection of ethical discipline. The perfection of tolerance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of tolerance; the real nature of the perfection of tolerance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of tolerance; and the reality of the perfection of tolerance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the perfection of tolerance. The perfection of perseverance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of perseverance; the real nature of the perfection of perseverance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of perseverance; and the reality of the perfection of perseverance is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of [F.160.b] the perfection of perseverance. The perfection of meditative concentration is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of meditative concentration; the real nature of the perfection of meditative concentration is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of meditative concentration; and the reality of the perfection of meditative concentration is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the perfection of meditative concentration. The perfection of wisdom is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the perfection of wisdom; the real nature of the perfection of wisdom is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the perfection of wisdom; and the reality of the perfection of wisdom is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the perfection of wisdom.

16.166 “The emptiness of internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of internal phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of internal phenomena. The emptiness of external phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of external phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of external phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, [F.161.a] nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of external phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of external phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of external phenomena. The emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. The emptiness of emptiness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of emptiness; the real nature of the emptiness of emptiness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of emptiness; and the reality of the emptiness of emptiness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of emptiness. The emptiness of great extent is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of great extent; the real nature of the emptiness of great extent is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of great extent; and the reality of the emptiness of great extent is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of great extent. The emptiness of ultimate reality is not the perfection of wisdom, [F.161.b] nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of ultimate reality; the real nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality; and the reality of the emptiness of ultimate reality is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of ultimate reality. The emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. The emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. The emptiness of the unlimited is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of the unlimited; the real nature of the emptiness of the unlimited is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of [F.162.a] the emptiness of the unlimited; and the reality of the emptiness of the unlimited is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of the unlimited. The emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; the real nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; and the reality of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. The emptiness of nonexclusion is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of nonexclusion; the real nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion; and the reality of the emptiness of nonexclusion is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of nonexclusion. The emptiness of inherent nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of inherent nature; the real nature of the emptiness of inherent nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of inherent nature; and the reality of the emptiness of inherent nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness [F.162.b] of inherent nature. The emptiness of all phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of all phenomena; the real nature of the emptiness of all phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of all phenomena; and the reality of the emptiness of all phenomena is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of all phenomena. The emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; the real nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; and the reality of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. The emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; the real nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; and the reality of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. The emptiness of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of nonentities; the real nature of [F.163.a] the emptiness of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of nonentities; and the reality of the emptiness of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of nonentities. The emptiness of essential nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of essential nature; the real nature of the emptiness of essential nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of essential nature; and the reality of the emptiness of essential nature is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of essential nature. The emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the real nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; and the reality of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

16.167 “The applications of mindfulness are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the applications of mindfulness; the real nature of the applications of mindfulness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than [F.163.b] the real nature of the applications of mindfulness; and the reality of the applications of mindfulness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the applications of mindfulness. The correct exertions are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the correct exertions; the real nature of the correct exertions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the correct exertions; and the reality of the correct exertions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the correct exertions. The supports for miraculous ability are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the supports for miraculous ability; the real nature of the supports for miraculous ability is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the supports for miraculous ability; and the reality of the supports for miraculous ability is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the supports for miraculous ability. The faculties are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the faculties; the real nature of the faculties is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the faculties; and the reality of the faculties is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the faculties. The powers are not the perfection [F.164.a] of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the powers; the real nature of the powers is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the powers; and the reality of the powers is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the powers. The branches of enlightenment are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the branches of enlightenment; the real nature of the branches of enlightenment is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the branches of enlightenment; and the reality of the branches of enlightenment is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the branches of enlightenment. The noble eightfold path is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the noble eightfold path; the real nature of the noble eightfold path is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the noble eightfold path; and the reality of the noble eightfold path is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the noble eightfold path.

- 16.168 “The truths of the noble ones are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the truths of the noble ones; the real nature of the truths of the noble ones is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection [F.164.b] of wisdom other than the real nature of the truths of the noble ones; and the reality of the truths of the noble ones is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the truths of the noble ones. The meditative concentrations are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the meditative concentrations; the real nature of the meditative concentrations is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the meditative concentrations; and the reality of the meditative concentrations is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the meditative concentrations. The immeasurable attitudes are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the immeasurable attitudes; the real nature of the immeasurable attitudes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the immeasurable attitudes; and the reality of the immeasurable attitudes is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the immeasurable attitudes. The formless absorptions are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the formless absorptions; the real nature of the formless absorptions is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the formless absorptions; and the reality of the formless absorptions is not the perfection of wisdom, [F.165.a] nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the formless absorptions. The liberations are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the liberations; the real nature of the liberations is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the liberations; and the reality of the liberations is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the liberations. The serial steps of meditative absorption are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the serial steps of meditative absorption; the real nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption; and the reality of the serial steps of meditative absorption is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the serial steps of meditative absorption. The emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; the real nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the emptiness, [F.165.b] signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; and the reality of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. The extrasensory powers are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the extrasensory powers; the real nature of the extrasensory powers is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the extrasensory powers; and the reality of the extrasensory powers is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the extrasensory powers. The meditative stabilities are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the meditative stabilities; the real nature of the meditative stabilities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the meditative stabilities; and the reality of the meditative stabilities is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the meditative stabilities. The dhāraṇī gateways are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the dhāraṇī gateways; the real nature of the dhāraṇī gateways is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the dhāraṇī gateways; and the reality of the dhāraṇī gateways is not the perfection [F.166.a] of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the dhāraṇī gateways. The powers of the tathāgatas are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the powers of the tathāgatas; the real nature of the powers of the tathāgatas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the powers of the tathāgatas; and the reality of the powers of the tathāgatas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the powers of the tathāgatas. The fearlessnesses are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the fearlessnesses; the real nature of the fearlessnesses is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the fearlessnesses; and the reality of the fearlessnesses is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the fearlessnesses. The kinds of exact knowledge are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the kinds of exact knowledge; the real nature of the kinds of exact knowledge is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the kinds of exact knowledge; and the reality of the kinds of exact knowledge is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the kinds of [F.166.b] exact knowledge. Great loving kindness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than great loving kindness; the real nature of great loving kindness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of great loving kindness; and the reality of great loving kindness is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of great loving kindness. Great compassion is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than great compassion; the real nature of great compassion is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of great compassion; and the reality of great compassion is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of great compassion. The distinct qualities of the buddhas are not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the distinct qualities of the buddhas; the real nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas; and the reality of the distinct qualities of the buddhas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

- 16.169 “Knowledge of all the dharmas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than knowledge of all the dharmas; the real nature of knowledge of all the dharmas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than [F.167.a] the real nature of knowledge of all the dharmas; and the reality of knowledge of all the dharmas is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of knowledge of all the dharmas. The knowledge of the aspects of the path is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the knowledge of the aspects of the path; the real nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path; and the reality of the knowledge of the aspects of the path is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of the knowledge of the aspects of the path. All-aspect omniscience is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than all-aspect omniscience; the real nature of all-aspect omniscience is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the real nature of all-aspect omniscience; and the reality of all-aspect omniscience is not the perfection of wisdom, nor is the perfection of wisdom other than the reality of all-aspect omniscience.” [B13]

16.170 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, said to the elder Subhūti, “Venerable monk Subhūti, this perfection of the bodhisattva great beings is great. Such is⁶⁶⁹ the perfection of wisdom. Venerable monk Subhūti, this perfection of bodhisattva [F.167.b] great beings is immeasurable. Such is the perfection of wisdom. Venerable monk Subhūti, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded.⁶⁷⁰ Such is the perfection of wisdom. Venerable monk Subhūti, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is limitless.⁶⁷¹ Such is the perfection of wisdom.⁶⁷²

16.171 “Training in it, those who have entered the stream have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of having entered the stream; once-returners have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of once-returner; non-returners have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of non-returner; arhats have attained, will attain, and are attaining arhatship; and pratyekabuddhas have awakened, will awaken, and are awakening to individual enlightenment. Training in it, bodhisattva great beings, having brought beings to maturity and refined the buddhafi elds, have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.”

16.172 “Kauśika, it is so, it is so!” replied Subhūti. “This perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great. Such is the perfection of wisdom. This perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. Such is the perfection of wisdom. This perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. Such is the [F.168.a] perfection of wisdom. This perfection of bodhisattva great beings is limitless. Such is the perfection of wisdom.

16.173 “Training in it, those who have entered the stream have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of having entered the stream; once-returners have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of once-returner; non-returners have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of non-returner; arhats have attained, will attain, and are attaining arhatship;

and pratyekabuddhas have awakened, will awaken, and are awakening to individual enlightenment. Training in it, bodhisattva great beings, having brought beings to maturity and refined the buddhafi elds, have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

16.174 “Kauśika, since physical forms are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of physical forms cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of feelings cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since perceptions are great in extent, this perfection of [F.168.b] bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of perceptions cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since formative predispositions are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since consciousness is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of consciousness cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

16.175 “Kauśika, since the eyes are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the eyes cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the ears are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the ears cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the nose is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the nose cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the tongue is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the tongue cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the body is great in extent, [F.169.a] this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the body cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the mental faculty is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the mental faculty cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

16.176 “Kauśika, since sights are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of sights cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since sounds are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of sounds cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since odors are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of odors cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since tastes are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of tastes cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since tangibles are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of tangibles cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. [F.169.b] Kauśika, since mental phenomena are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of mental phenomena cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

16.177 “Kauśika, since visual consciousness is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of visual consciousness cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since auditory consciousness is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of auditory consciousness cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since olfactory consciousness is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of olfactory consciousness cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since gustatory consciousness is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of gustatory consciousness cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since tactile consciousness is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of tactile consciousness cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle [F.170.a] cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since mental consciousness is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of mental consciousness cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

- 16.178 “Kauśika, since visually compounded sensory contact is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since aurally compounded sensory contact is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since nasally compounded sensory contact is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since lingually compounded sensory contact is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since corporeally compounded sensory contact is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of corporeally compounded sensory contact [F.170.b] cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since mentally compounded sensory contact is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

16.179 “Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded [F.171.a] sensory contact are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

16.180 “Kauśika, since the earth element is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the earth element cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the water element is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the water element cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the fire element is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the fire element cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the wind element is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the wind element cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be [F.171.b] apprehended. Kauśika, since the space element is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the space element cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the consciousness element is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the consciousness element cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

- 16.181 “Kauśika, since ignorance is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of ignorance cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since formative predispositions are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since consciousness is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of consciousness cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since name and form are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of name and form cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the six sense fields [F.172.a] are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the six sense fields cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since sensory contact is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of sensory contact cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since sensation is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of sensation cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since craving is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of craving cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since grasping is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of grasping cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the rebirth process is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the rebirth process cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle [F.172.b] cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since birth is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of birth cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since aging and death are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of aging and death cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

- 16.182 “Kauśika, since the perfection of generosity is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the perfection of generosity cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the perfection of ethical discipline is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the perfection of ethical discipline cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the perfection of tolerance is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the perfection of tolerance cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the perfection of perseverance is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the perfection of perseverance cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

Kauśika, since the perfection of meditative concentration is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the perfection of meditative concentration cannot be apprehended, the future [F.173.a] limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the perfection of wisdom is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the perfection of wisdom cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

- 16.183 “Kauśika, since the emptiness of internal phenomena is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of internal phenomena cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of external phenomena is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of external phenomena cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of emptiness is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If [F.173.b] you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of emptiness cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of great extent is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of great extent cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of ultimate reality is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of ultimate reality cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of the unlimited is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of the unlimited cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings [F.174.a] is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of nonexclusion is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of nonexclusion cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of inherent nature is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of inherent nature cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of all phenomena is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of all phenomena cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. [F.174.b] Kauśika, since the emptiness of nonentities is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of nonentities cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of essential nature is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of essential nature cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

16.184 “Kauśika, since the applications of mindfulness are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the applications of mindfulness cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the correct exertions are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the correct exertions cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the supports for miraculous ability are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the supports for miraculous ability [F.175.a] cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the faculties are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the faculties cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the powers are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the powers cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the branches of enlightenment are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the branches of enlightenment cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the noble path is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the noble path cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

16.185 “Kauśika, since the truths of the noble ones are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the truths of the noble ones cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the meditative concentrations are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the meditative [F.175.b] concentrations cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the immeasurable attitudes are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the immeasurable attitudes cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the formless absorptions are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the formless absorptions cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the liberations are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the liberations cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the serial steps of meditative absorption are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the serial steps of meditative absorption cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the extrasensory powers [F.176.a] are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the extrasensory powers cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the meditative stabilities are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the meditative stabilities cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the dhāraṇī gateways are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the dhāraṇī gateways cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the powers of the tathāgatas are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the powers of the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the fearlessnesses are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the fearlessnesses cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the kinds of exact knowledge are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the kinds of exact knowledge cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since great loving kindness is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of great loving kindness cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since great [F.176.b] compassion is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of great compassion cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the distinct qualities of the buddhas are great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the distinct qualities of the buddhas cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

16.186 “Kauśika, since knowledge of all the dharmas is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of knowledge of all the dharmas cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the knowledge of the aspects of the path is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of the knowledge of the aspects of the path cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since all-aspect omniscience is great in extent, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the past limit of all-aspect omniscience cannot be apprehended, the future limit cannot be apprehended, and the middle cannot be apprehended.

16.187 “Therefore, Kauśika, the perfection of bodhisattva great beings is great in extent. Such is the perfection of wisdom.

16.188 “Kauśika, since physical forms are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva [F.177.a] great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of physical forms cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of physical forms cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, physical forms are immeasurable, and since physical forms are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since feelings are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of feelings cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of feelings cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, feelings are immeasurable, and since feelings are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since perceptions are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of perceptions cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of perceptions cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, perceptions are immeasurable, and since perceptions are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since formative predispositions are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, [F.177.b] formative predispositions are immeasurable, and since formative predispositions are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since consciousness is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, consciousness is immeasurable, and since consciousness is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable.

16.189 “Kauśika, since the eyes are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the eyes cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the eyes cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the eyes are immeasurable, and since the eyes are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the ears are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the ears cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the ears cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the ears are immeasurable, and since the ears are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the nose is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the nose [F.178.a] cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the nose cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the nose is immeasurable, and since the nose is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the tongue is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the tongue cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the tongue cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the tongue is immeasurable, and since the tongue is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the body is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the body cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the body cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the body is immeasurable, and since the body is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the mental faculty is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the mental faculty cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the mental faculty cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the mental faculty is immeasurable, and since the mental faculty is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable.

16.190 “Kauśika, since sights are immeasurable, this perfection of [F.178.b] bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of sights cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of sights cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, sights are immeasurable, and since sights are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since sounds are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of sounds cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of sounds cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, sounds are immeasurable, and since sounds are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since odors are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of odors cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of odors cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, odors are immeasurable, and since odors are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since tastes are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of tastes cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of tastes cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, tastes are immeasurable, and since tastes are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since tangibles are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of tangibles cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of tangibles cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, tangibles are immeasurable, and since tangibles are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since mental phenomena are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of mental phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of mental phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, mental phenomena are immeasurable, and since mental phenomena are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable.

- 16.191 “Kauśika, since visual consciousness is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of visual consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of visual consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, visual consciousness is immeasurable, and since visual consciousness is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since auditory consciousness is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of auditory consciousness [F.179.b] cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of auditory consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, auditory consciousness is immeasurable, and since auditory consciousness is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since olfactory consciousness is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of olfactory consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of olfactory consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, olfactory consciousness is immeasurable, and since olfactory consciousness is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since gustatory consciousness is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of gustatory consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of gustatory consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, gustatory consciousness is immeasurable, and since gustatory consciousness is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since tactile consciousness is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of tactile consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be [F.180.a] apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of tactile consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, tactile consciousness is immeasurable, and since tactile consciousness is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since mental consciousness is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of mental consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of mental consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, mental consciousness is immeasurable, and since mental consciousness is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable.

16.192 “Kauśika, since visually compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, visually compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, and since visually compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since aurally compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of [F.180.b] aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, aurally compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, and since aurally compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since nasally compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, nasally compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, and since nasally compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since lingually compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, lingually compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, and since lingually compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since corporeally compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, corporeally compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, and since corporeally compounded sensory contact [F.181.a] is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since mentally compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, mentally compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, and since mentally compounded sensory contact is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable.

- 16.193 “Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, and since feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact cannot [F.181.b] be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, and since feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, and since feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, and since feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory [F.182.a] contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, and since feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, and since feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. [B14]

- 16.194 “Kauśika, since the earth element is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the earth element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the earth element cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the earth element is immeasurable, and since the earth element is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the water [F.182.b] element is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the water element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the water element cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the water element is immeasurable, and since the water element is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the fire element is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the fire element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the fire element cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the fire element is immeasurable, and since the fire element is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the wind element is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the wind element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the wind element cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the wind element is immeasurable, and since the wind element is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the space element is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the space element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space [F.183.a] cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the space element cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the space element is immeasurable, and since the space element is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the consciousness element is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the consciousness element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the consciousness element cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the consciousness element is immeasurable, and since the consciousness element is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable.

- 16.195 “Kauśika, since ignorance is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of ignorance cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of ignorance cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, ignorance is immeasurable, and since ignorance is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since formative predispositions are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, formative [F.183.b] predispositions are immeasurable, and since formative predispositions are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since consciousness is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, consciousness is immeasurable, and since consciousness is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since name and form are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of name and form cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of name and form cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, name and form are immeasurable, and since name and form are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the six sense fields are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the six sense fields cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the six sense fields cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the six sense fields are immeasurable, and since the six sense fields are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since sensory contact is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva [F.184.a] great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, sensory contact is immeasurable, and since sensory contact is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since sensation is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of sensation cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of sensation cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, sensation is immeasurable, and since sensation is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since craving is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of craving cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of craving cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, craving is immeasurable, and since craving is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since grasping is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of grasping cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of grasping cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, grasping is [F.184.b] immeasurable, and since grasping is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the rebirth process is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the rebirth process cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the rebirth process cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the rebirth process is immeasurable, and since the rebirth process is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since birth is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of birth cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of birth cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, birth is immeasurable, and since birth is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since aging and death are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of aging and death cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of aging and death cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, aging and death are immeasurable, and since aging and death are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable.

- 16.196 “Kauśika, since the perfection of generosity is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the perfection of generosity cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure [F.185.a] of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the perfection of generosity cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the perfection of generosity is immeasurable, and since the perfection of generosity is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the perfection of ethical discipline is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the perfection of ethical discipline cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the perfection of ethical discipline cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the perfection of ethical discipline is immeasurable, and since the perfection of ethical discipline is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the perfection of tolerance is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the perfection of tolerance cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the perfection of tolerance cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the perfection of tolerance is immeasurable, and since the perfection of tolerance is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the perfection of perseverance is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the perfection of perseverance cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, [F.185.b] just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the perfection of perseverance cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the perfection of perseverance is immeasurable, and since the perfection of perseverance is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the perfection of meditative concentration is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the perfection of meditative concentration cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the perfection of meditative concentration cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the perfection of meditative concentration is immeasurable, and since the perfection of meditative concentration is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the perfection of wisdom cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the perfection of wisdom cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable, and since the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable.

- 16.197 “Kauśika, since the emptiness of internal phenomena is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of internal phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, [F.186.a] just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of internal phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of internal phenomena is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of internal phenomena is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of external phenomena is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of external phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of external phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of external phenomena is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of external phenomena is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of emptiness is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of emptiness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of emptiness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, [F.186.b] the emptiness of emptiness is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of emptiness is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of great extent is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of great extent cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of great extent cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of great extent is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of great extent is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of ultimate reality is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of ultimate reality cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of ultimate reality cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of ultimate reality is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of ultimate reality is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is immeasurable, [F.187.a] the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of the unlimited is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of the unlimited cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of the unlimited cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of the unlimited is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of the unlimited is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness [F.187.b] of that which has neither beginning nor end is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of nonexclusion is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of nonexclusion cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of nonexclusion cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of nonexclusion is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of nonexclusion is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of inherent nature is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of inherent nature cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of inherent nature cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of inherent nature is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of inherent nature is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of all phenomena is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of all phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of all phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of all phenomena is immeasurable, [F.188.a] and since the emptiness of all phenomena is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of nonentities is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of nonentities cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of nonentities cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of nonentities is immeasurable, [F.188.b] and since the emptiness of nonentities is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of essential nature is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of essential nature cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of essential nature cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of essential nature is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of essential nature is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is immeasurable, and since the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable.

16.198 “Kauśika, since the applications of mindfulness are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the applications of mindfulness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the applications of mindfulness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the applications of mindfulness [F.189.a] are immeasurable, and since the applications of mindfulness are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the correct exertions are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the correct exertions cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the correct exertions cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the correct exertions are immeasurable, and since the correct exertions are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the supports for miraculous ability are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the supports for miraculous ability cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the supports for miraculous ability cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the supports for miraculous ability are immeasurable, and since the supports for miraculous ability are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the faculties are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the faculties cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the faculties cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the faculties are immeasurable, and since the faculties are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the powers are immeasurable, [F.189.b] this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the powers cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the powers cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the powers are immeasurable, and since the powers are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the branches of enlightenment are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the branches of enlightenment cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the branches of enlightenment cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the branches of enlightenment are immeasurable, and since the branches of enlightenment are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the noble eightfold path is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the noble eightfold path cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the noble eightfold path cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the noble eightfold path is immeasurable, and since the noble eightfold path is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable.

- 16.199 “Kauśika, since the truths [F.190.a] of the noble ones are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the truths of the noble ones cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the truths of the noble ones cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the truths of the noble ones are immeasurable, and since the truths of the noble ones are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the meditative concentrations are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the meditative concentrations cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the meditative concentrations cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the meditative concentrations are immeasurable, and since the meditative concentrations are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since loving kindness is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of loving kindness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of loving kindness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, loving kindness is immeasurable, and since loving kindness is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since compassion is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If [F.190.b] you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of compassion cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of compassion cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, compassion is immeasurable, and since compassion is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since empathetic joy is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of empathetic joy cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of empathetic joy cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, empathetic joy is immeasurable, and since empathetic joy is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since equanimity is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of equanimity cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of equanimity cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, equanimity is immeasurable, and since equanimity is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the formless absorptions are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the formless absorptions cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure [F.191.a] of the formless absorptions cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the formless absorptions are immeasurable, and since the formless absorptions are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the liberations are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the liberations cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the liberations cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the liberations are immeasurable, and since the liberations are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the serial steps of meditative absorption are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the serial steps of meditative absorption cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the serial steps of meditative absorption cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the serial steps of meditative absorption are immeasurable, and since the serial steps of meditative absorption are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, [F.191.b] Kauśika, it is because the measure of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are immeasurable, and since the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the extrasensory powers are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the extrasensory powers cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the extrasensory powers cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the extrasensory powers are immeasurable, and since the extrasensory powers are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the meditative stabilities are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the meditative stabilities cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the meditative stabilities cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the meditative stabilities are immeasurable, and since the meditative stabilities are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the dhāraṇī gateways are immeasurable, this perfection of [F.192.a] bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the dhāraṇī gateways cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the dhāraṇī gateways cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the dhāraṇī gateways are immeasurable, and since the dhāraṇī gateways are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the powers of the tathāgatas are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the powers of the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the powers of the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the powers of the tathāgatas are immeasurable, and since the powers of the tathāgatas are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the fearlessnesses are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the fearlessnesses cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the fearlessnesses cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the fearlessnesses are immeasurable, and since the fearlessnesses are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the kinds of exact knowledge are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of [F.192.b] the kinds of exact knowledge cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the kinds of exact knowledge cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the kinds of exact knowledge are immeasurable, and since the kinds of exact knowledge are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since great loving kindness is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of great loving kindness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of great loving kindness cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, great loving kindness is immeasurable, and since great loving kindness is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since great compassion is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of great compassion cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of great compassion cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, great compassion is immeasurable, and since great compassion is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the distinct qualities of the buddhas are immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the distinct qualities of the buddhas cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the distinct qualities of the buddhas cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the distinct qualities of the buddhas are immeasurable, and since the distinct qualities of the buddhas are immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable.

- 16.200 “Kauśika, since knowledge of all the dharmas is immeasurable, this perfection of [F.193.a] bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of knowledge of all the dharmas cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of knowledge of all the dharmas cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, knowledge of all the dharmas is immeasurable, and since knowledge of all the dharmas is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since the knowledge of the aspects of the path is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of the knowledge of the aspects of the path cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of the knowledge of the aspects of the path cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is immeasurable, and since the knowledge of the aspects of the path is immeasurable, the perfection of wisdom is immeasurable. Kauśika, since all-aspect omniscience is immeasurable, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the measure of all-aspect omniscience cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the measure of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the measure of all-aspect omniscience cannot be apprehended. Since space is immeasurable, all-aspect omniscience is immeasurable, and since all-aspect omniscience is immeasurable, the perfection of [F.193.b] wisdom is immeasurable.

16.201 “Therefore, Kauśika, the perfection of bodhisattva great beings is immeasurable. Such is the perfection of wisdom. [B15]

16.202 “Kauśika, since physical forms are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary⁶⁷³ of physical forms cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of physical forms cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, physical forms are unbounded, and since physical forms are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since feelings are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of feelings cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of feelings cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, feelings are unbounded, and since feelings are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since perceptions are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of perceptions cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, [F.194.a] Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of perceptions cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, perceptions are unbounded, and since perceptions are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since formative predispositions are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, formative predispositions are unbounded, and since formative predispositions are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since consciousness is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, consciousness is unbounded, and since consciousness is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

- 16.203 “Kauśika, since the eyes are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the eyes cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as [F.194.b] the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the eyes cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the eyes are unbounded, and since the eyes are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the ears are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the ears cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the ears cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the ears are unbounded, and since the ears are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the nose is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the nose cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the nose cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the nose is unbounded, and since the nose is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the tongue is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the tongue cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the tongue cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the tongue is unbounded, and since [F.195.a] the tongue is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the body is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the body cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the body cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the body is unbounded, and since the body is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the mental faculty is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the mental faculty cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the mental faculty cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the mental faculty is unbounded, and since the mental faculty is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

- 16.204 “Kauśika, since sights are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of sights cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of sights cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, sights are unbounded, and since sights are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since sounds [F.195.b] are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of sounds cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of sounds cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, sounds are unbounded, and since sounds are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since odors are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of odors cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of odors cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, odors are unbounded, and since odors are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since tastes are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of tastes cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of tastes cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, tastes are unbounded, and since tastes are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since tangibles are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of tangibles cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, [F.196.a] Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of tangibles cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, tangibles are unbounded, and since tangibles are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since mental phenomena are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of mental phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of mental phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, mental phenomena are unbounded, and since mental phenomena are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

- 16.205 “Kauśika, since visual consciousness is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of visual consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of visual consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, visual consciousness is unbounded, and since visual consciousness is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since auditory consciousness is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of auditory consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary [F.196.b] of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of auditory consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, auditory consciousness is unbounded, and since auditory consciousness is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since olfactory consciousness is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of olfactory consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of olfactory consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, olfactory consciousness is unbounded, and since olfactory consciousness is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since gustatory consciousness is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of gustatory consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of gustatory consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, gustatory consciousness is unbounded, and since gustatory consciousness is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since tactile consciousness is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, [F.197.a] it is because the boundary of tactile consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of tactile consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, tactile consciousness is unbounded, and since tactile consciousness is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since mental consciousness is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of mental consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of mental consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, mental consciousness is unbounded, and since mental consciousness is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

16.206 “Kauśika, since visually compounded sensory contact is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, visually compounded sensory contact is unbounded, and since visually compounded sensory contact is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom [F.197.b] is unbounded. Kauśika, since aurally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, aurally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, and since aurally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since nasally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, nasally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, and since nasally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since lingually compounded sensory contact is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, lingually compounded [F.198.a] sensory contact is unbounded, and since lingually compounded sensory contact is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since corporeally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, corporeally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, and since corporeally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since mentally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, mentally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, and since mentally compounded sensory contact is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

- 16.207 “Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact [F.198.b] cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are unbounded, and since feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are unbounded, and since feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded [F.199.a] sensory contact are unbounded, and since feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are unbounded, and since feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are unbounded, and since feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are unbounded, [F.199.b] this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are unbounded, and since feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

16.208 “Kauśika, since the earth element is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the earth element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the earth element cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the earth element is unbounded, and since the earth element is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the water element is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the water element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the water element cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the water element is unbounded, and since the water element is unbounded, [F.200.a] the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the fire element is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the fire element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the fire element cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the fire element is unbounded, and since the fire element is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the wind element is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the wind element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the wind element cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the wind element is unbounded, and since the wind element is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the space element is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the space element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the space element cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the space element is unbounded, [F.200.b] and since the space element is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the consciousness element is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the consciousness element cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the consciousness element cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the consciousness element is unbounded, and since the consciousness element is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

- 16.209 “Kauśika, since ignorance is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of ignorance cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of ignorance cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, ignorance is unbounded, and since ignorance is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since formative predispositions are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended. Since space is [F.201.a] unbounded, formative predispositions are unbounded, and since formative predispositions are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since consciousness is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of consciousness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of consciousness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, consciousness is unbounded, and since consciousness is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since name and form are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of name and form cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of name and form cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, name and form are unbounded, and since name and form are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the six sense fields are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the six sense fields cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of [F.201.b] the six sense fields cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the six sense fields are unbounded, and since the six sense fields are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since sensory contact is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of sensory contact cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, sensory contact is unbounded, and since sensory contact is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since sensation is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of sensation cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of sensation cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, sensation is unbounded, and since sensation is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since craving is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of craving cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of craving cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, craving is [F.202.a] unbounded, and since craving is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since grasping is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of grasping cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of grasping cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, grasping is unbounded, and since grasping is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the rebirth process is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the rebirth process cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the rebirth process cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the rebirth process is unbounded, and since the rebirth process is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since birth is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of birth cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of birth cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, birth is unbounded, and since birth is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since aging and death are unbounded, [F.202.b] this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of aging and death cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of aging and death cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, aging and death are unbounded, and since aging and death are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

16.210 “Kauśika, since the perfection of generosity is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the perfection of generosity cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the perfection of generosity cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the perfection of generosity is unbounded, and since the perfection of generosity is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the perfection of ethical discipline is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the perfection of ethical discipline cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the perfection of ethical discipline cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the perfection of ethical discipline is unbounded, and since the perfection of ethical discipline [F.203.a] is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the perfection of tolerance is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the perfection of tolerance cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the perfection of tolerance cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the perfection of tolerance is unbounded, and since the perfection of tolerance is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the perfection of perseverance is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the perfection of perseverance cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the perfection of perseverance cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the perfection of perseverance is unbounded, and since the perfection of perseverance is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the perfection of meditative concentration is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the perfection of meditative concentration cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, [F.203.b] just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the perfection of meditative concentration cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the perfection of meditative concentration is unbounded, and since the perfection of meditative concentration is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the perfection of wisdom is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the perfection of wisdom cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the perfection of wisdom cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded, and since the perfection of wisdom is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

16.211 “Kauśika, since the emptiness of internal phenomena is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of internal phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of internal phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of internal phenomena is unbounded, and since the emptiness of internal phenomena is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of external phenomena is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings [F.204.a] is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of external phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of external phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of external phenomena is unbounded, and since the emptiness of external phenomena is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is unbounded, and since the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of emptiness is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of emptiness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of emptiness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of emptiness is unbounded, and since the emptiness of emptiness is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of great extent is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva [F.204.b] great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of great extent cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of great extent cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of great extent is unbounded, and since the emptiness of great extent is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of ultimate reality is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of ultimate reality cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of ultimate reality cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of ultimate reality is unbounded, and since the emptiness of ultimate reality is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is unbounded, and since the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva [F.205.a] great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is unbounded, and since the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of the unlimited is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of the unlimited cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of the unlimited cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of the unlimited is unbounded, and since the emptiness of the unlimited is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is unbounded, and since the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, [F.205.b] since the emptiness of nonexclusion is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of nonexclusion cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of nonexclusion cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of nonexclusion is unbounded, and since the emptiness of nonexclusion is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of inherent nature is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of inherent nature cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of inherent nature cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of inherent nature is unbounded, and since the emptiness of inherent nature is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of all phenomena is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of all phenomena cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of all phenomena cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of all phenomena is unbounded, and since the emptiness of all phenomena is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is [F.206.a] unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is unbounded, and since the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is unbounded, and since the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of nonentities is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of nonentities cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of nonentities cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, [F.206.b] the emptiness of nonentities is unbounded, and since the emptiness of nonentities is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of essential nature is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of essential nature cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of essential nature cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of essential nature is unbounded, and since the emptiness of essential nature is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is unbounded, and since the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

16.212 “Kauśika, since the applications of mindfulness are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the applications of mindfulness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary [F.207.a] of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the applications of mindfulness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the applications of mindfulness are unbounded, and since the applications of mindfulness are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the correct exertions are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the correct exertions cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the correct exertions cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the correct exertions are unbounded, and since the correct exertions are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the supports for miraculous ability are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the supports for miraculous ability cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the supports for miraculous ability cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the supports for miraculous ability are unbounded, and since the supports for miraculous ability are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the faculties are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the faculties cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as [F.207.b] the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the faculties cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the faculties are unbounded, and since the faculties are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the powers are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the powers cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the powers cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the powers are unbounded, and since the powers are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the branches of enlightenment are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the branches of enlightenment cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the branches of enlightenment cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the branches of enlightenment are unbounded, and since the branches of enlightenment are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the noble eightfold path is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the noble eightfold path cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, [F.208.a] in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the noble eightfold path cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the noble eightfold path is unbounded, and since the noble eightfold path is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

- 16.213 “Kauśika, since the truths of the noble ones are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the truths of the noble ones cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the truths of the noble ones cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the truths of the noble ones are unbounded, and since the truths of the noble ones are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the meditative concentrations are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the meditative concentrations cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the meditative concentrations cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the meditative concentrations are unbounded, and since the meditative concentrations are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since loving kindness is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of loving kindness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, [F.208.b] the boundary of loving kindness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, loving kindness is unbounded, and since loving kindness is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since compassion is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of compassion cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of compassion cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, compassion is unbounded, and since compassion is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since empathetic joy is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of empathetic joy cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of empathetic joy cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, empathetic joy is unbounded, and since empathetic joy is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since equanimity is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of equanimity cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of equanimity cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, equanimity is unbounded, and since equanimity is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the formless absorptions are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva [F.209.a] great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the formless absorptions cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the formless absorptions cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the formless absorptions are unbounded, and since the formless absorptions are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the liberations are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the liberations cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the liberations cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the liberations are unbounded, and since the liberations are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the serial steps of meditative absorption are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the serial steps of meditative absorption cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the serial steps of meditative absorption cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the serial steps of meditative absorption are unbounded, and since the serial steps of meditative absorption are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. [F.209.b] Kauśika, since the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are unbounded, and since the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the extrasensory powers are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the extrasensory powers cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the extrasensory powers cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the extrasensory powers are unbounded, and since the extrasensory powers are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the meditative stabilities are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the meditative stabilities cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the meditative stabilities cannot be apprehended. [F.210.a] Since space is unbounded, the meditative stabilities are unbounded, and since the meditative stabilities are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the dhāraṇī gateways are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the dhāraṇī gateways cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the dhāraṇī gateways cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the dhāraṇī gateways are unbounded, and since the dhāraṇī gateways are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the powers of the tathāgatas are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the powers of the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the powers of the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the powers of the tathāgatas are unbounded, and since the powers of the tathāgatas are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the fearlessnesses are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the fearlessnesses cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the fearlessnesses cannot [F.210.b] be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the fearlessnesses are unbounded, and since the fearlessnesses are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the kinds of exact knowledge are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the kinds of exact knowledge cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the kinds of exact knowledge cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the kinds of exact knowledge are unbounded, and since the kinds of exact knowledge are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since great loving kindness is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of great loving kindness cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of great loving kindness cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, great loving kindness is unbounded, and since great loving kindness is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since great compassion is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of great compassion cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of great compassion cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, great compassion is unbounded, and since great compassion is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the distinct qualities of the buddhas are unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the distinct qualities of the buddhas cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the distinct qualities of the buddhas cannot [F.211.a] be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the distinct qualities of the buddhas are unbounded, and since the distinct qualities of the buddhas are unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

16.214 “Kauśika, since knowledge of all the dharmas is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of knowledge of all the dharmas cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of knowledge of all the dharmas cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, knowledge of all the dharmas is unbounded, and since knowledge of all the dharmas is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since the knowledge of the aspects of the path is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of the knowledge of the aspects of the path cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of the knowledge of the aspects of the path cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is unbounded, and since the knowledge of the aspects of the path is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded. Kauśika, since all-aspect omniscience is unbounded, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the boundary of all-aspect omniscience cannot be apprehended. To illustrate, Kauśika, just as the boundary of space cannot be apprehended, in the same way, Kauśika, the boundary of all-aspect omniscience [F.211.b] cannot be apprehended. Since space is unbounded, all-aspect omniscience is unbounded, and since all-aspect omniscience is unbounded, the perfection of wisdom is unbounded.

16.215 “Therefore, Kauśika, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is unbounded. Such is the perfection of wisdom. [B16]

16.216 “Kauśika, since physical forms are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of physical forms cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of feelings cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since perceptions are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of perceptions cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since formative predispositions are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since consciousness is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of consciousness cannot be apprehended.

16.217 “Kauśika, [F.212.a] since the eyes are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the eyes cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the ears are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the ears cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the nose is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the nose cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the tongue is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the tongue cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the body is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the body cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the mental faculty is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the mental faculty cannot be apprehended.

16.218 “Kauśika, since sights are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, [F.212.b] it is because a limit and middle of sights cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since sounds are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of sounds cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since odors are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of odors cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since tastes are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of tastes cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since tangibles are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of tangibles cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since mental phenomena are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of mental phenomena cannot be apprehended.

16.219 “Kauśika, since visual consciousness is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of visual consciousness cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since auditory consciousness is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of auditory consciousness cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since olfactory consciousness is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of olfactory consciousness cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since gustatory consciousness is infinite, [F.213.a] this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of gustatory consciousness cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since tactile consciousness is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of tactile consciousness cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since mental consciousness is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of mental consciousness cannot be apprehended.

16.220 “Kauśika, since visually compounded sensory contact is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since aurally compounded sensory contact is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since nasally compounded sensory contact is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since lingually compounded sensory contact is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and [F.213.b] middle of lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since corporeally compounded sensory contact is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since mentally compounded sensory contact is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended.

16.221 “Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by corporeally [F.214.a] compounded sensory contact are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended.

16.222 “Kauśika, since the earth element is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the earth element cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the water element is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the water element cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the fire element is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the fire element cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the wind element is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the wind element cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the space element is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and [F.214.b] middle of the space element cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the consciousness element is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the consciousness element cannot be apprehended.

16.223 “Kauśika, since ignorance is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of ignorance cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since formative predispositions are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of formative predispositions cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since consciousness is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of consciousness cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since name and form are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of name and form cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the six sense fields are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the six sense fields cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since sensory contact is infinite, [F.215.a] this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of sensory contact cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since sensation is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of sensation cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since craving is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of craving cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since grasping is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of grasping cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the rebirth process is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the rebirth process cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since birth is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of birth cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since aging and death are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of aging and death cannot be apprehended.

16.224 “Kauśika, since the perfection of generosity is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the perfection of generosity cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the perfection of ethical discipline is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva [F.215.b] great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the perfection of ethical discipline cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the perfection of tolerance is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the perfection of tolerance cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the perfection of perseverance is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the perfection of perseverance cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the perfection of meditative concentration is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the perfection of meditative concentration cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the perfection of wisdom is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the perfection of wisdom cannot be apprehended.

16.225 “Kauśika, since the emptiness of internal phenomena is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of internal phenomena cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of external phenomena is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of external phenomena cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of external and internal [F.216.a] phenomena is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of emptiness is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of emptiness cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of great extent is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of great extent cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of ultimate reality is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of ultimate reality cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of the unlimited is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, [F.216.b] Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of the unlimited cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of nonexclusion is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of nonexclusion cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of inherent nature is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of inherent nature cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of all phenomena is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of all phenomena cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of nonentities is infinite, [F.217.a] this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of nonentities cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of essential nature is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of essential nature cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities cannot be apprehended.

16.226 “Kauśika, since the applications of mindfulness are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the applications of mindfulness cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the correct exertions are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the correct exertions cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the supports for miraculous ability are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the supports for miraculous ability cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the faculties are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle [F.217.b] of the faculties cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the powers are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the powers cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the branches of enlightenment are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the branches of enlightenment cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the noble eightfold path is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the noble eightfold path cannot be apprehended.

16.227 “Kauśika, since the truths of the noble ones are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the truths of the noble ones cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the meditative concentrations are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the meditative concentrations cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the immeasurable attitudes are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the immeasurable attitudes cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the formless absorptions are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings [F.218.a] is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the formless absorptions cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the liberations are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the liberations cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the serial steps of meditative absorption are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the serial steps of meditative absorption cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the extrasensory powers are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the extrasensory powers cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the meditative stabilities are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the meditative stabilities cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the dhāraṇī gateways are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If [F.218.b] you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the dhāraṇī gateways cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the powers of the tathāgatas are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the powers of the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the fearlessnesses are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the fearlessnesses cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the kinds of exact knowledge are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the kinds of exact knowledge cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since great loving kindness is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of great loving kindness cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since great compassion is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of great compassion cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the distinct qualities of the buddhas are infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the distinct qualities of the buddhas cannot be apprehended.

- 16.228 “Kauśika, since knowledge of all the dharmas [F.219.a] is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of knowledge of all the dharmas cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since the knowledge of the aspects of the path is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of the knowledge of the aspects of the path cannot be apprehended. Kauśika, since all-aspect omniscience is infinite, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because a limit and middle of all-aspect omniscience cannot be apprehended.

16.229 “Therefore, Kauśika, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite because physical forms are infinite, feelings are infinite, perceptions are infinite, formative predispositions are infinite, and consciousness is infinite; the eyes are infinite, the ears are infinite, the nose is infinite, the tongue is infinite, the body is infinite, and the mental faculty is infinite; sights are infinite, sounds are infinite, odors are infinite, tastes are infinite, tangibles are infinite, and mental phenomena are infinite; visual consciousness is infinite, auditory consciousness is infinite, olfactory consciousness is infinite, gustatory consciousness is infinite, tactile consciousness is infinite, and mental consciousness is infinite; visually compounded sensory contact is infinite, aurally compounded [F.219.b] sensory contact is infinite, nasally compounded sensory contact is infinite, lingually compounded sensory contact is infinite, corporeally compounded sensory contact is infinite, and mentally compounded sensory contact is infinite; feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are infinite, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are infinite, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are infinite, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are infinite, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are infinite, and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are infinite; the earth element is infinite, the water element is infinite, the fire element is infinite, the wind element is infinite, the space element is infinite, and the consciousness element is infinite; ignorance is infinite, formative predispositions are infinite, consciousness is infinite, name and form are infinite, the six sense fields are infinite, sensory contact is infinite, sensation is infinite, craving is infinite, grasping is infinite, the rebirth process is infinite, birth is infinite, and aging and death are infinite; the perfection of generosity is infinite, the perfection of ethical discipline is infinite, the perfection of tolerance is infinite, the perfection of perseverance is infinite, the perfection of meditative concentration is infinite, and the perfection of wisdom is infinite; the emptiness of internal phenomena is infinite, the emptiness of external phenomena is infinite, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is infinite, the emptiness of emptiness is infinite, the emptiness of great extent is infinite, the emptiness of ultimate reality is infinite, [F.220.a] the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is infinite, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is infinite, the emptiness of the unlimited is infinite, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is infinite, the emptiness of nonexclusion is infinite, the emptiness of inherent nature is infinite, the emptiness of all phenomena is infinite, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is infinite, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is infinite, the emptiness of nonentities is infinite, the emptiness of essential nature is infinite, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is infinite; the applications of mindfulness are infinite, the correct exertions are infinite, the supports for miraculous ability are infinite, the faculties are infinite, the powers are infinite, the branches of enlightenment are infinite, and the noble eightfold path is infinite; the truths of the noble ones are infinite, the meditative concentrations are infinite, the immeasurable attitudes are infinite, the formless absorptions are infinite, the eight liberations are infinite, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are infinite, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are infinite, the extrasensory powers are infinite, the meditative stabilities are infinite, the dhāraṇī gateways are infinite, the powers of the tathāgatas are infinite, the four fearlessnesses are infinite, the four kinds of exact knowledge are infinite, great loving kindness is infinite, great compassion is infinite, [F.220.b] the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are infinite, the fruit of having entered the stream is infinite, the fruit of once-returner is infinite, the fruit of non-returner is infinite, arhatship is infinite, individual enlightenment is infinite, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is infinite, and all-aspect omniscience is infinite. Such is this—the perfection of wisdom.

16.230 “Moreover, Kauśika, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite because the objective referent is infinite. Such is the perfection of wisdom.”

16.231 Śakra then asked, “Venerable monk Subhūti, why do you say, ‘This perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite because the objective referent is infinite. Such is the perfection of wisdom’?”

“Kauśika,” replied Subhūti, “this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite because the objective referent of all-aspect omniscience is infinite.⁶⁷⁴ Such is the perfection of wisdom. Moreover, Kauśika, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite because the objective referent of a phenomenon is infinite. Such is the perfection of wisdom.”

16.232 Śakra asked, “Venerable monk Subhūti, why do you say, ‘This perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite because the objective referent of a phenomenon is infinite. Such is the perfection of wisdom’?”

- “Kauśika,” replied Subhūti, “this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is [F.221.a] infinite because the realm of phenomena is infinite.⁶⁷⁵ Such is the perfection of wisdom. Moreover, Kauśika, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite because the real nature and the objective referent⁶⁷⁶ are infinite. Such is the perfection of wisdom.”
- 16.233 Śakra then asked, “Venerable monk Subhūti, why do you say, ‘This perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite because the objective referent is infinite. Such is the perfection of wisdom’?”
- “Kauśika,” replied Subhūti, “the objective referent is infinite because the real nature is infinite. The real nature is infinite because the objective referent is infinite. Kauśika, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite because the real nature and the objective referent are infinite.
- 16.234 “Moreover, Kauśika, this perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite because a being is infinite.”
- Śakra asked, “Venerable monk Subhūti, why do you say, ‘This perfection of bodhisattva great beings is infinite because a being is infinite’?”
- 16.235 Subhūti replied, “Kauśika, of what phenomenon do you think this ‘being’ is the term?”
- “Venerable monk Subhūti,” replied Śakra, “it is neither the term for a phenomenon nor is it the term for something that is not a phenomenon. This being the case, this ‘being’ is designated as a name adventitiously, designated as a name in the absence of an entity, [F.221.b] and designated as a name without an objective referent.”
- 16.236 Subhūti then asked, “Kauśika, do you think that in this perfection of wisdom there is anything that is explained as a ‘being’?”
- “No, venerable monk Subhūti,” replied Śakra.
- 16.237 “Kauśika,” said Subhūti, “that being about which nothing at all has been explained is the being that is infinite. Kauśika, if a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha, residing for eons as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, were to speak the words ‘a being,’ do you think, Kauśika, that any being would arise or cease there?”
- 16.238 “No, venerable monk Subhūti,” replied Śakra. “If you ask why, it is because beings are pure from the beginning.”
- 16.239 “Kauśika,” said Subhūti, “this being the case, one should know that the perfection of wisdom is infinite because a being is infinite.”⁶⁷⁷
- 16.240 Then the gods together with Indra, the gods together with Brahmā, and the gods together with Prajāpati, along with many men and women, made the following pronouncement⁶⁷⁸ three times: “Ah! This Dharma that the elder Subhūti has explained, expressed, and revealed like that through the blessing of the tathāgatas and through the power of the tathāgatas, in order that the tathāgatas might emerge, has been eloquently explained! Ah! This Dharma has been eloquently explained. Ah! This reality of the Dharma has been eloquently explained!

16.241 “Blessed Lord, we shall hold that bodhisattva great being who is not separated from this perfection of wisdom to be the tathāgata himself. No Dharma at all can be apprehended, whether it be physical forms, or feelings, [F.222.a] or perceptions, or formative predispositions, or consciousness; whether it be the eyes, or the ears, or the nose, or the tongue, or the body, or the mental faculty; whether it be sights, or sounds, or odors, or tastes, or tangibles, or mental phenomena; whether it be visual consciousness, or auditory consciousness, or olfactory consciousness, or gustatory consciousness, or tactile consciousness, or mental consciousness; whether it be visually compounded sensory contact, or aurally compounded sensory contact, or nasally compounded sensory contact, or lingually compounded sensory contact, or corporeally compounded sensory contact, or mentally compounded sensory contact; whether it be feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, or feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, or feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, or feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, or feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, or feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; whether it be the earth element, or the water element, or the fire element, or the wind element, or the space element, or the consciousness element; whether it be ignorance, or formative predispositions, or consciousness, or name and form, or the six sense fields, or sensory contact, or sensation, or craving, or grasping, or the rebirth process, or birth, or aging and death; whether it be the perfection of generosity, or the perfection of ethical discipline, or the perfection of tolerance, or the perfection of perseverance, or the perfection of meditative concentration, or the perfection of wisdom; whether it be the emptiness of internal phenomena, or the emptiness of external phenomena, or the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, or the emptiness of emptiness, or the emptiness of great extent, or the emptiness of ultimate reality, or the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, or the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, or the emptiness of the unlimited, or the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, or [F.222.b] the emptiness of nonexclusion, or the emptiness of inherent nature, or the emptiness of all phenomena, or the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, or the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, or the emptiness of nonentities, or the emptiness of essential nature, or the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; whether it be the applications of mindfulness, or the correct exertions, or the supports for miraculous ability, or the faculties, or the powers, or the branches of enlightenment, or the noble eightfold path; or whether it be the truths of the noble ones, or the meditative concentrations, or the immeasurable attitudes, or the formless absorptions, or the liberations, or the serial steps of meditative absorption, or the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, or the extrasensory powers, or the meditative stabilities, or the dhāraṇī gateways, or the powers of the tathāgatas, or the fearlessnesses, or the kinds of exact knowledge, or great loving kindness, or great compassion, or the distinct qualities of the buddhas, or the fruit of having entered the stream, or the fruit of once-returner, or the fruit of non-returner, or arhatship, or individual enlightenment, or knowledge of all the dharmas, or the knowledge of the aspects of the path, or all-aspect omniscience. No Dharma at all can be apprehended, nonetheless there has been a presentation of the three vehicles. If you ask what the three are, they are the vehicle of the śrāvakas, the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas, and the vehicle of the perfectly complete buddhas.”

16.242 Then the Blessed One said to the gods together with Indra, “Gods, it is so, [F.223.a] it is just as you have said. No Dharma at all can be apprehended, whether it be physical forms, or feelings, or perceptions, or formative predispositions, or consciousness; whether it be the eyes, or the ears, or the nose, or the tongue, or the body, or the mental faculty; whether it be sights, or sounds, or odors, or tastes, or tangibles, or mental phenomena; whether it be visual consciousness, or auditory consciousness, or olfactory consciousness, or gustatory consciousness, or tactile consciousness, or mental consciousness; whether it be visually compounded sensory contact, or aurally compounded sensory contact, or nasally compounded sensory contact, or lingually compounded sensory contact, or corporeally compounded sensory contact, or mentally compounded sensory contact; whether it be feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, or feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, or feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, or feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, or feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, or feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; whether it be the earth element, or the water element, or the fire element, or the wind element, or the space element, or the consciousness element; whether it be ignorance, or formative predispositions, or consciousness, or name and form, or the six sense fields, or sensory contact, or sensation, or craving, or grasping, or the rebirth process, or birth, or aging and death; whether it be the perfection of generosity, or the perfection of ethical discipline, or the perfection of tolerance, or the perfection of perseverance, or the perfection of meditative concentration, or the perfection of wisdom; whether it be the emptiness of internal phenomena, or the emptiness of external phenomena, or the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, or the emptiness of emptiness, or the emptiness of great extent, or the emptiness of ultimate reality, or the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, or the emptiness [F.223.b] of unconditioned phenomena, or the emptiness of the unlimited, or the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, or the emptiness of nonexclusion, or the emptiness of inherent nature, or the emptiness of all phenomena, or the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, or the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, or the emptiness of nonentities, or the emptiness of essential nature, or the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; whether it be the applications of mindfulness, or the correct exertions, or the supports for miraculous ability, or the faculties, or the powers, or the branches of enlightenment, or the noble eightfold path; or whether it be the truths of the noble ones, or the meditative concentrations, or the immeasurable attitudes, or the formless absorptions, or the liberations, or the serial steps of meditative absorption, or the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, or the extrasensory powers, or the meditative stabilities, or the dhāraṇī gateways, or the powers of the tathāgatas, or the fearlessnesses, or the kinds of exact knowledge, or great loving kindness, or great compassion, or the distinct qualities of the buddhas, or the fruit of having entered the stream, or the fruit of once-returner, or the fruit of non-returner, or arhatship, or individual enlightenment, or the knowledge of the aspects of the path, or all-aspect omniscience. No Dharma at all can be apprehended, nonetheless there has been a presentation of the three vehicles. If you ask what the three are, they are the vehicle of the śrāvakas, the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas, and the vehicle of the perfectly complete buddhas. [F.224.a]

16.243 “Gods, you should hold that bodhisattva great being who, by way of not apprehending anything, is not separated from this perfection of wisdom to be the tathāgata himself. If you ask why, it is because the three vehicles are taught extensively in this perfection of wisdom. If you ask what the three are, the vehicle of the śrāvakas, the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas, and the vehicle of the perfectly complete buddhas are explained.

16.244 “The tathāgata cannot be apprehended as other than the perfection of generosity, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the perfection of ethical discipline, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the perfection of tolerance, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the perfection of perseverance, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the perfection of meditative concentration, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the perfection of wisdom; nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of internal phenomena, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of external phenomena, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of emptiness, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of great extent, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of ultimate reality, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of the unlimited, [F.224.b] nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of nonexclusion, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of inherent nature, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of all phenomena, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of nonentities, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of essential nature, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the applications of mindfulness, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the correct exertions, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the supports for miraculous ability, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the faculties, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the powers, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the branches of enlightenment, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the noble eightfold path; nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the truths of the noble ones, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the meditative concentrations, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the immeasurable attitudes, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the formless absorptions, nor can [F.225.a] the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the liberations, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the serial steps of meditative absorption, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the extrasensory powers, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the meditative stabilities, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the dhāraṇī gateways, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the powers of the tathāgatas, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the fearlessnesses, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the kinds of exact knowledge, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than great loving kindness, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than great compassion, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the distinct qualities of the buddhas, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than knowledge of all the dharmas, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than the knowledge of the aspects of the path, nor can the tathāgata be apprehended as other than all-aspect omniscience. [B17]

- 16.245 “Gods, bodhisattva great beings train in all these attributes: They train in the perfection of generosity, train in the perfection of ethical [F.225.b] discipline, train in the perfection of tolerance, train in the perfection of perseverance, train in the perfection of meditative concentration, and train in the perfection of wisdom; they train in the emptiness of internal phenomena, train in the emptiness of external phenomena, train in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, train in the emptiness of emptiness, train in the emptiness of great extent, train in the emptiness of ultimate reality, train in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, train in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, train in the emptiness of the unlimited, train in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, train in the emptiness of nonexclusion, train in the emptiness of inherent nature, train in the emptiness of all phenomena, train in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, train in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, train in the emptiness of nonentities, train in the emptiness of essential nature, and train in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; they train in the applications of mindfulness, train in the correct exertions, train in the supports for miraculous ability, train in the faculties, train in the powers, train in the branches of enlightenment, and train in the noble eightfold path; and they train in the truths of the noble ones, train in the meditative concentrations, train in the immeasurable attitudes, train in the formless absorptions, train in the liberations, train in the serial steps of meditative absorption, train in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, train in the extrasensory powers, train in the meditative stabilities, train in the dhāraṇī gateways, train in the powers of [F.226.a] the tathāgatas, train in the fearlessnesses, train in the kinds of exact knowledge, train in great loving kindness, train in great compassion, train in the distinct qualities of the buddhas, train in the fruit of having entered the stream, train in the fruit of once-returner, train in the fruit of non-returner, train in arhatship, train in individual enlightenment, train in the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and train in all-aspect omniscience. Gods, it is for that reason that a bodhisattva great being who practices without becoming separated from this perfection of wisdom is said to be the tathāgata himself.

16.246 “Gods, when I attended upon⁶⁷⁹ the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete Buddha Dīpaṃkara, and was in the middle of the market in the capital city Padmāvati,⁶⁸⁰ I was not separated from the perfection of generosity, was not separated from the perfection of ethical discipline, was not separated from the perfection of tolerance, was not separated from the perfection of perseverance, was not separated from the perfection of meditative concentration, and was not separated from the perfection of wisdom; I was not separated from the emptiness of internal phenomena, was not separated from the emptiness of external phenomena, was not separated from the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, was not separated from the emptiness of emptiness, was not separated from the emptiness of great extent, was not separated from the emptiness of ultimate reality, was not separated from the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, was not separated from the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, was not separated from the emptiness of the unlimited, was not separated [F.226.b] from the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, was not separated from the emptiness of nonexclusion, was not separated from the emptiness of inherent nature, was not separated from the emptiness of all phenomena, was not separated from the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, was not separated from the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, was not separated from the emptiness of nonentities, was not separated from the emptiness of essential nature, and was not separated from the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; I was not separated from the applications of mindfulness, was not separated from the correct exertions, was not separated from the supports for miraculous ability, was not separated from the faculties, was not separated from the powers, was not separated from the branches of enlightenment, and was not separated from the noble eightfold path; and I was not separated from the truths of the noble ones, was not separated from the meditative concentrations, was not separated from the immeasurable attitudes, was not separated from the formless absorptions, was not separated from the liberations, was not separated from the serial steps of meditative absorption, was not separated from the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, was not separated from the extrasensory powers, was not separated from the meditative stabilities, was not separated from the dhāraṇī gateways, was not separated from the powers of the tathāgatas, was not separated from the fearlessnesses, was not separated from the kinds of exact knowledge, was not separated from great loving kindness, was not separated from great compassion, and was not separated from the distinct qualities [F.227.a] of the buddhas. Through not apprehending them, I was also not separated from the other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

16.247 “Gods, at that time, the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete Buddha Dīpaṃkara prophesied that I would attain unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, saying, ‘Young man, in the future, after countless eons, during the Auspicious Eon in this very world system you will become Śākyamuni, a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha, perfect in wisdom and conduct,⁶⁸¹ a well-gone one, a knower of the world, an unsurpassed steersman for individuals who are to be trained, a teacher of gods and humans, a buddha, and a blessed one.’ ”

16.248 Those gods then said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, it is wonderful how the bodhisattva great beings’ perfection of wisdom favorably sustains⁶⁸² the bodhisattva great beings’ all-aspect omniscience through not acquiring or relinquishing physical forms, through not acquiring or relinquishing feelings, through not acquiring or relinquishing perceptions, through not acquiring or relinquishing formative predispositions, and through not acquiring or relinquishing consciousness; through not acquiring or relinquishing the eyes, through not acquiring or relinquishing the ears, through not acquiring or relinquishing the nose, through not acquiring or relinquishing the tongue, through not acquiring or relinquishing the body, and through not acquiring or relinquishing the mental faculty; through not acquiring or relinquishing sights, through not acquiring or relinquishing sounds, through not acquiring or relinquishing odors, through not acquiring or relinquishing tastes, through not acquiring or relinquishing tangibles, and through not acquiring or relinquishing mental phenomena; through not acquiring or relinquishing visual consciousness, through not acquiring or relinquishing [F.227.b] auditory consciousness, through not acquiring or relinquishing olfactory consciousness, through not acquiring or relinquishing gustatory consciousness, through not acquiring or relinquishing tactile consciousness, and through not acquiring or relinquishing mental consciousness; through not acquiring or relinquishing visually compounded sensory contact, through not acquiring or relinquishing aurally compounded sensory contact, through not acquiring or relinquishing nasally compounded sensory contact, through not acquiring or relinquishing linguallly compounded sensory contact, through not acquiring or relinquishing corporeally compounded sensory contact, and through not acquiring or relinquishing mentally compounded sensory contact; through not acquiring or relinquishing feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, through not acquiring or relinquishing feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, through not acquiring or relinquishing feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, through not acquiring or relinquishing feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, through not acquiring or relinquishing feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and through not acquiring or relinquishing feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; through not acquiring or relinquishing the earth element, through not acquiring or relinquishing the water element, through not acquiring or relinquishing the fire element, through not acquiring or relinquishing the wind element, through not acquiring or relinquishing the space element, and through not acquiring or relinquishing the consciousness element; through not acquiring or relinquishing ignorance, through not acquiring or relinquishing formative predispositions, through not acquiring or relinquishing consciousness, through not acquiring or relinquishing name and form, through not acquiring or relinquishing the six sense fields, through not acquiring or relinquishing sensory contact, through not acquiring or relinquishing sensation, through not acquiring or relinquishing craving, through not acquiring [F.228.a] or relinquishing grasping, through not acquiring or relinquishing the rebirth process, through not acquiring or relinquishing birth, and through not acquiring or relinquishing aging and death; through not acquiring or relinquishing the perfection of generosity, through not acquiring or relinquishing the perfection of ethical discipline, through not acquiring or relinquishing the perfection of tolerance, through not acquiring or relinquishing the perfection of perseverance, through not acquiring or relinquishing the perfection of meditative concentration, and through not acquiring or relinquishing the perfection of wisdom; through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of internal phenomena, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of external phenomena, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of emptiness, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of great extent, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of ultimate reality, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of the unlimited, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of nonexclusion, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of inherent nature, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of all phenomena, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of nonentities, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of essential nature, and through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; through not acquiring or relinquishing the applications of mindfulness, through not acquiring or relinquishing the correct exertions, through not acquiring or [F.228.b] relinquishing the supports for miraculous ability, through not acquiring or relinquishing the faculties, through not acquiring or relinquishing the powers, through not acquiring or relinquishing the branches of enlightenment, and through not acquiring or relinquishing the noble eightfold path; and through not acquiring or relinquishing the truths of the noble ones, through not acquiring or relinquishing the meditative concentrations, through not acquiring or relinquishing the immeasurable attitudes, through not acquiring or relinquishing the formless absorptions, through not acquiring or relinquishing the liberations, through not acquiring or relinquishing the serial steps of meditative absorption, through not acquiring or relinquishing the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, through not acquiring or relinquishing the extrasensory powers, through not acquiring or relinquishing the meditative stabilities, through not acquiring or relinquishing the dhāraṇī gateways, through not acquiring or relinquishing the powers of the tathāgatas, through not acquiring or relinquishing the fearlessnesses, through not acquiring or relinquishing the kinds of exact knowledge, through not acquiring or relinquishing great loving kindness, through not acquiring or relinquishing great compassion, through not acquiring or relinquishing the distinct qualities of the buddhas, through not acquiring or relinquishing knowledge of all the dharmas, through not acquiring or relinquishing the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and through not acquiring or relinquishing all-aspect omniscience.”⁶⁸³

16.249 Then the Blessed One, knowing that the four assemblies of monks, nuns, laymen, [F.229.a] and laywomen, the bodhisattva great beings, and the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, the gods of the Trayastrimśa realm, the gods of the Yāma realm, the gods of the Tuṣita realm, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm; the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm, the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm; the gods of the Ābha realm, the gods of the Parittābha realm, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm; the gods of the Śubha realm, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm; the gods of the Vṛha realm, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm; and the gods of the Avṛha realm, the gods of the Atapa realm, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm, the gods of the Sudarśana realm, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm were gathered and assembled, established them all as witnesses, and said to Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, “Kauśika, evil Māra and the gods of the māra class will find no opportunity to inflict harm on⁶⁸⁴ those bodhisattva great beings, or the monks, or the nuns, or the laymen, or the laywomen, or the sons of good families, or the daughters of good families, or the gods, or the goddesses who will take up, uphold, recite, master, cultivate, extensively explain to others, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience.

16.250 “If you ask why, it is because these sons and daughters of good families [F.229.b] will be totally blessed with the emptiness of physical forms, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of feelings, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of perceptions, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of formative predispositions, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of consciousness. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness.

16.251 “It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the eyes, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the ears, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the nose, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the tongue, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the body, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the mental faculty. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness. It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of sights, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of sounds, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of odors, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of tastes, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of tangibles, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of mental phenomena. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness. [F.230.a] It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of visual consciousness, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of auditory consciousness, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of olfactory consciousness, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of gustatory consciousness, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of tactile consciousness, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of mental consciousness. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness. It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of visually compounded sensory contact, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of aurally compounded sensory contact, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of nasally compounded sensory contact, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of lingually compounded sensory contact, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of corporeally compounded sensory contact, and will be totally blessed with mentally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness. It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, [F.230.b] will be totally blessed with the emptiness of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness.

- 16.252 “It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the earth element, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the water element, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the fire element, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the wind element, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the space element, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the consciousness element. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness.

16.253 “It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of ignorance, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of formative predispositions, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of consciousness, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of name and form, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the six sense fields, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of sensory contact, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of [F.231.a] sensation, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of craving, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of grasping, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the rebirth process, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of birth, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of aging and death. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness.

16.254 “It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the perfection of generosity, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the perfection of ethical discipline, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the perfection of tolerance, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the perfection of perseverance, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the perfection of meditative concentration, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness.

16.255 “It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of internal phenomena, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of external phenomena, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of emptiness, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of great extent, [F.231.b] will be totally blessed with the emptiness of ultimate reality, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of the unlimited, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of nonexclusion, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of inherent nature, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of all phenomena, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of nonentities, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of essential nature, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness.

16.256 “It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the applications of mindfulness, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the correct exertions, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the supports for miraculous ability, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the faculties, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the powers, [F.232.a] will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the branches of enlightenment, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the noble eightfold path. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness.

16.257 “It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the truths of the noble ones, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the meditative concentrations, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the immeasurable attitudes, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the formless absorptions, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the liberations, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the serial steps of meditative absorption, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the extrasensory powers, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the meditative stabilities, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the dhāraṇī gateways. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness.

16.258 “It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the powers of the tathāgatas, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of [F.232.b] the fearlessnesses, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the kinds of exact knowledge, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of great loving kindness, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of great compassion, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the distinct qualities of the buddhas. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness.

16.259 “It is because these sons and daughters of good families will be totally blessed with the emptiness of knowledge of all the dharmas, will be totally blessed with the emptiness of the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and will be totally blessed with the emptiness of all-aspect omniscience. If you ask why, it is because there is no opportunity for emptiness to inflict harm on emptiness, no opportunity for signlessness to inflict harm on signlessness, and no opportunity for wishlessness to inflict harm on wishlessness.

16.260 “If you ask why, it is because the essential nature of those things through which they might find an opportunity to inflict harm, of those situations where they might find an opportunity to inflict harm, and of those upon whom they might find an opportunity to inflict harm does not exist.

16.261 “Kauśika, humans or nonhumans who would look for and seek an opportunity to inflict harm upon those sons or daughters of good families will not find an opportunity to inflict harm on them. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those sons and daughters of good families totally cultivate loving kindness, compassion, empathetic joy, and equanimity toward all beings, by way of not apprehending anything. It will not happen that those sons or daughters of good families fail to avoid misfortunes that might have caused [F.233.a] death. If you ask why, it is because those sons and daughters of good families who practice the perfection of generosity serve all beings through perfect avoidance.⁶⁸⁵

16.262 “Kauśika, those gods in this billionfold world system—the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm, the gods of the Yāma realm, the gods of the Tuṣita realm, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm, and the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm,⁶⁸⁶ the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm, the gods of the Śubhakarṣṇa realm, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm—as many as there are who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and also those gods who have not heard, not taken up, not borne in mind, not mastered, and not focused their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom should listen to, take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom. They should not be separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience.

16.263 “Moreover, Kauśika, these sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience will not be afraid or frightened, whether they are staying in an empty hut, whether they are staying in an exposed place, or whether they have lost their way. If you ask why, it is because these sons or daughters of good families have totally cultivated the emptiness of internal phenomena without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of external phenomena without apprehending it, have totally [F.233.b] cultivated the emptiness of external and internal phenomena without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of emptiness without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of great extent without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of ultimate reality without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of conditioned phenomena without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of the unlimited without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of nonexclusion without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of inherent nature without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of all phenomena without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of nonentities without apprehending it, have totally cultivated the emptiness of essential nature without apprehending it, and have totally cultivated the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities without apprehending it.”

16.264 Then, at that time, all those gods in this billionfold world system—the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, the gods of the Trayastrimśa realm, the gods of the Yāma realm, the gods of the Tuṣita realm, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm, and the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm, the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm, the gods of the Śubhakarṣṇa realm, the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm, and the gods in the Śuddhāvāsa realms—as many as there are, [F.234.a] said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, we shall always guard, protect, and defend, without interruption, those sons or daughters of good families who are intent on, take up, uphold, recite, master, correctly focus their attention on, and teach this perfection of wisdom extensively to others without being separated from focusing their attention on all-aspect omniscience.

16.265 “If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because, when bodhisattva great beings exist, the hells, the animal realm, and the world of Yama are cut off; the inadequacies of gods are cut off; poverty among humans is cut off; all epidemics, misfortunes, and contagious diseases are cut off, vanish, and do not occur; and all the sorrows due to famine⁶⁸⁷ are cut off too. When bodhisattva great beings exist, the paths of the ten virtuous actions will emerge in the world, the four meditative concentrations will emerge in the world, the four immeasurable attitudes will emerge in the world, the four formless absorptions will emerge in the world, and the five extrasensory powers will emerge in the world; the perfection of generosity will emerge in the world, the perfection of ethical discipline will emerge in the world, the perfection of tolerance will emerge in the world, the perfection of perseverance will emerge in the world, the perfection of meditative concentration [F.234.b] will emerge in the world, and the perfection of wisdom will emerge in the world; the emptiness of internal phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of external phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of emptiness will emerge in the world, the emptiness of great extent will emerge in the world, the emptiness of ultimate reality will emerge in the world, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of the unlimited will emerge in the world, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end will emerge in the world, the emptiness of nonexclusion will emerge in the world, the emptiness of inherent nature will emerge in the world, the emptiness of all phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics will emerge in the world, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended will emerge in the world, the emptiness of nonentities will emerge in the world, the emptiness of essential nature will emerge in the world, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities will emerge in the world; the four applications of mindfulness will emerge in the world, the four correct exertions will emerge in the world, the four supports for miraculous ability will emerge in the world, the five faculties will emerge in the world, the five powers will emerge in the world, the seven branches of enlightenment will emerge in the world, and the noble eightfold path will emerge in the world; and the four truths of the noble ones will emerge in the world, the eight liberations will [F.235.a] emerge in the world, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption will emerge in the world, the three gateways to liberation will emerge in the world, all the meditative stabilities will emerge in the world, all the dhāraṇī gateways will emerge in the world, the ten powers of the tathāgatas will emerge in the world, the four fearlessnesses will emerge in the world, the four kinds of exact knowledge will emerge in the world, great loving kindness will emerge in the world, great compassion will emerge in the world, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas will emerge in the world, knowledge of all the dharmas will emerge in the world, the knowledge of the aspects of the path will emerge in the world, and all-aspect omniscience will emerge in the world.

16.266 “When bodhisattva great beings exist, great and lofty royal families will exist, great and lofty priestly families will exist, great and lofty householder families will exist, wheel-turning emperors will exist, the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm will exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm will exist, the gods of the Yāma realm will exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm will exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm will exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm will exist; the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm will exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm will exist, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm will exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā [F.235.b] realm will exist; the gods of the Ābha realm will exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm will exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm will exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm will exist; the gods of the Śubha realm will exist, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm will exist, the gods of the Apramāṇāśubha realm will exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm will exist; the gods of the Vṛha realm will exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm will exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm will exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm will exist; and the gods of the Avṛha realm will exist, the gods of the Atapa realm will exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm will exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm will exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm will exist.

16.267 “When bodhisattva great beings exist, the fruit of having entered the stream will exist and those who have entered the stream will exist, the fruit of once-returner will exist and once-returners will exist, the fruit of non-returner will exist and non-returners will exist, arhatship will exist and arhats will exist, and individual enlightenment will exist and pratyekabuddhas will exist.

16.268 “When bodhisattva great beings exist, the maturation of beings will exist, the refinement of the buddhafiels will exist, and tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas will emerge in the world; the turning of the wheel of the Dharma will exist; and the precious jewel [F.236.a] of the Buddha will exist, the precious jewel of the Dharma will exist, and the precious jewel of the Saṅgha will exist.

16.269 “Therefore, Blessed Lord, the world with its gods, humans, and asuras should guard, protect, and defend the bodhisattva great beings.”

16.270 Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, having said that, the Blessed One then said to him, “Kauśika, it is so, it is so! When bodhisattva great beings exist, the hells, the animal realm, and the world of Yama are cut off; the inadequacies of gods are cut off; poverty among humans is cut off; all epidemics, misfortunes, and contagious diseases are cut off, vanish, and do not occur; and all the sorrows due to famine are cut off too. When bodhisattva great beings exist, the paths of the ten virtuous actions will emerge in the world, the four meditative concentrations will emerge in the world, the four immeasurable attitudes will emerge in the world, the four formless absorptions will emerge in the world, and the five extrasensory powers will emerge in the world; the perfection of generosity will emerge in the world, the perfection of ethical discipline will emerge in the world, the perfection of tolerance will emerge in the world, the perfection of perseverance will emerge in the world, the perfection of meditative concentration [F.236.b] will emerge in the world, and the perfection of wisdom will emerge in the world; the emptiness of internal phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of external phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of emptiness will emerge in the world, the emptiness of great extent will emerge in the world, the emptiness of ultimate reality will emerge in the world, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of the unlimited will emerge in the world, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end will emerge in the world, the emptiness of nonexclusion will emerge in the world, the emptiness of inherent nature will emerge in the world, the emptiness of all phenomena will emerge in the world, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics will emerge in the world, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended will emerge in the world, the emptiness of nonentities will emerge in the world, the emptiness of essential nature will emerge in the world, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities will emerge in the world; the four applications of mindfulness will emerge in the world, the four correct exertions will emerge in the world, the four supports for miraculous ability will emerge in the world, the five faculties will emerge in the world, the five powers will emerge in the world, the seven branches of enlightenment will emerge in the world, and the noble eightfold path will emerge in the world; and the four [F.237.a] truths of the noble ones will emerge in the world, the eight liberations will emerge in the world, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption will emerge in the world, the three gateways to liberation will emerge in the world, all the meditative stabilities will emerge in the world, all the dhāraṇī gateways will emerge in the world, the ten powers of the tathāgatas will emerge in the world, the four fearlessnesses will emerge in the world, the four kinds of exact knowledge will emerge in the world, great loving kindness will emerge in the world, great compassion will emerge in the world, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas will emerge in the world, knowledge of all the dharmas will emerge in the world, the knowledge of the aspects of the path will emerge in the world, and all-aspect omniscience will emerge in the world.

16.271 “When bodhisattva great beings exist, great and lofty royal families will exist, great and lofty priestly families will exist, great and lofty householder families will exist, wheel-turning emperors will exist, the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm will exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm will exist, the gods of the Yāma realm will exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm will exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm will exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm will exist; the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm will exist, the gods of the Brahmāpurohita [F.237.b] realm will exist, the gods of the Brahmāpārśadya realm will exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm will exist; the gods of the Ābha realm will exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm will exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm will exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm will exist; the gods of the Śubha realm will exist, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm will exist, the gods of the Apramāṇāśubha realm will exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm will exist; the gods of the Vṛha realm will exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm will exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm will exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm will exist; and the gods of the Avṛha realm will exist, the gods of the Atapa realm will exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm will exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm will exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm will exist.

16.272 “When bodhisattva great beings exist, the fruit of having entered the stream will exist and those who have entered the stream will exist, the fruit of once-returner will exist and once-returners will exist, the fruit of non-returner will exist and non-returners will exist, arhatship will exist and arhats will exist, and individual enlightenment will exist and pratyekabuddhas will exist.

16.273 “When bodhisattva great beings exist, the maturation of beings will exist, the refinement of the buddhafiels will exist, and tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas will emerge [F.238.a] in the world; the turning of the wheel of the Dharma will exist; and the precious jewel of the Buddha will exist, the precious jewel of the Dharma will exist, and the precious jewel of the Saṅgha will exist.

- 16.274 “So it is that the world with its gods, humans, and asuras should serve, respect, honor, and worship the bodhisattva great beings and should always guard, protect, and defend them without interruption.
- 16.275 “Kauśika, those who think that I⁶⁸⁸ should be served, respected, honored, and worshiped think that bodhisattva great beings should be served, respected, honored, and worshiped. And so it is that the world with its gods, humans, and asuras should serve, respect, honor, and worship the bodhisattva great beings and should always guard, protect, and defend them without interruption.
- 16.276 “To illustrate, Kauśika, if this billionfold world system were filled entirely with śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas—like a thicket of naḍa reeds, or a thicket of bamboo, or a grove of sugarcane, or a thicket of rushes, or a thicket of vetiver, or a paddy field of rice, or a field of sesame—and if some sons or daughters of good families were to serve, respect, honor, and worship them, with all the necessities, for as long as they lived, still, were someone to serve, respect, honor, and worship a single bodhisattva great being who has first set the mind on enlightenment and is not [F.238.b] separated from the six perfections, that would be an increase in merit much greater than that. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because it is not on account of the existence of those śrāvakas or pratyekabuddhas that the bodhisattva great beings emerge in the world, and that the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas emerge in the world. Rather, Kauśika, it is when bodhisattva great beings exist that all the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas will exist in the world, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas will emerge in the world. So it is, Kauśika, that the world with its gods, humans, and asuras should serve, respect, honor, and worship the bodhisattva great beings and should always guard, protect, and defend them without interruption.”
- 16.277 This completes the sixteenth chapter from “The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines.” [B18]

CHAPTER 17

- 17.1 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, how wonderful it is that bodhisattva great beings who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom acquire these attributes that may be attained in this lifetime; that they bring beings to maturation, refine a buddhafiield, [F.239.a] proceed from buddhafiield to buddhafiield to wait on the lord buddhas, and that the roots of virtue through which they seek to serve, respect, honor, and worship those lord buddhas are excellent; that their memory of the Dharmas that they hear from those lord buddhas does not weaken until they fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment; that they acquire the excellence of family, acquire the excellence of birth, acquire the excellence of lifespan, acquire the excellence of retinue, acquire the excellence of the major marks, acquire the excellence of luminosity, acquire the excellence of the eyes, acquire the excellence of voice, acquire the excellence of meditative stability, and acquire the excellence of dhāraṇī; that through skillful means they emanate themselves in the body of a buddha, journey from world system to world system, and having gone to places where a lord buddha has not arisen and appeared, describe the attributes of the perfection of generosity, describe the attributes of the perfection of ethical discipline, describe the attributes of the perfection of tolerance, describe the attributes of the perfection of perseverance, describe the attributes of the perfection of meditative concentration, and describe [F.239.b] the attributes of the perfection of wisdom; describe the attributes of the emptiness of internal phenomena, describe the attributes of the emptiness of external phenomena, describe the attributes of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, describe the attributes of the emptiness of emptiness, describe the attributes of the emptiness of great extent, describe the attributes of the emptiness of ultimate reality, describe the attributes of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, describe the attributes of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, describe the attributes of the emptiness of the unlimited, describe the attributes of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, describe the attributes of the emptiness of nonexclusion, describe the attributes of the emptiness of inherent nature, describe the attributes of the emptiness of all phenomena, describe the attributes of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, describe the attributes of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, describe the attributes of the emptiness of nonentities, describe the attributes of the emptiness of essential nature, and describe the attributes of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; describe the attributes of the four meditative concentrations, describe the attributes of the four immeasurable attitudes, describe the attributes of the four formless absorptions, and describe the attributes of the five extrasensory powers; describe the attributes of the four applications of mindfulness, describe the attributes of the four correct exertions, describe the attributes of the four supports for miraculous ability, describe the attributes of the five faculties, describe the attributes of the five powers, describe the attributes of the seven branches of enlightenment, and describe the attributes of the noble eightfold path; describe the attributes of the four truths of the noble ones, describe the attributes of the eight liberations, describe the attributes of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, [F.240.a] describe the attributes of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, describe the attributes of the meditative stabilities, describe the attributes of the dhāraṇī gateways, describe the attributes of the ten powers of the tathāgatas, describe the attributes of the four fearlessnesses, describe the attributes of the four kinds of exact knowledge, describe the attributes of great loving kindness, describe the attributes of great compassion, and describe the attributes of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and that through skillful means they teach beings the Dharma and discipline⁶⁸⁹ them in the three vehicles, namely, the vehicle of the śrāvakas, the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas, and the vehicle of the buddhas.”

- 17.2 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, how wonderful it is that when this perfection of wisdom is acquired, all the six perfections are acquired; the emptiness of internal phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of external phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of emptiness is acquired, the emptiness of great extent is acquired, the emptiness of ultimate reality is acquired, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of the unlimited is acquired, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is acquired, the emptiness of nonexclusion is acquired, the emptiness of inherent nature is [F.240.b] acquired, the emptiness of all phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is acquired, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is acquired, the emptiness of nonentities is acquired, the emptiness of essential nature is acquired, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is acquired; the applications of mindfulness are acquired, the correct exertions are acquired, the supports for miraculous ability are acquired, the faculties are acquired, the powers are acquired, the branches of enlightenment are acquired, and the noble eightfold path is acquired; the truths of the noble ones are acquired, the meditative concentrations are acquired, the immeasurable attitudes are acquired, the formless absorptions are acquired, the liberations are acquired, the serial steps of meditative absorption are acquired, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are acquired, the extrasensory powers are acquired, the meditative stabilities are acquired, the dhāraṇī gateways are acquired, the powers of the tathāgatas are acquired, the fearlessnesses are acquired, [F.241.a] the kinds of exact knowledge are acquired, great loving kindness is acquired, great compassion is acquired, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are acquired; and the fruit of having entered the stream is acquired, the fruit of once-returner is acquired, the fruit of non-returner is acquired, arhatship is acquired, individual enlightenment is acquired, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is acquired, and all-aspect omniscience is acquired.”

- 17.3 Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, having said this, the Blessed One then said to him, “Kauśika, it is so, it is so! By acquiring this perfection of wisdom, all the six perfections are acquired; the emptiness of internal phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of external phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of emptiness is acquired, the emptiness of great extent is acquired, the emptiness of ultimate reality is acquired, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of the unlimited is acquired, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is acquired, the emptiness of nonexclusion is acquired, the emptiness of inherent nature is acquired, the emptiness [F.241.b] of all phenomena is acquired, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is acquired, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is acquired, the emptiness of nonentities is acquired, the emptiness of essential nature is acquired, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is acquired; the applications of mindfulness are acquired, the correct exertions are acquired, the supports for miraculous ability are acquired, the faculties are acquired, the powers are acquired, the branches of enlightenment are acquired, and the noble eightfold path is acquired; the truths of the noble ones are acquired, the meditative concentrations are acquired, the immeasurable attitudes are acquired, the formless absorptions are acquired, the liberations are acquired, the serial steps of meditative absorption are acquired, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are acquired, the extrasensory powers are acquired, the meditative stabilities are acquired, the dhāraṇī gateways are acquired, the powers of the tathāgatas are acquired, the fearlessnesses are acquired, the kinds of exact knowledge are acquired, great loving [F.242.a] kindness is acquired, great compassion is acquired, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas are acquired; and the fruit of having entered the stream is acquired, the fruit of once-returner is acquired, the fruit of non-returner is acquired, arhatship is acquired, individual enlightenment is acquired, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is acquired, and all-aspect omniscience is acquired.

17.4 “Moreover, Kauśika, listen extremely well and focus your attention, because I will reveal whichever attributes those sons or daughters of good families will acquire in this lifetime when they take up, affirm, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom.”

“Blessed Lord, I will do so,” said Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, and he listened to the Blessed One.

17.5 The Blessed One then said to him, “Kauśika, if there are any rival tīrthikas, tīrthika practitioners, wandering mendicants,⁶⁹⁰ māras, gods included among the class of māras, or arrogant individuals who want to dispute this perfection of wisdom, who want to cause separation from it, who want to quarrel with it, or who want to contradict it, then whatever disputations, causes for separation, quarrels, and contradictions have come about from those who want to dispute, those who want to cause separation, those who want to quarrel, and those who want to contradict [F.242.b] will swiftly subside and become nonexistent, and the intentions of those who delight in disputation, who delight in causing separation, who delight in quarreling, and who delight in contradiction will not be fulfilled.

17.6 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of generosity, practice the perfection of ethical discipline, practice the perfection of tolerance, practice the perfection of perseverance, practice the perfection of meditative concentration, and practice the perfection of wisdom over a long period of time, bodhisattva great beings have forsaken those outer and inner phenomena on account of which beings have, over a long period of time, become involved in fights, quarrels, altercations, and gratuitous insults,⁶⁹¹ and they have established those beings in the perfection of generosity. It is because bodhisattva great beings have forsaken those outer and inner phenomena on account of which beings have, over a long period of time, become involved in immorality, and they have established those beings in the perfection of ethical discipline. It is because bodhisattva great beings have forsaken those outer and inner phenomena on account of which beings have, over a long period of time, become angry, malicious, and violent,⁶⁹² and they have established those beings in the perfection of tolerance. It is because bodhisattva great beings have forsaken those outer and inner phenomena on account of which beings have, over a long period of time, become indolent, and they have established those beings in the perfection of perseverance. It is because bodhisattva great beings have forsaken those outer and inner phenomena on account of which beings have, over a long period of time, become mentally [F.243.a] distracted, and they have established those beings in the perfection of meditative concentration. And it is because bodhisattva great beings have forsaken those outer and inner phenomena on account of which beings have, over a long period of time, become intellectually stupid, and they have established those beings in the perfection of wisdom.

- 17.7 “Kauśika, it is because bodhisattva great beings have eliminated the latent impulses and obsessions—those latent impulses and obsessions on account of which beings wander in saṃsāra—and they have encouraged beings to take up⁶⁹³ the four meditative concentrations. It is because they have encouraged them to take up the four immeasurable attitudes, because they have encouraged them to take up the four formless absorptions, because they have encouraged them to take up the five extrasensory powers, because they have encouraged them to take up the four applications of mindfulness, because they have encouraged them to take up the four correct exertions, because they have encouraged them to take up the four supports for miraculous ability, because they have encouraged them to take up the five faculties, because they have encouraged them to take up the five powers, because they have encouraged them to take up the seven branches of enlightenment, because they have encouraged them to take up the noble eightfold path, because they have encouraged them to take up the four truths of the noble ones, because they have encouraged them to take up the eight liberations, because they have encouraged them to take up the nine serial [F.243.b] steps of meditative absorption, because they have encouraged them to take up the three gateways to liberation, because they have encouraged them to take up all the meditative stabilities, because they have encouraged them to take up all the dhāraṇī gateways, because they have encouraged them to take up the ten powers of the tathāgatas, because they have encouraged them to take up the four fearlessnesses, because they have encouraged them to take up the four kinds of exact knowledge, because they have encouraged them to take up great loving kindness, because they have encouraged them to take up great compassion, because they have encouraged them to take up the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, because they have encouraged them to take up the fruit of having entered the stream, because they have encouraged them to take up the fruit of once-returner, because they have encouraged them to take up the fruit of non-returner, because they have encouraged them to take up arhatship, because they have encouraged them to take up individual enlightenment. It is because they have encouraged them to take up unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

17.8 “Kauśika, in those lives when bodhisattva great beings practice the conduct of a bodhisattva in that manner, they come to have those attributes. In another life, too, having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, they turn the wheel of the Dharma and, having established beings in accord with their vowed aspiration, they then attain final nirvāṇa in the expanse of nirvāṇa where no aggregates are left behind. Those, Kauśika, are the attributes and advantages⁶⁹⁴ that will come about in another life of the bodhisattva great beings.

17.9 “Moreover, Kauśika, in the vicinity of a place [F.244.a] where sons or daughters of good families take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, no māras, or gods included among the class of māras, or rival tīrthikas, or wandering mendicants, or arrogant individuals will be able to come into the vicinity of that place to dispute, or quarrel with, or contradict, or destroy this perfection of wisdom. In addition to that, they will have these attributes and advantages: by hearing, taking up, and cultivating this perfection of wisdom they will be emancipated in the three vehicles and put an end to suffering.

17.10 “Kauśika, there is an herb called maghī that alleviates all poisons. As an analogy, if a snake or creature, feeling famished, seeking food, were to see another creature, and in order to eat that creature pursue it, and if that other creature, while being pursued, in fear of death and in terror, were to go to a place where there is the herb maghī, then that snake would turn back simply on smelling the herb. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the herbal attributes of maghī would overpower the venom of the snake. Kauśika, such is the potency of the herb maghī. Similarly, Kauśika, whatever the disputes and quarrels and contradicting of any sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, they would all be pacified and eliminated by the brilliance of the perfection of [F.244.b] wisdom and by the power of the perfection of wisdom. Wherever they arise, they would be eliminated in that very place and they would not increase. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the perfection of wisdom pacifies all negative and nonvirtuous phenomena and does not allow them to increase.

17.11 “If you ask what all the negative and nonvirtuous phenomena are that the perfection of wisdom pacifies and does not allow to increase, it pacifies desire, hatred, and delusion and does not allow them to increase. It pacifies ignorance and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies formative predispositions and does not allow them to increase, it pacifies consciousness and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies name and form and does not allow them to increase, it pacifies the six sense fields and does not allow them to increase, it pacifies sensory contact and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies sensation and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies craving and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies grasping and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies the rebirth process and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies birth and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies aging and death and does not allow them to increase, and it pacifies sorrow, lamentation, suffering, discomfort, and agitation and does not allow them to increase, up to [F.245.a] it pacifies what is simply this great heap of suffering and does not allow it to increase. It pacifies obstacles and does not allow them to increase, pacifies obscurations and does not allow them to increase, pacifies latent impulses and does not allow them to increase, and pacifies obsessions and does not allow them to increase. It pacifies the view of a self and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of a being and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of a life form and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of a living being and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of life and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of an individual and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of a person and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of one born of Manu and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of a child of Manu and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of an agent and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of an experiencer and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of a knower and does not allow it to increase, and it pacifies the view of a viewer and does not allow it to increase. It pacifies the nihilistic view and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the eternalist view and does not allow it to increase, pacifies [F.245.b] the view of existence and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the view of nonexistence and does not allow it to increase, pacifies all forms of wrong view⁶⁹⁵ and does not allow them to increase, pacifies miserliness and does not allow it to increase, pacifies immorality and does not allow it to increase, pacifies malice and does not allow it to increase, pacifies indolence and does not allow it to increase, pacifies agitation and does not allow it to increase, and it pacifies intellectual stupidity and does not allow it to increase. It pacifies the perception of permanence and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the perception of happiness and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the perception of self and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the perception of pleasant and does not allow it to increase, and pacifies the different operations of craving and does not allow them to increase.

17.12 “It pacifies the grasping after physical forms and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies the grasping after feelings and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies the grasping after perceptions and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies the grasping after formative predispositions and does not allow it to increase, and it pacifies the grasping after consciousness and does not allow it to increase.

17.13 “It pacifies the grasping after the perfection of generosity and does not allow it [F.246.a] to increase, pacifies the grasping after the perfection of ethical discipline and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the perfection of tolerance and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the perfection of perseverance and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the perfection of meditative concentration and does not allow it to increase, and pacifies the grasping after the perfection of wisdom and does not allow it to increase. It pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of internal phenomena and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of external phenomena and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of external and internal phenomena and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of emptiness and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of great extent and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of ultimate reality and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of conditioned phenomena and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of the unlimited and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of nonexclusion and does not allow it [F.246.b] to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of inherent nature and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of all phenomena and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of nonentities and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of essential nature and does not allow it to increase, and pacifies the grasping after the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and does not allow it to increase. It pacifies the grasping after the applications of mindfulness and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the correct exertions and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the supports for miraculous ability and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the faculties and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the powers and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the branches of enlightenment and does not allow it to increase, and pacifies the grasping after the noble eightfold path and does not allow it to increase. It pacifies the grasping after the truths of the noble ones and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the meditative concentrations and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the immeasurable attitudes and does not allow it [F.247.a] to increase, pacifies the grasping after the formless absorptions and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the liberations and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the serial steps of meditative absorption and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the emptiness, signlessness and wishlessness gateways to liberation and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the extrasensory powers and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the meditative stabilities and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the dhāraṇī gateways and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the powers of the tathāgatas and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the fearlessnesses and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after the kinds of exact knowledge and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after great loving kindness and does not allow it to increase, pacifies the grasping after great compassion and does not allow it to increase, and pacifies the grasping after the distinct qualities of the buddhas and does not allow it to increase. It pacifies the grasping after knowledge of all the dharma and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies the grasping after the knowledge of the aspects of the path and does not allow it to increase, it pacifies the grasping after all-aspect omniscience and does not allow it [F.247.b] to increase, and it pacifies the grasping after nirvāṇa and does not allow it to increase.

17.14 “Kauśika, this perfection of wisdom pacifies all those negative and nonvirtuous phenomena and does not allow them to increase.

17.15 “Kauśika, all the gods in this billionfold world system, as many as there are—the Four Great Kings; Śakra, the mighty lord of the gods; Brahmā, the lord of Patient Endurance; and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realms, the gods of the Śubhakarṣṇa realms, the gods of the Vṛhatphala realms, and the gods in the Śuddhāvāsa realms—will indeed always guard, protect, and defend without interruption those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom.

17.16 “Those lord buddhas who reside and maintain themselves in the world systems of the ten directions will also indeed always guard, protect, and defend without interruption those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom. They will abandon nonvirtuous phenomena and increase virtuous phenomena. Thus, by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the perfection of generosity; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the perfection of ethical discipline; by way of not apprehending anything, [F.248.a] they will prosper and not decline due to the perfection of tolerance; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the perfection of perseverance; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the perfection of meditative concentration; and by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the perfection of wisdom.

17.17 “By way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of internal phenomena; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of external phenomena; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of emptiness; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of great extent; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of ultimate reality; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to [F.248.b] the emptiness of the unlimited; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of nonexclusion; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of inherent nature; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of all phenomena; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of nonentities; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of essential nature; and by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

17.18 “By way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the applications of mindfulness; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the correct exertions; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline [F.249.a] due to the supports for miraculous ability; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the faculties; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the powers; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the branches of enlightenment; and by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the noble eightfold path.

17.19 “By way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the truths of the noble ones; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the meditative concentrations; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the immeasurable attitudes; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the formless absorptions; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the liberations; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the serial steps of meditative absorption; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; by way of [F.249.b] not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the extrasensory powers; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the meditative stabilities; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the dhāraṇī gateways; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the powers of the tathāgatas; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the fearlessnesses; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the kinds of exact knowledge; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to great loving kindness; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to great compassion; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to knowledge of all the dharmas; by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to the knowledge of the aspects of the path; and by way of not apprehending anything, they will prosper and not decline due to all-aspect omniscience.

17.20 “They will be endowed with agreeable speech, [F.250.a] they will be endowed with measured speech, they will be endowed with coherent speech, they will not be overpowered by anger, they will not be overpowered by pride, and they will not become miserly or envious.

17.21 “They themselves will abstain from killing, will encourage others to abstain from killing, will praise abstention from killing, and when others abstain from killing will give them praise and approval.

17.22 “They themselves will abstain from stealing, will encourage others to abstain from stealing, will praise abstention from stealing, and when others abstain from stealing will give them praise and approval.

17.23 “They themselves will abstain from sexual misconduct, will encourage others to abstain from sexual misconduct, will praise abstention from sexual misconduct, and when others abstain from sexual misconduct will give them praise and approval.

17.24 “They themselves will abstain from falsehood, will encourage others to abstain from falsehood, will praise abstention from killing, and when others abstain from falsehood will give them praise and approval.

17.25 “They themselves will abstain from slander, will encourage others to abstain from slander, will praise abstention from slander, and when others abstain from slander will give them praise and approval. [F.250.b]

17.26 “They themselves will abstain from verbal abuse, will encourage others to abstain from verbal abuse, will praise abstention from verbal abuse, and when others abstain from verbal abuse will give them praise and approval.

17.27 “They themselves will abstain from irresponsible chatter, will encourage others to abstain from irresponsible chatter, will praise abstention from irresponsible chatter, and when others abstain from irresponsible chatter will give them praise and approval.

17.28 “They themselves will abstain from covetousness, will encourage others to abstain from covetousness, will praise abstention from covetousness, and when others abstain from covetousness will give them praise and approval.

17.29 “They themselves will abstain from malice, will encourage others to abstain from malice, will praise abstention from malice, and when others abstain from malice will give them praise and approval.

- 17.30 “They themselves will abstain from wrong views, will encourage others to abstain from wrong views, will praise abstention from wrong views, and when others abstain from wrong views will give them praise and approval.
- 17.31 “They themselves will engage in the perfection of generosity, will encourage others to engage in the perfection of generosity, will praise the perfection of generosity, and when others engage in the perfection of generosity [F.251.a] will give them praise and approval.
- 17.32 “They themselves will engage in the perfection of ethical discipline, will encourage others to engage in the perfection of ethical discipline, will praise the perfection of ethical discipline, and when others engage in the perfection of ethical discipline will give them praise and approval.
- 17.33 “They themselves will engage in the perfection of tolerance, will encourage others to engage in the perfection of tolerance, will praise the perfection of tolerance, and when others engage in the perfection of tolerance will give them praise and approval.
- 17.34 “They themselves will engage in the perfection of perseverance, will encourage others to engage in the perfection of perseverance, will praise the perfection of perseverance, and when others engage in the perfection of perseverance will give them praise and approval.
- 17.35 “They themselves will engage in the perfection of meditative concentration, will encourage others to engage in the perfection of meditative concentration, will praise the perfection of meditative concentration, and when others engage in the perfection of meditative concentration will give them praise and approval.
- 17.36 “They themselves will engage in the perfection of wisdom, will encourage others to engage in the perfection of wisdom, will praise the perfection [F.251.b] of wisdom, and when others engage in the perfection of wisdom will give them praise and approval.
- 17.37 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of internal phenomena, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of internal phenomena, will praise the emptiness of internal phenomena, and when others cultivate the emptiness of internal phenomena will give them praise and approval.
- 17.38 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of external phenomena, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of external phenomena, will praise the emptiness of external phenomena, and when others cultivate the emptiness of external phenomena will give them praise and approval.
- 17.39 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, will praise the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, and when others cultivate the emptiness of external and internal phenomena will give them praise and approval.

- 17.40 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of emptiness, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of emptiness, will praise the emptiness of emptiness, and when others cultivate the emptiness of emptiness will give them praise and approval.
- 17.41 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of great extent, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of great extent, will praise the emptiness of great extent, and when others cultivate the emptiness of great extent will give them praise and approval.
- 17.42 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of ultimate reality, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of ultimate reality, will praise the emptiness of ultimate reality, [F.252.a] and when others cultivate the emptiness of ultimate reality will give them praise and approval.
- 17.43 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, will praise the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, and when others cultivate the emptiness of conditioned phenomena will give them praise and approval.
- 17.44 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, will praise the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, and when others cultivate the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena will give them praise and approval.
- 17.45 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of the unlimited, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of the unlimited, will praise the emptiness of the unlimited, and when others cultivate the emptiness of the unlimited will give them praise and approval.
- 17.46 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, will praise the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, and when others cultivate the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, will give them praise and approval.
- 17.47 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of nonexclusion, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of nonexclusion, will praise the emptiness of nonexclusion, and when others cultivate the emptiness of nonexclusion will give them praise and approval. [F.252.b]
- 17.48 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of inherent nature, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of inherent nature, will praise the emptiness of inherent nature, and when others cultivate the emptiness of inherent nature will give them praise and approval.

- 17.49 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of all phenomena, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of all phenomena, will praise the emptiness of all phenomena, and when others cultivate the emptiness of all phenomena, will give them praise and approval.
- 17.50 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, will praise the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, and when others cultivate the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics will give them praise and approval.
- 17.51 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, will praise the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, and when others cultivate the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended will give them praise and approval.
- 17.52 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of nonentities, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of nonentities, will praise the emptiness of nonentities, and when others cultivate the emptiness of nonentities will give them praise and approval.
- 17.53 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of essential nature, will encourage others to [F.253.a] cultivate the emptiness of essential nature, will praise the emptiness of essential nature, and when others cultivate the emptiness of essential nature will give them praise and approval.
- 17.54 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, will praise the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, and when others cultivate the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities will give them praise and approval. [B19]
- 17.55 “They themselves will become absorbed in all the meditative stabilities, will encourage others to become absorbed in all the meditative stabilities, will praise absorption in all the meditative stabilities, and when others become absorbed in all the meditative stabilities will give them praise and approval.
- 17.56 “They themselves will attain the dhāraṇīs, will encourage others to attain the dhāraṇīs, will praise attaining the dhāraṇīs, and when others attain the dhāraṇīs will give them praise and approval.
- 17.57 “They themselves will become absorbed in the first meditative concentration, will encourage others to become absorbed in the first meditative concentration, will praise the first meditative concentration, and when others become absorbed in the first meditative concentration will give them praise and approval.

- 17.58 “They [F.253.b] themselves will become absorbed in the second meditative concentration, will encourage others to become absorbed in the second meditative concentration, will praise the second meditative concentration, and when others become absorbed in the second meditative concentration will give them praise and approval.
- 17.59 “They themselves will become absorbed in the third meditative concentration, will encourage others to become absorbed in the third meditative concentration, will praise the third meditative concentration, and when others become absorbed in the third meditative concentration will give them praise and approval.
- 17.60 “They themselves will become absorbed in the fourth meditative concentration, will encourage others to become absorbed in the fourth meditative concentration, will praise the fourth meditative concentration, and when others become absorbed in the fourth meditative concentration will give them praise and approval.
- 17.61 “They themselves will become absorbed in loving kindness, will encourage others to become absorbed in loving kindness, will praise the absorption in loving kindness, and when others become absorbed in loving kindness will give them praise and approval.
- 17.62 “They themselves will become absorbed in compassion, will encourage others to become absorbed in compassion, will praise the absorption in compassion, and when others become absorbed in compassion will give them praise and approval.
- 17.63 “They themselves will become absorbed in empathetic joy, will encourage others [F.254.a] to become absorbed in empathetic joy, will praise the absorption in empathetic joy, and when others become absorbed in empathetic joy will give them praise and approval.
- 17.64 “They themselves will become absorbed in equanimity, will encourage others to become absorbed in equanimity, will praise the absorption in equanimity, and when others become absorbed in equanimity will give them praise and approval.
- 17.65 “They themselves will become absorbed in the sphere of infinite space, will encourage others to become absorbed in the sphere of infinite space, will praise the absorption in the sphere of infinite space, and when others become absorbed in the sphere of infinite space will give them praise and approval.
- 17.66 “They themselves will become absorbed in the sphere of infinite consciousness, will encourage others to become absorbed in the sphere of infinite consciousness, will praise the absorption in the sphere of infinite consciousness, and when others become absorbed in the sphere of infinite consciousness will give them praise and approval.

- 17.67 “They themselves will become absorbed in the sphere of nothing-at-all, will encourage others to become absorbed in the sphere of nothing-at-all, will praise the absorption [F.254.b] in the sphere of nothing-at-all, and when others become absorbed in the sphere of nothing-at-all will give them praise and approval.
- 17.68 “They themselves will become absorbed in the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception, will encourage others to become absorbed in the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception, will praise the absorption in the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception, and when others become absorbed in the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception will give them praise and approval.
- 17.69 “They themselves will cultivate the four applications of mindfulness, will encourage others to cultivate the applications of mindfulness, will praise the cultivation of the applications of mindfulness, and when others cultivate the applications of mindfulness will give them praise and approval.
- 17.70 “They themselves will cultivate the four correct exertions, will encourage others to cultivate the correct exertions, will praise the cultivation of the correct exertions, and when others cultivate the correct exertions will give them praise and approval.
- 17.71 “They themselves will cultivate the four supports for miraculous ability, will encourage others to cultivate the supports for miraculous ability, will praise the cultivation of the supports for miraculous ability, and when others cultivate the supports for miraculous ability will give them praise and approval.
- 17.72 “They themselves will cultivate the five faculties, will encourage others to cultivate the faculties, will praise [F.255.a] the cultivation of the faculties, and when others cultivate the faculties will give them praise and approval.
- 17.73 “They themselves will cultivate the five powers, will encourage others to cultivate the powers, will praise the cultivation of the powers, and when others cultivate the powers will give them praise and approval.
- 17.74 “They themselves will cultivate the seven branches of enlightenment, will encourage others to cultivate the branches of enlightenment, will praise the cultivation of the branches of enlightenment, and when others cultivate the branches of enlightenment will give them praise and approval.
- 17.75 “They themselves will cultivate the noble eightfold path, will encourage others to cultivate the noble eightfold path, will praise the cultivation of the noble eightfold path, and when others cultivate the noble eightfold path will give them praise and approval.
- 17.76 “They themselves will cultivate the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness meditative stabilities, will encourage others to cultivate the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness meditative stabilities, will praise the cultivation of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness meditative stabilities, and when others cultivate the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness meditative stabilities will give them praise and approval.

17.77 “They themselves will cultivate the eight liberations in consecutive order and in reverse order,⁶⁹⁶ [F.255.b] will encourage others to cultivate the eight liberations, will praise the cultivation of the eight liberations, and when others cultivate the eight liberations in consecutive order and in reverse order will give them praise and approval.

17.78 “They themselves will cultivate the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, will encourage others to cultivate the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, will praise the cultivation of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, and when others cultivate the nine serial steps of meditative absorption will give them praise and approval.

17.79 “They themselves will cultivate the ten powers of the tathāgatas, will encourage others to cultivate the ten powers of the tathāgatas, will praise the cultivation of the ten powers of the tathāgatas, and when others cultivate the ten powers of the tathāgatas will give them praise and approval.

17.80 “They themselves will cultivate the four fearlessnesses, will encourage others to cultivate the four fearlessnesses, will praise the cultivation of the four fearlessnesses, and when others cultivate the four fearlessnesses will give them praise and approval.

17.81 “They themselves will cultivate the four kinds of exact knowledge, will encourage others to cultivate the four kinds of exact knowledge, will praise the cultivation [F.256.a] of the four kinds of exact knowledge, and when others cultivate the four kinds of exact knowledge will give them praise and approval.

17.82 “They themselves will cultivate great loving kindness, will encourage others to cultivate great loving kindness, will praise the cultivation of great loving kindness, and when others cultivate great loving kindness will give them praise and approval.

17.83 “They themselves will cultivate great compassion, will encourage others to cultivate great compassion, will praise the cultivation of great compassion, and when others cultivate great compassion will give them praise and approval.

17.84 “They themselves will cultivate the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, will encourage others to cultivate the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, will praise the cultivation of the distinct qualities of the buddhas, and when others cultivate the distinct qualities of the buddhas will give them praise and approval.

- 17.85 “They themselves will possess attributes that do not decline,⁶⁹⁷ will encourage others on to the state where the attributes do not decline, will praise the state where the attributes do not decline, and when others possess the state where the attributes do not decline will give them praise and approval.
- 17.86 “They themselves will abide in perpetual equanimity, will encourage others to abide in perpetual equanimity, [F.256.b] will praise abiding in perpetual equanimity, and when others abide in perpetual equanimity will give them praise and approval.
- 17.87 “They themselves will complete the knowledge of the aspects of the path, will encourage others to complete the knowledge of the aspects of the path, will praise the completion of the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and when others complete the knowledge of the aspects of the path will give them praise and approval.
- 17.88 “They themselves will complete all-aspect omniscience, will encourage others to complete all-aspect omniscience, will praise the completion of all-aspect omniscience, and when others complete all-aspect omniscience will give them praise and approval.
- 17.89 “When they practice the six perfections, they undertake acts of generosity, making common cause with all beings, and dedicate to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment without apprehending anything. When they practice the six perfections, they guard ethical discipline, making common cause with all beings, and dedicate to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment without apprehending anything. When they practice the six perfections, they cultivate tolerance, making common cause with all beings, and dedicate to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment without apprehending anything. When they practice the six perfections, they exert themselves at perseverance, making common cause with all beings, and dedicate to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment without apprehending anything. When [F.257.a] they practice the six perfections, they become absorbed in meditative concentration, making common cause with all beings, and dedicate to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment without apprehending anything. When they practice the six perfections, they cultivate wisdom, making common cause with all beings, and dedicate to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment without apprehending anything.
- 17.90 “When sons or daughters of good families practice the six perfections in that manner, a recollection will arise: ‘If I do not undertake acts of generosity, I will be reborn in the series of terrible forms of life, I will not bring beings to maturation, I will not refine a buddhafiield, and I will not attain all-aspect omniscience. If I do not guard ethical discipline, I will be reborn in the three terrible forms of life, I will not acquire a human body, I will not bring beings to maturation, I will not refine a buddhafield, and I will not attain all-aspect omniscience. If I do not cultivate tolerance, I will have diminished sense faculties, my facial complexion will be lackluster, and I will not acquire an excellent form, which is to say, I will not have the excellent form such as that which, when I practice the conduct of a bodhisattva, as soon as beings see it they come to have no doubt about unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and in the absence of which excellent form⁶⁹⁸ I will not bring beings to maturation, I will not refine [F.257.b] a buddhafield, and I will not attain all-aspect omniscience. If I am indolent, I cannot attain the path to enlightenment, I will not bring beings to maturation, I will not refine a buddhafield, and I will not attain all-aspect omniscience. If my mind is agitated, I cannot develop such meditative stabilities as those through which beings are brought to maturation, I will not refine a buddhafield, and I will not attain all-aspect omniscience. If I am intellectually stupid, after transcending the level of the śrāvakas and the level of the pratyekabuddhas through wisdom and skillful means, I will not be able to bring beings to maturation, I will not refine a buddhafield, and I will not attain all-aspect omniscience.'

17.91 "Thinking thus they will correctly train in that manner, and this recollection will arise: 'It would not be right and it would not be proper were I not to complete the perfection of generosity on account of the power of miserliness; it would not be right and it would not be proper were I not to complete the perfection of ethical discipline on account of the power of immorality; it would not be right and it would not be proper were I not to complete the perfection of tolerance on account of the power of malice; it would not be right and it would not be proper were I not to complete the perfection of perseverance on account of the power of indolence; it would not be right and it would not be proper were I not to complete the perfection of meditative concentration on account of the power of distraction; and it would not be right and it would not be proper were I not to complete the perfection of wisdom on account of [F.258.a] the power of intellectual stupidity. Without completing the six perfections, I will not be emancipated in all-aspect omniscience! Without completing the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom, I will not be emancipated in all-aspect omniscience!'

17.92 "So, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and who are not separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, will attain these enlightened attributes in this lifetime and in other lives.”

17.93 Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, then said, “Blessed Lord, it is wonderful that this perfection of wisdom has been established in that manner in order that bodhisattva great beings will become disciplined and will not be proud.”

17.94 “Kauśika, how has this perfection of wisdom been established in order that bodhisattva great beings will become disciplined and will not be proud?” asked the Blessed One.

17.95 “Blessed Lord,” replied Śakra, “here when bodhisattva great beings are practicing the mundane perfection of generosity and undertake an act of generosity toward the lord buddhas, pratyekabuddhas, and śrāvakas, if they think, ‘I am undertaking an act of generosity toward the lord buddhas, pratyekabuddhas, and śrāvakas, and toward the poor, the destitute, [F.258.b] the supplicants, and beggars,’⁶⁹⁹ on account of that act of generosity lacking in skillful means they are proud. When they are practicing the mundane perfection of ethical discipline, if they think, ‘I am practicing the perfection of ethical discipline; I am completing the perfection of ethical discipline,’ again, on account of that, they are proud. When they are practicing the mundane perfection of tolerance, if they think, ‘I am practicing the perfection of tolerance; I am completing the perfection of tolerance,’ again, on account of that, they are proud. When they are practicing the mundane perfection of perseverance, if they think, ‘I am practicing the perfection of perseverance; I am completing the perfection of perseverance,’ again, on account of that, they are proud. When they are practicing the mundane perfection of meditative concentration, if they think, ‘I am practicing the perfection of meditative concentration; I am completing the perfection of meditative concentration,’ again, on account of that, they are proud. And when they are practicing the mundane perfection of wisdom, if they think, ‘I am practicing the perfection of wisdom; I am cultivating the perfection of wisdom,’ again, because it is lacking in skillful means, on account of that mundane perfection of wisdom they are proud.

17.96 “When they are cultivating the applications of mindfulness, if they think, ‘I am cultivating the applications of mindfulness,’ again, they are attached to their ego⁷⁰⁰ and are proud. When they are cultivating the correct exertions, if they think, ‘I am cultivating [F.259.a] the correct exertions,’ again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the supports for miraculous ability, if they think, ‘I am cultivating the supports for miraculous ability,’ again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the faculties, if they think, ‘I am cultivating the faculties,’ again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the powers, if they think, 'I am cultivating the powers,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the branches of enlightenment, if they think, 'I am cultivating the branches of enlightenment,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the noble eightfold path, if they think, 'I am cultivating the noble eightfold path,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud.

17.97 "When they are cultivating the truths of the noble ones, if they think, 'I am cultivating the truths of the noble ones,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the meditative concentrations, if they think, 'I am cultivating the meditative concentrations,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the immeasurable attitudes, if they think, 'I am cultivating the immeasurable attitudes,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the formless absorptions, if they think, 'I am cultivating [F.259.b] the formless absorptions,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the liberations, if they think, 'I am cultivating the liberations,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the serial steps of meditative absorption, if they think, 'I am cultivating the serial steps of meditative absorption,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, if they think, 'I am cultivating the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the extrasensory powers, if they think, 'I am cultivating the extrasensory powers,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. When they are cultivating the meditative stabilities, if they think, 'I am cultivating the meditative stabilities,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud.

17.98 "If they think, 'I will attain the dhāraṇī gateways,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. If they think, 'I will cultivate the ten powers of the tathāgatas,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. If they think, 'I will cultivate the four fearlessnesses,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. If [F.260.a] they think, 'I will cultivate the four kinds of exact knowledge,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. If they think, 'I will cultivate great compassion,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. If they think, 'I will cultivate the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud.

17.99 "If they think, 'I will bring beings to maturation,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. If they think, 'I will refine a buddhafiield,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud. If they think, 'I will attain all-aspect omniscience,' again, they are attached to their ego and are proud.

17.100 “Blessed Lord, when bodhisattva great beings practice mundane phenomena in that manner, they are proud because they are attached to their ego. The perfection of wisdom has been established for them in order that they will become disciplined and will not be proud.

17.101 “Blessed Lord, here, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of supramundane generosity, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost, they do not apprehend the act of generosity, nor do they apprehend the undertaking of it, nor do they apprehend the recipient. Therefore, Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom has been established in order that bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of generosity will become disciplined and will not be proud. [F.260.b] When they practice the perfection of supramundane ethical discipline, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost, they do not apprehend ethical discipline, nor do they apprehend being endowed with ethical discipline. Therefore, Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom has been established in order that bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of ethical discipline will become disciplined and will not be proud. When they practice the perfection of supramundane tolerance, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost, they do not apprehend tolerance, nor do they apprehend being endowed with tolerance. Therefore, Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom has been established in order that bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of tolerance will become disciplined and will not be proud. When they practice the perfection of supramundane perseverance, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost, they do not apprehend perseverance, nor do they apprehend being endowed with perseverance. Therefore, Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom has been established in order that bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of perseverance will become disciplined and will not be proud. When they practice the perfection of supramundane meditative concentration, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost, they do not apprehend meditative concentration, nor do they apprehend being endowed with meditative concentration. Therefore, Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom [F.261.a] has been established in order that bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of meditative concentration will become disciplined and will not be proud. When they practice the perfection of supramundane wisdom, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost, they do not apprehend wisdom, nor do they apprehend being endowed with wisdom. Therefore, Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom has been established in order that bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom will become disciplined and will not be proud.

17.102 “They also cultivate but do not apprehend the applications of mindfulness, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the correct exertions, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the supports for miraculous ability, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the faculties, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the powers, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the branches of enlightenment, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the noble eightfold path, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. Therefore, Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom has been established in order that bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom will become disciplined and will not be proud.

17.103 “They also [F.261.b] cultivate but do not apprehend the truths of the noble ones, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the meditative concentrations, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the immeasurable attitudes, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the formless absorptions, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the liberations, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the serial steps of meditative absorption, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the extrasensory powers, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the meditative stabilities, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the dhāraṇī gateways, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. Therefore, Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom has been established in order that bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom will become disciplined and will not be proud.

17.104 “They also cultivate but do not apprehend the powers of the tathāgatas, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also [F.262.a] cultivate but do not apprehend the fearlessnesses, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the kinds of exact knowledge, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend great loving kindness, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend great compassion, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. Therefore, Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom has been established in order that bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom will become disciplined and will not be proud.

17.105 “They also cultivate but do not apprehend knowledge of all the dharmas, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend the knowledge of the aspects of the path, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. They also cultivate but do not apprehend all-aspect omniscience, in order to cultivate the perfection of wisdom to its utmost. Therefore, Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom has been established in order that bodhisattva great beings practicing the perfection of wisdom will become disciplined and will not be proud.”

17.106 This completes the seventeenth chapter from “The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines.”

18.

CHAPTER 18

- 18.1 Then the Blessed One said to Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, “Kauśika, when any sons or daughters of good families [F.262.b] who take up, uphold, recite, master, chant by heart,⁷⁰¹ and focus their attention correctly on this profound perfection of wisdom are present in a place of conflict, in the frontline of battle, if those sons or daughters of good families have gone there and are present there having chanted this profound perfection of wisdom by heart, then those sons or daughters of good families will not be defeated. They will indisputably be victorious. Being victorious, they will be delivered from that conflict without being humiliated or injured.⁷⁰²
- 18.2 “Kauśika, when any sons or daughters of good families, chanting this profound perfection of wisdom by heart, have gone into the frontline of battle, it is impossible that there would be a hindrance to their lives. It is impossible and it does not happen. If someone were to shoot arrows at their bodies or strike at them with weapons, their bodies would not be struck or pierced. If you ask why, it is because those sons or daughters of good families have practiced the six perfections for a long time. They have relied on this very perfection of wisdom. They have cultivated this very perfection of wisdom. They have subdued the weapons of their own desire and also the arrows of their own desire. They have subdued the weapons of others’ desire and also the arrows of others’ desire. They have subdued the weapons of their own hatred and also the arrows of their own hatred. They have subdued the weapons of others’ hatred and also the arrows of others’ hatred. They have subdued the weapons of their own delusion and also the arrows of their own delusion. They have subdued the weapons of others’ delusion and also the arrows of others’ delusion. They have subdued the weapons of their own wrong views and also the arrows of their own wrong views. They have subdued the weapons of others’ wrong views and also the arrows of others’ wrong views. They have subdued the weapons of their own obsessions and also the arrows of their own obsessions. They have

[F.263.a] subdued the weapons of others' obsessions and also the arrows of others' obsessions. They have subdued the weapons of their own latent impulses and also the arrows of their own latent impulses. They have subdued the weapons of others' latent impulses and also the arrows of others' latent impulses.

18.3 "Therefore, Kauśika, when sons or daughters of good families go into battle, their bodies will not be struck or pierced by weapons or arrows.

18.4 "Moreover, Kauśika, if sons or daughters of good families who are not separated from the mind of omniscience⁷⁰³ take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this profound perfection of wisdom, whether somebody were to sprinkle poison on them, put a curse on them, roast them in a firepit, strike them with weapons, give them poison to drink, or try to drown them, all that would not harm them. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because this perfection of wisdom is the great knowledge incantation. Kauśika, it is because this perfection of wisdom is the unsurpassed knowledge incantation. Kauśika, it is because this perfection of wisdom is the unexcelled knowledge incantation. Sons or daughters of good families who train in this knowledge incantation do not harm themselves, nor do they harm others, nor do they harm both.

18.5 "If you ask why, it is because when they train in it, they do not apprehend the self, do not apprehend a being, do not apprehend a life form, do not apprehend a living being, do not apprehend life, do not apprehend an individual, do not apprehend a person, do not apprehend one born of Manu, do not apprehend a child of Manu, do not apprehend an agent, do not apprehend an experiencer, do not apprehend a knower, and do not apprehend a viewer; [F.263.b] they do not apprehend physical forms, do not apprehend feelings, do not apprehend perceptions, do not apprehend formative predispositions, and do not apprehend consciousness; they do not apprehend the eyes, do not apprehend the ears, do not apprehend the nose, do not apprehend the tongue, do not apprehend the body, and do not apprehend the mental faculty; they do not apprehend sights, do not apprehend sounds, do not apprehend odors, do not apprehend tastes, do not apprehend tangibles, and do not apprehend mental phenomena; they do not apprehend visual consciousness, do not apprehend auditory consciousness, do not apprehend olfactory consciousness, do not apprehend gustatory consciousness, do not apprehend tactile consciousness, and do not apprehend mental consciousness; they do not apprehend visually compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend aurally compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend nasally compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend lingually compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend corporeally compounded sensory contact, and do not apprehend mentally compounded sensory contact; they do not apprehend feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and do not apprehend feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; they do not apprehend the earth element, do not apprehend the water element, do not apprehend the fire element, do not apprehend the wind element, do not apprehend the space element, and do not apprehend the consciousness element; they do not apprehend ignorance, do not apprehend formative predispositions, do not apprehend consciousness, do not apprehend name and form, do not apprehend the six sense fields, do not apprehend sensory contact, do not apprehend sensation, do not apprehend craving, [F.264.a] do not apprehend grasping, do not apprehend the rebirth process, do not apprehend birth, and do not apprehend aging and death; they do not apprehend the perfection of generosity, do not apprehend the perfection of ethical discipline, do not apprehend the perfection of tolerance, do not apprehend the perfection of perseverance, do not apprehend the perfection of meditative concentration, and do not apprehend the perfection of wisdom; they do not apprehend the emptiness of internal phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of external phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of emptiness, do not apprehend the emptiness of great extent, do not apprehend the emptiness of ultimate reality, do not apprehend the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of the unlimited, do not apprehend the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, do not apprehend the emptiness of nonexclusion, do not apprehend the emptiness of inherent nature, do not apprehend the emptiness of all phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, do not apprehend the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, do not apprehend the emptiness of nonentities, do not apprehend the emptiness of essential nature, and do not apprehend the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; they do not apprehend the applications of mindfulness, do not apprehend the correct exertions, do not apprehend the supports for miraculous ability, do not apprehend the faculties, do not apprehend the powers, do not apprehend the branches of enlightenment, and do not apprehend the noble eightfold path; and they do not apprehend the truths of the noble ones, do not apprehend the meditative concentrations, do not apprehend the immeasurable attitudes, do not apprehend the formless absorptions, do not apprehend [F.264.b] the liberations, do not apprehend the serial steps of meditative absorption, do not apprehend the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, do not apprehend the extrasensory powers, do not apprehend the meditative stabilities, do not apprehend the dhāraṇī gateways, do not apprehend the powers of the tathāgatas, do not apprehend the fearlessnesses, do not apprehend the kinds of exact knowledge, do not apprehend great loving kindness, do not apprehend great compassion, do not apprehend the distinct qualities of the buddhas, do not apprehend the fruit of having entered the stream, do not apprehend the fruit of once-returner, do not apprehend the fruit of non-returner, do not apprehend arhatship, do not apprehend individual enlightenment, do not apprehend knowledge of all the dharmas, do not apprehend the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and do not apprehend all-aspect omniscience.

18.6 “Since they do not apprehend in that manner, and are not harming themselves, or harming others, or harming both, they attain unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and observe the minds of all beings. If you ask why, it is because those tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past also trained in this same knowledge incantation and fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment; those tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the future will also train in this same knowledge incantation and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment; [F.265.a] and those present tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas are also training in this same knowledge incantation and fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

18.7 “Moreover, Kauśika, even if this perfection of wisdom is not taken up, upheld, recited, or mastered, and attention is not correctly focused on it, in the house, village, town, or city where it is committed to writing and upheld, humans or nonhumans looking for an opportunity to inflict harm will not find an opportunity to inflict harm. If you ask why, it is because, in order to worship this perfection of wisdom, the gods in the billionfold world system—the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, the gods of the Trayastrimśa realm, the gods of the Yāma realm, the gods of the Tuṣita realm, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm; the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm; the gods of the Ābha realm, the gods of the Parīttābha realm, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm; the gods of the Śubha realm, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm; the gods of the Vṛha realm, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm; and the gods of the Avṛha realm, the gods of the Atapa realm, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm, the gods of the Sudarśana realm, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm—and the gods of immeasurable, countless other world systems—the gods of their Cāturmahārājika realm, [F.265.b] the gods of their Trayastriṃśa realm, the gods of their Yāma realm, the gods of their Tuṣita realm, the gods of their Nirmāṇarati realm, and the gods of their Paranirmitavaśavartin realm; the gods of their Brahmakāyika realm, the gods of their Brahmapurohita realm, the gods of their Brahmapārśadya realm, and the gods of their Mahābrahmā realm; the gods of their Ābha realm, the gods of their Parīttābha realm, the gods of their Apramāṇābha realm, and the gods of their Ābhāsvara realm; the gods of their Śubha realm, the gods of their Parīttaśubha realm, the gods of their Apramāṇaśubha realm, and the gods of their Śubhakṛtsna realm; the gods of their Vṛha realm, the gods of their Parīttavṛha realm, the gods of their Apramāṇavṛha realm, and the gods of their Vṛhatphala realm; and the gods of their Avṛha realm, the gods of their Atapa realm, the gods of their Sudṛśa realm, the gods of their Sudarśana realm, and the gods of their Akaniṣṭha realm, as many as there are—will always guard, protect, and defend without interruption those sons or daughters of good families who have committed this perfection of wisdom to writing and uphold it. Having arrived there, those gods will serve, respect, honor, and worship this perfection of wisdom and then depart. Kauśika, so it is that any of those who have committed to writing and uphold this perfection of wisdom will have such attributes and advantages in this life.

- 18.8 “Kauśika, to illustrate, the site of enlightenment, or the living creatures included as animals or human beings present in the vicinity of the site of enlightenment or within the site of enlightenment, cannot be harmed or injured by humans or nonhumans. If you ask why, it is because, seated thereon, the tathāgatas, arhats, [F.266.a] perfectly complete buddhas of the past fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment; seated right there, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the future will also fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment; and seated right there, the present tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas in the world systems of the ten directions are also fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. And all those tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas, having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and having worked hard to make all beings fearless, and free from and not consumed with enmity,⁷⁰⁴ have established, are establishing, and will establish immeasurable, countless beings in the excellent condition of gods and humans; have established, are establishing, and will establish immeasurable, countless beings in the fruit of having entered the stream; have established, are establishing, and will establish immeasurable, countless beings in the fruit of once-returner; have established, are establishing, and will establish immeasurable, countless beings in the fruit of non-returner; have established, are establishing, and will establish immeasurable, countless beings in arhatship; have established, are establishing, and will establish immeasurable, countless beings in individual enlightenment; and have established, are establishing, and will establish immeasurable, countless beings in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. [F.266.b] If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because this very perfection of wisdom has made that location on the earth into a caitya for all beings, which is to be prostrated before, bowed down to, honored, served, and respected with many flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, and victory banners.” [B20]

18.9 Śakra then asked, “Blessed Lord, if any son or daughter of good family were to commit this perfection of wisdom to writing, uphold it in the form of a book, and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with many flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags, and if another were to place and cherish⁷⁰⁵ the bodily relics of a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha who has passed into nirvāṇa within a caitya fashioned of the seven precious materials, or within a container fashioned of the seven precious materials,⁷⁰⁶ and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with many flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags, which of these two would increase their stock of merit more?”

18.10 The Blessed One replied, “In that case, Kauśika, I will ask just you a counter-question on this matter and you should answer as best you can. Kauśika, [F.267.a] on which path do you think the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas who have acquired all-aspect omniscience and who have manifested such a body trained, such that the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas have acquired all-aspect omniscience and manifested such a body?”

18.11 Śakra answered, “Blessed Lord, it is after training in this very perfection of wisdom that the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas have acquired all-aspect omniscience and also manifested such a body.”

18.12 “Kauśika, it is so, it is so!” replied the Blessed One. “I also acquired all-aspect omniscience and manifested such a body after training in this very perfection of wisdom. Kauśika, it is not because of acquiring their physical body⁷⁰⁷ that the tathāgatas come to be counted as tathāgatas; it is because of acquiring all-aspect omniscience that the tathāgatas come to be counted as tathāgatas, and all-aspect omniscience, Kauśika, has originated from the perfection of wisdom.

18.13 “Thus, Kauśika, this body is the basis of the transcendent knowledge of an all-aspect omniscient one. Depending on that basis, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas have acquired all-aspect omniscience. So, this body serves as the basis of the transcendent knowledge of an all-aspect omniscient one and therefore becomes a caitya for all beings to pay homage to, serve, respect, honor, and worship. [F.267.b] Even after I have passed into nirvāṇa, Kauśika, the worship of my bodily relics will be just the worship of my physical body; it will not be the utter worship of the Dharma.⁷⁰⁸

18.14 “Kauśika, any son or daughter of good family who committed this perfection of wisdom to writing, and upheld, recited, mastered, and focused their attention correctly on it, and served, respected, honored, and worshipped it with many flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags, would worship the transcendental knowledge of an all-aspect omniscient one.

18.15 “So it is, Kauśika, that any faithful son or daughter of good family who wants to worship the tathāgatas should commit this very perfection of wisdom to writing and uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on it, and should serve, respect, honor, and worship it with many flowers, garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags.

18.16 “Kauśika, just the one who has committed this perfection of wisdom to writing; upheld, recited, mastered, and focused attention correctly on it; and served, respected, honored, and worshiped it with many flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags [F.268.a] would increase their stock of merit more than the one who has placed the bodily relics of a tathāgata who has passed into nirvāṇa within a caitya fashioned of the seven precious materials, or within a container fashioned of the seven precious materials,⁷⁰⁹ and served, respected, honored, and worshiped them with many flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags.

18.17 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the five perfections have also originated from it; the emptiness of internal phenomena has also originated from it, the emptiness of external phenomena has also originated from it, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena has also originated from it, the emptiness of emptiness has also originated from it, the emptiness of great extent has also originated from it, the emptiness of ultimate reality has also originated from it, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena has also originated from it, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena has also originated from it, the emptiness of the unlimited has also originated from it, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end has also originated from it, the emptiness of nonexclusion has also originated from it, the emptiness of inherent nature has also originated from it, the emptiness of all phenomena has also originated from it, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics has also originated from it, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended has also originated from it, the emptiness of nonentities has also originated from it, the emptiness of essential nature has also originated from it, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities has also originated from it; the four applications of mindfulness have also originated from it, the four correct exertions have also originated from it, the four supports for miraculous ability have also originated from it, the five faculties have also originated from it, the five powers have also originated from it, the seven branches of enlightenment have also originated from it, and the noble eightfold path has also originated from it; the four truths of the noble ones [F.268.b] have also originated from it, the four meditative concentrations have also originated from it, the four immeasurable attitudes have also originated from it, the four formless absorptions have also originated from it, the eight liberations have also originated from it, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption have also originated from it, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation have also originated from it, the five extrasensory powers have also originated from it, all the meditative stabilities have also originated from it, all the dhāraṇī gateways have also originated from it, the ten powers of the tathāgatas have also originated from it, the four fearlessnesses have also originated from it, the four kinds of exact knowledge have also originated from it, great loving kindness has also originated from it, great compassion has also originated from it, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas have also originated from it; the maturation of beings has also originated from it, the excellence of a buddhafield has also originated from it, the excellence of the family of bodhisattva great beings has also originated from it, the excellence of a physical form has also originated from it, the excellence of resources has also originated from it, the excellence of entourage has also originated from it, great loving kindness has also originated from it, and great compassion has also originated from it; great and lofty royal families have also originated from it, great and lofty priestly families have also originated from it, and great and lofty householder families have also originated from it; the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Yāma realm [F.269.a] have also originated from it, the gods of the Tuṣṭita realm have also originated from it, the gods of the

Nirmāṇarati realm have also originated from it, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm have also originated from it; the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Brahma-pārṣadya realm have also originated from it, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm have also originated from it; the gods of the Ābha realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Parīttābha realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm have also originated from it, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm have also originated from it; the gods of the Śubha realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm have also originated from it, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm have also originated from it; the gods of the Vṛha realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm have also originated from it, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm have also originated from it; the gods of the Avṛha realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Atapa realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm have also originated from it, the gods of the Sudarśana realm have also originated from it, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm have also originated from it; and those who have entered the stream have also originated from it, once-returners have also originated from it, non-returners have also originated from it, arhats have also originated from it, pratyekabuddhas have also originated from it, bodhisattva great beings have also originated from it, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas [F.269.b] have also originated from it, and the all-aspect omniscience of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas has also originated from it.”

18.18 Śakra then asked, “Blessed Lord, do those human beings of Jambudvīpa who do not honor, do not venerate, do not respect, and do not worship this perfection of wisdom not know that the worship of the perfection of wisdom is more powerful?”

18.19 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “among those human beings of Jambudvīpa, how many do you think have unbroken devotion to⁷¹⁰ the Buddha, have unbroken devotion to the Dharma, and have unbroken devotion to the Saṅgha; are without hesitation concerning the Buddha, are without hesitation concerning the Dharma, and are without hesitation concerning the Saṅgha; and are utterly convinced about the Buddha, are utterly convinced about the Dharma, and are utterly convinced about the Saṅgha?”

18.20 Śakra answered, “Blessed Lord, there are few human beings of Jambudvīpa who have unbroken devotion to the Buddha, have unbroken devotion to the Dharma, and have unbroken devotion to the Saṅgha; are without hesitation concerning the Buddha, are without hesitation concerning the Dharma, and are without hesitation concerning the Saṅgha; and are utterly convinced about the Buddha, are utterly convinced about the Dharma, and are utterly convinced about the Saṅgha.”

18.21 The Blessed One then asked, “Kauśika, how many human beings of Jambudvīpa do you think are the sort that have attained the thirty-seven factors conducive to enlightenment? How many human beings of Jambudvīpa [F.270.a] are the sort that have attained the three gateways to liberation? How many human beings of Jambudvīpa are the sort that have attained the eight liberations? How many human beings of Jambudvīpa are the sort that have attained the nine serial steps of meditative absorption? How many human beings of Jambudvīpa are the sort that have attained the four kinds of exact knowledge? How many human beings of Jambudvīpa are the sort that have attained the six extrasensory powers? How many human beings of Jambudvīpa are the sort that have entered the stream in order to abandon the three fetters? How many human beings of Jambudvīpa are the sort that have become once-returners in order to attenuate desire, hatred, and delusion? How many human beings of Jambudvīpa are the sort that have become non-returners in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the inferior? How many human beings of Jambudvīpa are the sort that have become arhats in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the higher? How many human beings of Jambudvīpa are the sort that have actually set out for individual enlightenment? How many human beings of Jambudvīpa are the sort that have actually set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment?”

18.22 “Blessed Lord,” replied Śakra, “there are few human beings of Jambudvīpa of the sort that have attained the thirty-seven factors conducive to enlightenment. There are even fewer of the sort that have attained the three gateways to liberation than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have attained the eight liberations than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have attained the nine serial steps of meditative absorption than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have attained [F.270.b] the four kinds of exact knowledge than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have attained the six extrasensory powers than them. There are even fewer human beings of Jambudvīpa of the sort that have entered the stream in order to abandon the three fetters than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have become once-returners in order to attenuate desire, hatred, and delusion than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have become nonreturners in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the inferior than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have become arhats in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the higher than them. There are even fewer human beings of Jambudvīpa of the sort that have actually set out for individual enlightenment than them. And there are even fewer human beings of Jambudvīpa of the sort that have actually set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment than them.”

18.23 “Kauśika, it is so, it is so!” said the Blessed One. “Among the human beings of Jambudvīpa, there are few of the sort that have unbroken devotion to the Buddha, unbroken devotion to the Dharma, and unbroken devotion to the Saṅgha, and that are without hesitation concerning the Buddha, without hesitation concerning the Dharma, and without hesitation concerning the Saṅgha. There are even fewer of the sort that are utterly convinced about the Buddha, utterly convinced about the Dharma, and utterly convinced about the Saṅgha than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have attained the thirty-seven factors conducive to enlightenment than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have entered the stream than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have become once-returners than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have become non-returners than them. [F.271.a] There are even fewer of the sort that have become arhats than them. There are even fewer of the sort that have actually set out for individual enlightenment than them. And there are even fewer of the sort that have actually set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment than them.

18.24 “If you ask why, it is because formerly when they roamed through cycles of existence, they did not see the Buddha, they did not listen to the Dharma, they did not venerate the Saṅgha; they did not undertake acts of generosity, did not maintain ethical discipline, did not cultivate tolerance, did not undertake perseverance, did not cultivate meditative concentration, and did not cultivate wisdom; and they did not hear of and did not cultivate the perfection of generosity, did not hear of and did not cultivate the perfection of ethical discipline, did not hear of and did not cultivate the perfection of tolerance, did not hear of and did not cultivate the perfection of perseverance, did not hear of and did not cultivate the perfection of meditative concentration, and did not hear of and did not cultivate the perfection of wisdom. They did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of internal phenomena, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of external phenomena, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of emptiness, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of great extent, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of ultimate reality, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of the unlimited, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of nonexclusion, [F.271.b] did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of inherent nature, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of all phenomena, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of nonentities, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of essential nature, and did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. They did not hear of and did not cultivate the applications of mindfulness, did not hear of and did not cultivate the correct exertions, did not hear of and did not cultivate the supports for miraculous ability, did not hear of and did not cultivate the faculties, did not hear of and did not cultivate the powers, did not hear of and did not cultivate the branches of enlightenment, and did not hear of and did not cultivate the noble eightfold path. They did not hear of and did not cultivate the truths of the noble ones, did not hear of and did not cultivate the meditative concentrations, did not hear of and did not cultivate the immeasurable attitudes, did not hear of and did not cultivate the formless absorptions, did not hear of and did not cultivate the eight liberations, did not hear of and did not cultivate the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, did not hear of and did not cultivate the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, did not hear of and did not cultivate the extrasensory powers, did not hear of and did not cultivate the meditative stabilities, did not hear of and did not cultivate the dhāraṇī gateways, did not hear of and did not cultivate the powers of the tathāgatas, did not hear of and did not cultivate the fearlessnesses, did not hear of and did not cultivate the kinds of exact knowledge, did not hear of and did not cultivate [F.272.a] great loving kindness, did not hear of and did not cultivate great compassion, and did not hear of and did not cultivate the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. And they did not hear of and did not cultivate knowledge of all the dharmas, did not hear of and did not cultivate the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and did not hear of and did not cultivate all-aspect omniscience.

18.25 “Therefore, Kauśika, there are few human beings of Jambudvīpa of the sort that have unbroken devotion to the Buddha, have unbroken devotion to the Dharma, and have unbroken devotion to the Saṅgha. There are even fewer that have attained the three gateways to liberation than them. There are even fewer that have attained the eight liberations than them. There are even fewer that have attained the nine serial steps of meditative absorption than them. There are even fewer that have attained the four kinds of exact knowledge than them. There are even fewer that have attained the six extrasensory powers than them. There are even fewer human beings of Jambudvīpa that have entered the stream in order to abandon the three fetters than them. There are even fewer that have become once-returners in order to attenuate desire, hatred, and delusion than them. There are even fewer that have become non-returners in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the inferior than them. There are even fewer that have become arhats in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the higher than them. There are even fewer human beings of Jambudvīpa that have actually set out for individual enlightenment than them. There are even fewer that have actually set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment than them. And you should know that there are even fewer who are practicing [F.272.b] with a purified aspiration for enlightenment than them.

- 18.26 “Kauśika, leave aside human beings. How many living creatures of Jambudvīpa do you think are of the sort that have attained the thirty-seven factors conducive to enlightenment, have attained the three gateways to liberation, have attained the eight liberations, have attained the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, have attained the four kinds of exact knowledge, or have attained the six extrasensory powers? How many living creatures of Jambudvīpa are of the sort that have entered the stream in order to abandon the three fetters, have become once-returners in order to attenuate desire, hatred, and delusion, have become non-returners in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the inferior, have become arhats in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the higher, or have actually set out for individual enlightenment? How many living creatures of Jambudvīpa are of the sort that are without hesitation concerning unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and without hesitation concerning the Buddha, the Dharma, and the Saṅgha? How many living creatures of Jambudvīpa have respect for their mother, respect for their father, respect for a virtuous ascetic, respect for those born as priests, undertake acts of service on behalf of senior family members,⁷¹¹ undertake acts of generosity, protect ethical discipline, maintain the restoration and purification ceremony, dwell with the perception of sense pleasures as a basic transgression,⁷¹² and, similarly, with the perception of impermanence, the perception of nonself, the perception of uncleanliness, and the perception that there is nothing delightful in [F.273.a] the entire world? How many living creatures of Jambudvīpa have actually set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment?”

- 18.27 “Blessed Lord,” replied Śakra, “there are indeed extremely few living creatures of Jambudvīpa of the sort that have attained the thirty-seven factors conducive to enlightenment, have attained the three gateways to liberation, have attained the eight liberations, have attained the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, have attained the four kinds of exact knowledge, have attained the six extrasensory powers, have entered the stream in order to abandon the three fetters, have become once-returners in order to attenuate desire, hatred, and delusion, have become non-returners in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the inferior, have become arhats in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the higher, or have actually set out for individual enlightenment. Blessed Lord, there are indeed extremely few of the living creatures of Jambudvīpa of the sort that have actually set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.”
- 18.28 “Kauśika, it is so, it is so! It is just as you have said,” replied the Blessed One. “Kauśika, there are indeed extremely few living creatures of Jambudvīpa of the sort that have attained the thirty-seven factors conducive to enlightenment, have attained the three gateways to liberation, have attained the eight liberations, have attained the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, have attained the four kinds of exact knowledge, have attained the six extrasensory powers, have entered the stream in order to abandon the three fetters, have become [F.273.b] once-returners in order to attenuate desire, hatred, and delusion, have become non-returners in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the inferior, have become arhats in order to abandon the five fetters associated with the higher, have actually set out for individual enlightenment, or have actually set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. But there are even fewer of the sort that practice for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment than them. And there are even fewer that want to fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment than them.
- 18.29 “Kauśika, from here I see with my unobscured buddha eyes in all the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, immeasurable, countless beings who engage in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, but still, because they lack the skillful means of the perfection of wisdom, only one or two of them will abide on the irreversible level while most of them will abide on the level of the śrāvakas and the pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because it is hard for those who are indolent, those who are without perseverance, those who are of feeble intent, those who are of inferior resolve, and those who are intellectually stupid to accomplish unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

- 18.30 “Kauśika, from here I see with my unobscured buddha eyes in all the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, immeasurable, countless beings who engage in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, but still, because they lack the skillful means of the perfection of wisdom, only one or two of them will abide [F.274.a] on the irreversible level while most of them will abide on the level of the śrāvakas and the pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because it is hard for those who are indolent, those who are without perseverance, those who are of feeble intent, those who are of inferior resolve, and those who are intellectually stupid to accomplish unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.
- 18.31 “Kauśika, from here I see with my unobscured buddha eyes in all the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, immeasurable, countless beings who engage in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, but still, because they lack the skillful means of the perfection of wisdom, only one or two of them will abide on the irreversible level while most of them will abide on the level of the śrāvakas and the pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because it is hard for those who are indolent, those who are without perseverance, those who are of feeble intent, those who are of inferior resolve, and those who are intellectually stupid to accomplish unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.
- 18.32 “Kauśika, from here I see with my unobscured buddha eyes in all the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, immeasurable, countless beings who engage in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, but still, because they lack the skillful means of the perfection of wisdom, only one or two of them will abide on the irreversible level while most of them will abide on the level of the śrāvakas and the pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because it is hard for those who are indolent, those who are without perseverance, those who are of feeble intent, those who are of inferior resolve, and those who are intellectually stupid to accomplish [F.274.b] unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.
- 18.33 “Kauśika, from here I see with my unobscured buddha eyes in all the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, immeasurable, countless beings who engage in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, but still, because they lack the skillful means of the perfection of wisdom, only one or two of them will abide on the irreversible level while most of them will abide on the level of the śrāvakas and the pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because it is hard for those who are indolent, those who are without perseverance, those who are of feeble intent, those who are of inferior resolve, and those who are intellectually stupid to accomplish unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

18.34 “Kauśika, from here I see with my unobscured buddha eyes in all the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, immeasurable, countless beings who engage in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, but still, because they lack the skillful means of the perfection of wisdom, only one or two of them will abide on the irreversible level while most of them will abide on the level of the śrāvakas and the pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because it is hard for those who are indolent, those who are without perseverance, those who are of feeble intent, those who are of inferior resolve, and those who are intellectually stupid to accomplish unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

18.35 “Kauśika, from here I see with my unobscured buddha eyes in all the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, immeasurable, countless beings who engage in [F.275.a] unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, but still, because they lack the skillful means of the perfection of wisdom, only one or two of them will abide on the irreversible level while most of them will abide on the level of the śrāvakas and the pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because it is hard for those who are indolent, those who are without perseverance, those who are of feeble intent, those who are of inferior resolve, and those who are intellectually stupid to accomplish unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

18.36 “Kauśika, from here I see with my unobscured buddha eyes in all the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, immeasurable, countless beings who engage in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, but still, because they lack the skillful means of the perfection of wisdom, only one or two of them will abide on the irreversible level while most of them will abide on the level of the śrāvakas and the pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because it is hard for those who are indolent, those who are without perseverance, those who are of feeble intent, those who are of inferior resolve, and those who are intellectually stupid to accomplish unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

18.37 “Kauśika, from here I see with my unobscured buddha eyes in all the world systems of the direction below, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, immeasurable, countless beings who engage in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, but still, because they lack the skillful means of the perfection of wisdom, only one or two of them will abide on the irreversible level while most of them will abide on the level of the śrāvakas [F.275.b] and the pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because it is hard for those who are indolent, those who are without perseverance, those who are of feeble intent, those who are of inferior resolve, and those who are intellectually stupid to accomplish unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

18.38 “Kauśika, from here I see with my unobscured buddha eyes in all the world systems of the direction above, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, immeasurable, countless beings who engage in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, but still, because they lack the skillful means of the perfection of wisdom, only one or two of them will abide on the irreversible level while most of them will abide on the level of the śrāvakas and the pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because it is hard for those who are indolent, those who are without perseverance, those who are of feeble intent, those who are of inferior resolve, and those who are intellectually stupid to accomplish unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

18.39 “Kauśika, so it is that if those sons or daughters of good family who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment want to fully awaken swiftly and easily to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, they should repeatedly listen to, take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom. While listening to, taking up, upholding, reciting, mastering, and focusing their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom they should commit it to writing and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with many flowers, incense, garlands, perfume, unguents, powders, [F.276.a] robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags. In addition, they should also take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on those other virtuous phenomena that are included within this perfection of wisdom, as many as there are. That is to say, they should take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the three emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the five extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers [F.276.b] of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, great loving kindness, great compassion, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, and also those many immeasurable attributes of the buddhas included within this perfection of wisdom, as many as there are.

- 18.40 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those sons or daughters of good families will know as follows: When in the past the Tathāgata was practicing the conduct of a bodhisattva he also trained like that, in the perfection of wisdom, and in the perfection of meditative concentration, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of ethical discipline, and the perfection of generosity; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the four meditative concentrations, the four [F.277.a] immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the three emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the five extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, great loving kindness, great compassion, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, and also those immeasurable attributes of the buddhas, and that they themselves should also train in his

wake. This—that is to say, the perfection of wisdom—is our teacher. The other attributes of the buddhas, up to the immeasurable ones, are our teacher as well. This is the teaching of the lord buddhas, and this, the perfection of wisdom, is the teaching of the pratyekabuddhas, the arhats, the non-returns, the once-returns, and those who have entered the stream as well. Training in this perfection of wisdom, and training in the perfection of meditative concentration, training in the perfection of perseverance, training in the perfection of tolerance, training in the perfection of ethical discipline, and training in the perfection of generosity; training in the emptiness of internal phenomena, training in the emptiness of external phenomena, training in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, training in the emptiness of emptiness, training in the emptiness of great extent, training in the emptiness of ultimate reality, [F.277.b] training in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, training in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, training in the emptiness of the unlimited, training in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, training in the emptiness of nonexclusion, training in the emptiness of inherent nature, training in the emptiness of all phenomena, training in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, training in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, training in the emptiness of nonentities, training in the emptiness of essential nature, and training in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; training in the applications of mindfulness, training in the correct exertions, training in the supports for miraculous ability, training in the faculties, training in the powers, training in the branches of enlightenment, and training in the noble eightfold path; training in the truths of the noble ones, training in the meditative concentrations, training in the immeasurable attitudes, training in the formless absorptions, training in the liberations, training in the serial steps of meditative absorption, training in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, training in the extrasensory powers, training in the meditative stabilities, training in the dhāraṇī gateways, training in the powers of the tathāgatas, training in the fearlessnesses, training in the kinds of exact knowledge, training in great [F.278.a] loving kindness, training in great compassion, and training in the distinct qualities of the buddhas; and training in knowledge of all the dharmas, training in the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and training in all-aspect omniscience, those lord buddhas, pratyekabuddhas, arhats, non-returns, once-returns, and those who have entered the stream have gone beyond, are going beyond, and will go beyond. They will know that.

18.41 “So it is, Kauśika, that whether the Tathāgata is present or whether the Tathāgata has passed into final nirvāṇa those sons or daughters of good families should rely on this very perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because this very perfection of wisdom is the support of all śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very perfection of meditative concentration. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the perfection of meditative concentration is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very perfection of perseverance. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the perfection of perseverance is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, [F.278.b] and asuras. They should rely on this very perfection of tolerance. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the perfection of tolerance is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very perfection of ethical discipline. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the perfection of ethical discipline is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very perfection of generosity. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the perfection of generosity is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras.

18.42 “They should rely on this very emptiness of internal phenomena. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of internal phenomena is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of external phenomena. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of external phenomena is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of external and internal phenomena. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings [F.279.a] who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of emptiness. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of emptiness is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of great extent. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of great extent is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of ultimate reality. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of ultimate reality is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of conditioned phenomena. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of the unlimited. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of the unlimited is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, [F.279.b] and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of nonexclusion. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of nonexclusion is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of inherent nature. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of inherent nature is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of all phenomena. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of all phenomena is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. If you ask why, Kauśika, [F.280.a] it is because the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of nonentities. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of nonentities is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of essential nature. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of essential nature is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on this very emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras.

- 18.43 “They should rely on the applications of mindfulness. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these applications of mindfulness are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the correct exertions. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these correct exertions are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, [F.280.b] are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the supports for miraculous ability. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these supports for miraculous ability are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the faculties. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these faculties are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the powers. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these powers are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the branches of enlightenment. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these branches of enlightenment are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the noble eightfold path. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because this noble eightfold path is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras.

18.44 “They should rely on the truths of the noble ones. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these noble truths are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva [F.281.a] great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the meditative concentrations. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these meditative concentrations are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the immeasurable attitudes. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these immeasurable attitudes are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the formless absorptions. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these formless absorptions are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the liberations. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these liberations are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the serial steps of meditative absorption. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these serial steps of meditative absorption are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the emptiness, signlessness, [F.281.b] and wishlessness gateways to liberation. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the meditative stabilities. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these meditative stabilities are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the dhāraṇī gateways. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these dhāraṇī gateways are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the powers of the tathāgatas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these powers of the tathāgatas are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the fearlessnesses. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these fearlessnesses are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva [F.282.a] great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the kinds of exact knowledge. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these kinds of exact knowledge are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on great loving kindness. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because great loving kindness is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on great compassion. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because great compassion is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the distinct qualities of the buddhas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because these distinct qualities of the buddhas are the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, are the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras.

18.45 “They should rely on knowledge of all the dharmas. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because knowledge of all the dharmas is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on the knowledge of the aspects of the path. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the knowledge of the aspects of the path is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras. They should rely on all-aspect omniscience. If you ask [F.282.b] why, Kauśika, it is because all-aspect omniscience is the support of śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and bodhisattva great beings, up to, is the support of the beings who are gods, humans, and asuras.” [B21]

18.46 “Kauśika, if any son or daughter of good family were to have made a stūpa of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and were they to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped it for the duration of their lives with many divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and divine musical instruments, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of that son or daughter of a good family for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“It would, Blessed Lord! It would, Well-Gone One!” Śakra replied.

18.47 “Kauśika,” continued the Blessed One, “if any son or daughter of good family were to write out, take up, uphold, recite, master, focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and teach it extensively to others, without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, and, in addition, were to serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, [F.283.a] the merit would increase even more than that.

18.48 “Kauśika, leaving aside that one stūpa, if, Kauśika, any son or daughter of good family were to have filled this Jambudvīpa with stūpas made of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and were they to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped it for the duration of their lives with many divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and divine musical instruments, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of that son or daughter of good family for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“It would, Blessed Lord! It would, Well-Gone One!” Śakra replied.

18.49 “Kauśika,” continued the Blessed One, “if any son or daughter of good family were to commit to writing, take up, uphold, recite, master, focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, and, in addition, were to serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, [F.283.b] the merit would increase even more than that.

18.50 “Kauśika, leaving aside this Jambudvīpa filled with stūpas of the tathāgata, if, Kauśika, any son or daughter of a good family were to have filled this world system with its four continents with stūpas made of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and were they to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped it for the duration of their lives with many divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and divine musical instruments, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of that son or daughter of a good family for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“It would, Blessed Lord! It would, Well-Gone One!” Śakra replied.

18.51 “Kauśika,” continued the Blessed One, “if any son or daughter of good family were to make this perfection of wisdom into a book, take it up, uphold it, recite it, master it, and focus their attention correctly on it, and, having committed it to writing, were to serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, the merit would increase even more than that.

18.52 “Kauśika, leaving aside this world system [F.284.a] with its four continents filled with stūpas of the tathāgata, if, Kauśika, any son or daughter of good family were to have filled this thousandfold world system to the brim with stūpas made of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and were they to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped it for the duration of their lives with many divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and divine musical instruments, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of that son or daughter of good family for that reason would have increased greatly?”

 “It would, Blessed Lord! It would, Well-Gone One!” Śakra replied.

18.53 “Kauśika,” continued the Blessed One, “if any son or daughter of good family were to make this perfection of wisdom into a book, take it up, uphold it, recite it, master it, and focus their attention correctly on it, and, having committed it to writing, were to serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, the merit would increase even more than that.

18.54 “Kauśika, leaving aside this thousandfold world system filled to the brim with [F.284.b] stūpas of the tathāgata, if, Kauśika, any son or daughter of good family were to have filled this medium millionfold world system with stūpas made of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and were they to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped it for the duration of their lives with many divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and divine musical instruments, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of that son or daughter of good family for that reason would have increased greatly?”

 “It would, Blessed Lord! It would, Well-Gone One!” Śakra replied.

18.55 “Kauśika,” continued the Blessed One, “if any son or daughter of good family were to commit to writing, take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and were to serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, the merit would increase even more than that.

18.56 “Kauśika, leaving aside this medium millionfold world system filled with stūpas of the tathāgata, if, Kauśika, [F.285.a] any son or daughter of good family were to have filled this great billionfold world system with stūpas made of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and were they to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped it for the duration of their lives with many divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and divine musical instruments, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of that son or daughter of good family for that reason would have increased greatly?"

"It would, Blessed Lord! It would, Well-Gone One!" Śakra replied.

18.57 "Kauśika," continued the Blessed One, "if any son or daughter of good family were to take up,⁷¹³ uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and were to serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, the merit would increase even more than that.

18.58 "Kauśika, leaving aside this great billionfold world system filled with stūpas of the tathāgata, Kauśika, even if, from the beings in this great billionfold world system, as many as there are, [F.285.b] each among them were to have made stūpas of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped them for the duration of their lives with many divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and divine musical instruments, still, if any son or daughter of good family were to have written out, taken up, upheld, recited, mastered, and focused their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and, without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, served, respected, honored, and worshiped it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, just that would increase the merit even more."

18.59 Śakra said, "That is so, Blessed Lord! That is so, Well-Gone One! Blessed Lord, those who have served, respected, honored, and worshiped the perfection of wisdom will have served, respected, honored, and worshiped the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, [F.286.a] future, and present.

18.60 "If, from as many beings as there are in the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, each among them were to have made stūpas of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped them for an eon or for longer than an eon with divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and various divine musical instruments; and if, from as many beings as there are in the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, each among them were to have made stūpas of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped them for an eon or for longer than an eon with divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and various divine musical instruments; and if, from as many beings as there are in the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, each among them [F.286.b] were to have made stūpas of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped them for an eon or for longer than an eon with divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and various divine musical instruments; and if, from as many beings as there are in the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, each among them were to have made stūpas of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped them for an eon or for longer than an eon with divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and various divine musical instruments; and if, from as many beings as there are in the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, each among them were to have made stūpas of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and to have honored, [F.287.a] venerated, respected, and worshiped them for an eon or for longer than an eon with divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and various divine musical instruments; and if, from as many beings as there are in the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, each among them were to have made stūpas of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped them for an eon or for longer than an eon with divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and various divine musical instruments; and if, from as many beings as there are in the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, each among them were to have made stūpas of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped them for an eon or for longer than an eon with divine flowers, divine garlands, [F.287.b] divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and various divine musical instruments; and if, from as many beings as there are in the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, each among them were to have made stūpas of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped them for an eon or for longer than an eon with divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and various divine musical instruments; and if, from as many beings as there are in the world systems of the direction below, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, each among them were to have made stūpas of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped them for an eon or for longer than an eon with divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, [F.288.a] divine victory banners, divine flags, and various divine musical instruments; and if, from as many beings as there are in the world systems of the direction above, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, each among them were to have made stūpas of the seven precious materials, about one yojana in height and half a yojana in width, in order to worship a tathāgata who had passed into nirvāṇa, and to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped them for an eon or for longer than an eon with divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfumes, divine unguents, divine powders, divine outer robes, divine inner robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and various divine musical instruments—do you think, Blessed Lord, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“It would, Kauśika,” said the Blessed One.

18.61 Śakra then said, “Still, Blessed Lord, if any son or daughter of good family were to have written out, taken up, upheld, recited, mastered, and focused their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and served, respected, honored, and worshiped it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, it would increase the merit even more. If you were to ask why, Blessed Lord, [F.288.b] it is because all virtuous phenomena are included within this perfection of wisdom. That is to say, the path of the ten virtuous actions, the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, and the four formless absorptions; the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the applications of mindfulness, the correct exertions, the supports for miraculous ability, the faculties, the powers, the branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; the three emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the noble ones’ four truths of suffering, cause, cessation, and path, the six extrasensory powers, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four [F.289.a] fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, great loving kindness, great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and knowledge of all the dharmas, the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and all-aspect omniscience are included within it.

18.62 “This is the teaching of the lord buddhas, and having trained in it, all the śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas, and lord buddhas of the past, future, and present have gone beyond, are going beyond, and will go beyond all phenomena.

18.63 This completes the eighteenth chapter from "The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines."

CHAPTER 19

- 19.1 Then the Blessed One said to Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, “Kauśika, it is so, it is so! The merit of those sons or daughters of good families will increase greatly. The increase in the merit of those sons or daughters of good families who commit this perfection of wisdom to writing, make it into a book, take it up, uphold it, recite it, master it, and focus their attention correctly on it, and in addition serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, is, because of that, immeasurable, incalculable, inconceivable, incomparable, and inestimable.
- 19.2 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the all-aspect omniscience of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas has originated from [F.289.b] the perfection of wisdom; the perfection of meditative concentration has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of perseverance has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of tolerance has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of ethical discipline has originated from the perfection of wisdom, and the perfection of generosity has originated from the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of external phenomena has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of emptiness has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of great extent has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of ultimate reality has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of the unlimited has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonexclusion has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of inherent nature has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of all phenomena has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonentities [F.290.a] has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of essential nature has originated from the perfection of wisdom, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities has originated from the perfection of wisdom; the applications of mindfulness have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the correct exertions have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the supports for miraculous ability have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the faculties have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the powers have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the branches of enlightenment have originated from the perfection of wisdom, and the noble eightfold path has originated from the perfection of wisdom; the truths of the noble ones have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the meditative concentrations have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the immeasurable attitudes have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the formless absorptions have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the liberations have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the serial steps of meditative absorption have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the extrasensory powers have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the meditative stabilities have originated from the perfection of wisdom, and the dhāraṇī gateways have originated from the perfection of wisdom; the powers of the tathāgatas [F.290.b] have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the fearlessnesses have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the kinds of exact knowledge have originated from the perfection of wisdom, great loving kindness has originated from the perfection of wisdom, great compassion has originated from the perfection of wisdom, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas have originated from the perfection of wisdom; and the five eyes of the tathāgatas have originated from the perfection of wisdom, the maturation of beings has originated from the perfection of wisdom, and the refinement of a buddhafield has originated from the perfection of wisdom. Kauśika, knowledge of all the dharmas has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the knowledge of the aspects of the path has originated from the perfection of wisdom, and all-aspect omniscience has originated from the perfection of wisdom. Kauśika, the vehicle of the śrāvakas has originated from the perfection of wisdom, the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas has originated from the perfection of wisdom, and the Great Vehicle has originated from the perfection of wisdom. Kauśika, unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment has originated from the perfection of wisdom.

19.3 “Kauśika, so it is that the merit accrued earlier would come nowhere near even a hundredth part of the merit accrued if sons or daughters of good families commit this perfection of wisdom to writing, make it into a book, take it up, uphold it, recite it, master it, and focus their attention correctly on it, and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, [F.291.a] and various musical instruments. It would come nowhere near even a thousandth part, a hundred thousandth part, a ten millionth part, a hundred ten millionth part, a thousand ten millionth part, or a hundred thousand ten millionth part—or any other number, fraction, calculation, or example. It would come nowhere near to any comparison.

19.4 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because for as long as this perfection of wisdom remains in Jambudvīpa, the precious jewel of the Buddha will not disappear, the precious jewel of the Dharma will not disappear, and the precious jewel of the Saṅgha will not disappear. For that long the path of the ten virtuous actions will appear in the world, the four meditative concentrations will appear in the world, the four immeasurable attitudes will appear in the world, the four formless absorptions will appear in the world, and the five extrasensory powers will appear in the world; the perfection of generosity will appear in the world, the perfection of ethical discipline will appear in the world, the perfection of tolerance will appear in the world, the perfection of perseverance will appear in the world, the perfection of meditative concentration will appear in the world, and the perfection of wisdom will appear in the world; the emptiness of internal phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of external phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of emptiness will appear in the world, the emptiness of [F.291.b] great extent will appear in the world, the emptiness of ultimate reality will appear in the world, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of the unlimited will appear in the world, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end will appear in the world, the emptiness of nonexclusion will appear in the world, the emptiness of inherent nature will appear in the world, the emptiness of all phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics will appear in the world, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended will appear in the world, the emptiness of nonentities will appear in the world, the emptiness of essential nature will appear in the world, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities will appear in the world; the applications of mindfulness will appear in the world, the correct exertions will appear in the world, the supports for miraculous ability will appear in the world, the faculties will appear in the world, the powers will appear in the world, the branches of enlightenment will appear in the world, and the noble eightfold path will appear in the world; the truths of the noble ones will appear in the world, the meditative concentrations will appear in the world, the immeasurable attitudes will appear in the world, the formless absorptions will appear in the world, [F.292.a] the liberations will appear in the world, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption will appear in the world, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation will appear in the world, the extrasensory powers will appear in the world, the meditative stabilities will appear in the world, the dhāraṇī gateways will appear in the world, the powers of the tathāgatas will appear in the world, the fearlessnesses will appear in the world, the kinds of exact knowledge will appear in the world, great loving kindness will appear in the world, great compassion will appear in the world, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas will appear in the world; and knowledge of all the dharmas will appear in the world, the knowledge of the aspects of the path will appear in the world, and all-aspect omniscience will appear in the world. For that long great and lofty royal families will appear in the world, great and lofty priestly families will appear in the world, and great and lofty householder families will appear in the world; the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Trayastrimśa realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Yāma realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Tuṣita realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm will appear in the world, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm will appear [F.292.b] in the world; the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm will appear in the world, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm will appear in the world; the gods of the Ābha realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Parīttābha realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm will appear in the world, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm will appear in the world; the gods of the Śubha realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Apramāṇāśubha realm will appear in the world, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm will appear in the world; the gods of the Vṛha realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm will appear in the world, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm will appear in the world; the gods of the Avṛha realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Atapa realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm will appear in the world, the gods of the Sudarśana realm will appear in the world, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm will appear in the world; and those who have entered the stream will appear in the world, once-returners will appear in the world, non-returners will appear in the world, arhats will appear in the world, pratyekabuddhas will appear in the world, perfectly complete buddhas will appear in the world, and bodhisattva great beings will appear in the world. The transcendental knowledge [F.293.a] of the unsurpassed buddhas happens,⁷¹⁴ the turning of the wheel of the Dharma happens, the maturation of beings happens, and the refinement of a buddhafield happens.”

19.5 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, said to the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm, the gods of the Yāma realm, the gods of the Tuṣita realm, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm; the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm, the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm; the gods of the Ābha realm, the gods of the Parīttābha realm, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm; the gods of the Śubha realm, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm, the gods of the Apramāṇāśubha realm, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm; the gods of the Vṛha realm, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm; the gods of the Avṛha realm, the gods of the Atapa realm, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm, the gods of the Sudarśana realm, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm, as many as there were in this great billionfold world system, “Friends, you should take up this perfection of wisdom. Friends, you should uphold this perfection of wisdom. Friends, you should recite this perfection of wisdom. Friends, you should master this perfection of wisdom. Friends, you should focus your attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom.

19.6 “Friends, through taking up, upholding, reciting, mastering, and focusing attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, [F.293.b] the continuum of the way of the Buddha will not be cut, the continuum of the way of the Dharma will not be cut, and the continuum of the way of the Saṅgha will not be cut. Friends, when the continuum of the way of the Buddha is not cut, the continuum of the way of the Dharma is not cut, and the continuum of the way of the Saṅgha is not cut, the perfection of generosity will appear in the world, the perfection of ethical discipline will appear in the world, the perfection of tolerance will appear in the world, the perfection of perseverance will appear in the world, the perfection of meditative concentration will appear in the world, and the perfection of wisdom will appear in the world; the emptiness of internal phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of external phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of emptiness will appear in the world, the emptiness of great extent will appear in the world, the emptiness of ultimate reality will appear in the world, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of the unlimited will appear in the world, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end will appear in the world, the emptiness of nonexclusion will appear in the world, the emptiness of inherent nature will appear in the world, the emptiness of all phenomena will appear in the world, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics will appear in the world, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended will appear in the world, the emptiness [F.294.a] of nonentities will appear in the world, the emptiness of essential nature will appear in the world, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities will appear in the world; the applications of mindfulness will appear in the world, the correct exertions will appear in the world, the supports for miraculous ability will appear in the world, the faculties will appear in the world, the powers will appear in the world, the branches of enlightenment will appear in the world, and the noble eightfold path will appear in the world; the truths of the noble ones will appear in the world, the meditative concentrations will appear in the world, the immeasurable attitudes will appear in the world, the formless absorptions will appear in the world, the liberations will appear in the world, the serial steps of meditative absorption will appear in the world, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation will appear in the world, the extrasensory powers will appear in the world, the meditative stabilities will appear in the world, the dhāraṇī gateways will appear in the world, the powers of the tathāgatas will appear in the world, the fearlessnesses will appear in the world, the kinds of exact knowledge will appear in the world, great loving kindness will appear in the world, great compassion will appear in the world, and the eighteen distinct qualities [F.294.b] of the buddhas will appear in the world; and the conduct of the bodhisattvas will appear in the world, the fruit of having entered the stream will appear in the world, the fruit of once-returner will appear in the world, the fruit of non-returner will appear in the world, arhatship will appear in the world, individual enlightenment will appear in the world, and unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment will appear in the world."

19.7 Then the Blessed One said to Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, “Kauśika, take up this perfection of wisdom, uphold it, recite it, and master it. Kauśika, focus your attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because when it occurs, as it habitually does, to the asuras to think, ‘We will fight the gods of the Trayastriṃśa. We will drive the gods of the Trayastriṃśa away from the border,’⁷¹⁵ at that time you must contemplate this perfection of wisdom in your mind, and you must chant it by heart. You must focus your attention correctly on it and afterward, on account of that, those habitual thoughts of the asuras will fade and the arising of those minds will not recur or flourish.

19.8 “You, Kauśika, should chant by heart this perfection of wisdom even in the presence of those gods and goddesses who, at the time of death, see themselves being reborn in the lower realms. They will then be reborn in this same god realm owing to the root of the virtuous action of hearing the perfection of wisdom and owing to their belief in the perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because such is the advantage of hearing this perfection of wisdom. [F.295.a] All those sons and daughters of good families, whoever they are, who hear this perfection of wisdom will, through that root of virtue, finally fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because however many tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past there were, along with their communities of śrāvakas, they all attained final nirvāṇa in the expanse of nirvāṇa where no aggregates are left behind, having trained in this perfection of wisdom; however many tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the future there will be, along with their communities of śrāvakas, they will all fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, having trained in this perfection of wisdom; and however many tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas at present there are residing and maintaining themselves in the world systems of the ten directions, along with their communities of śrāvakas, they all fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, having trained in this perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes on the side of enlightenment are gathered within the perfection of wisdom, whether they are the attributes of the śrāvakas, the attributes of the pratyekabuddhas, the attributes of the bodhisattvas, or the attributes of the buddhas.”

19.9 Śakra then said, “Blessed Lord, this, [F.295.b] the perfection of wisdom, is the great knowledge incantation. Blessed Lord, this, the perfection of wisdom, is the unsurpassed knowledge incantation. Blessed Lord, this, the perfection of wisdom, is the knowledge incantation equal to the unequaled.

If you ask why, it is because, Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom is the eliminator of all nonvirtuous phenomena and the establisher of all virtuous phenomena.”

19.10 “Kauśika, it is so, it is so!” said the Blessed One. “Kauśika, it is because this perfection of wisdom is the great knowledge incantation. Kauśika, this, the perfection of wisdom, is the unsurpassed knowledge incantation. Kauśika, this, the perfection of wisdom, is the knowledge incantation equal to the unequaled.

19.11 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because however many tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past there were, they fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment relying on this same knowledge incantation; however many tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the future there will be, they will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment relying on this same knowledge incantation; and however many tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the present there are residing and maintaining themselves in the world systems of the ten directions, they are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment relying on this same knowledge incantation.

19.12 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because [F.296.a] when this knowledge incantation exists, the path of the ten virtuous actions exists in the world, the four meditative concentrations exist in the world, the four immeasurable attitudes exist in the world, the formless absorptions exist in the world, and the five extrasensory powers exist in the world; the perfection of generosity exists in the world, the perfection of ethical discipline exists in the world, the perfection of tolerance exists in the world, the perfection of perseverance exists in the world, the perfection of meditative concentration exists in the world, and the perfection of wisdom exists in the world; the emptiness of internal phenomena exists in the world, the emptiness of external phenomena exists in the world, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists in the world, the emptiness of emptiness exists in the world, the emptiness of great extent exists in the world, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists in the world, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists in the world, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists in the world, the emptiness of the unlimited exists in the world, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists in the world, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists in the world, the emptiness of inherent nature exists in the world, the emptiness of all phenomena exists in the world, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists in the world, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists in the world, the emptiness of nonentities exists in the world, the emptiness of essential nature exists in the world, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists in the world; the applications of mindfulness [F.296.b] exist in the world, the correct exertions exist in the world, the supports for miraculous ability exist in the world, the faculties exist in the world, the powers exist in the world, the branches of enlightenment exist in the world, and the noble eightfold path exists in the world; the truths of the noble ones exist in the world, the liberations exist in the world, the serial steps of meditative absorption exist in the world, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist in the world, the extrasensory powers exist in the world, the meditative stabilities exist in the world, the dhāraṇī gateways exist in the world, the powers of the tathāgatas exist in the world, the fearlessnesses exist in the world, the kinds of exact knowledge exist in the world, great loving kindness exists in the world, great compassion exists in the world, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas exist in the world; the realm of phenomena exists in the world, the very limit of reality exists in the world, the real nature exists in the world, the unmistakable real nature exists in the world, the one and only real nature exists in the world, the reality of phenomena exists in the world, the abiding nature of reality exists in the world, the maturity of phenomena exists in the world, the five eyes exist in the world, the fruit of having entered the stream exists in the world, the fruit of once-returner [F.297.a] exists in the world, the fruit of non-returner exists in the world, arhatship exists in the world, and individual enlightenment exists in the world; and knowledge of all the dharmas exists in the world, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists in the world, and all-aspect omniscience exists in the world. [B22]

- 19.13 “Kauśika, when bodhisattvas exist, the path of the ten virtuous actions exists as a designation in the world, the four meditative concentrations exist as designations in the world, the four immeasurable attitudes exist as designations in the world, the four formless absorptions exist as designations in the world, and the five extrasensory powers exist as designations in the world; the perfection of generosity exists as a designation in the world, the perfection of ethical discipline exists as a designation in the world, the perfection of tolerance exists as a designation in the world, the perfection of perseverance exists as a designation in the world, the perfection of meditative concentration exists as a designation in the world, and the perfection of wisdom exists as a designation in the world; the emptiness of internal phenomena exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of external phenomena exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of emptiness exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of great extent exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists as a designation in [F.297.b] the world, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of the unlimited exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of inherent nature exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of all phenomena exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of nonentities exists as a designation in the world, the emptiness of essential nature exists as a designation in the world, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists as a designation in the world; the applications of mindfulness exist as designations in the world, the correct exertions exist as designations in the world, the supports for miraculous ability exist as designations in the world, the faculties exist as designations in the world, the powers exist as designations in the world, the branches of enlightenment exist as designations in the world, and the noble eightfold path exists as a designation in the world; the truths of the noble ones exist as designations in the world, the liberations exist as designations in the world, the serial steps of meditative absorption exist as designations in the world, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist as designations in the world, the extrasensory powers exist as designations in the world, the meditative stabilities [F.298.a] exist as designations in the world, the dhāraṇī gateways exist as designations in the world, the powers of the tathāgatas exist as designations in the world, the fearlessnesses exist as designations in the world, the kinds of exact knowledge exist as designations in the world, great compassion exists as a designation in the world, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist as designations in the world; knowledge of all the dharmas exists as a designation in the world, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists as a designation in the world, and all-aspect omniscience exists as a designation in the world; those who have entered the stream exist as a designation in the world, once-returners exist as a designation in the world, non-returners exist as a designation in the world, arhatship exists as a designation in the world, individual enlightenment exists as a designation in the world, and tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist as a designation in the world.

19.14 “Kauśika, just as when the orb of the moon exists, all the medicinal plants,⁷¹⁶ the constellations, and the stars exist as designations in the world, in the same way, Kauśika, when the orb of the moon-like bodhisattva exists, all the medicinal plants of virtuous conduct, perfect conduct, the path of the ten virtuous actions, the meditative concentrations, the immeasurable attitudes, the formless absorptions, the extrasensory powers, the perfections, the virtuous attributes on the side of enlightenment, emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness, the truths of the noble ones, [F.298.b] the liberations, the serial steps of meditative absorption, the meditative stabilities, the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers, the fearlessnesses, the kinds of exact knowledge, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist as designations. All the constellations and stars that are the trainees, those with no more training, the śrāvakas, and the pratyekabuddhas exist as designations, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas also exist as a designation in the world. It is the bodhisattva great beings who reveal the mundane and supramundane doctrines to beings even at the times when the lord buddhas do not appear in the world.

- 19.15 “If you ask why, it is because the vehicle of the śrāvakas, the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas, and the Great Vehicle have originated from bodhisattvas, and that skillful means with which those bodhisattva great beings are endowed, on account of which they practice the perfection of generosity, practice the perfection of ethical discipline, practice the perfection of tolerance, practice the perfection of perseverance, practice the perfection of meditative concentration, and practice the perfection of wisdom; practice the emptiness of internal phenomena, practice the emptiness of external phenomena, practice the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, practice the emptiness of emptiness, practice the emptiness of great extent, practice the emptiness of ultimate reality, practice the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, practice the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, practice the emptiness of the unlimited, practice the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, practice [F.299.a] the emptiness of nonexclusion, practice the emptiness of inherent nature, practice the emptiness of all phenomena, practice the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, practice the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, practice the emptiness of nonentities, practice the emptiness of essential nature, and practice the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; practice the applications of mindfulness, practice the correct exertions, practice the supports for miraculous ability, practice the faculties, practice the powers, practice the branches of enlightenment, and practice the noble eightfold path; practice the truths of the noble ones, practice the eight liberations, practice the serial steps of meditative absorption, practice the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, practice the extrasensory powers, practice the meditative stabilities, practice the dhāraṇī gateways, practice the powers of the tathāgatas, practice the fearlessnesses, practice the kinds of exact knowledge, practice great compassion, and practice the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; do not fall to the level of the śrāvakas and do not actualize the level of the pratyekabuddhas; bring beings to maturation and refine a buddhafiield; and embrace [F.299.b] the perfect life, embrace being the perfect being, embrace having the perfect buddhafiield, embrace being the perfect bodhisattva, and subsequently attain all-aspect omniscience—one should know that that skillful means, too, has originated from the perfection of wisdom.

19.16 “Moreover, Kauśika, sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom will also be endowed with these good qualities of the present life and these good qualities of other lives.”

19.17 Śakra then asked, “Blessed Lord, what are the good qualities of the present life with which those sons or daughters of good families will be endowed, who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom?”

19.18 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom will not, unless it is the maturation of a past action, die from poisoning, will not die from weapons, will not die in fire, will not die in water, up to will not die from the one hundred and one diseases. In place of the afflictions that royalty and ministers might subject them to, if sons or daughters of good families go to the royal palace while chanting this perfection of wisdom by heart, [F.300.a] those seeking an opportunity to inflict harm on them will find no opportunity to inflict harm. The princes and the king’s chief ministers will consider it is worth asking them to speak and worth conversing with them and will think they are worth pleasing. If you ask why, it is because they think that way on account of the brilliance and power of this very perfection of wisdom. If sons or daughters of good families go to the royal palace while chanting this perfection of wisdom by heart, those princes and the king’s chief ministers will think they should use pleasing words when asking them to speak and when conversing with them, and will think they should welcome them with pleasure. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those sons or daughters of good families have been attentive to the mind that feels loving kindness, the mind that feels compassion, the mind that feels empathetic joy, and the mind that has an equanimity toward all beings. Kauśika, these are the good qualities of the present life with which those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom will be endowed.

- 19.19 “Kauśika, if you ask what are the good qualities of other lives with which they will be endowed, they are these: they will never be separated from the path of the ten virtuous actions, and they will never be separated from the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the six perfections, the applications of mindfulness, the correct exertions, the supports for miraculous ability, the faculties, the powers, the branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path, or the truths [F.300.b] of the noble ones, the meditative concentrations, the immeasurable attitudes, the formless absorptions, the liberations, the serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the extrasensory powers, the meditative stabilities, the dhāraṇī gateways, the powers of the tathāgatas, the fearlessnesses, the kinds of exact knowledge, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas.
- 19.20 “Except when governed by the aspiration to bring beings to maturity, they will never be born in the hells, never be born in the animal realm, and never be born in the world of Yama. They will never have defective limbs, never be born in an impoverished family, and never be born in a family of reed-workers, or in a family of pulkasas,⁷¹⁷ blacksmiths, sweepers, butchers, pig slaughterers, or outcastes. They will always and without interruption be endowed with the thirty-two major marks of a great person. They will be reborn miraculously in those world systems where the lord buddhas are residing and maintaining themselves, which is to say, they will never be separated from the extrasensory powers of the bodhisattvas. They will proceed from buddhafield to buddhafield at will to see the lord buddhas, pay homage to them, venerate them, and listen to the Dharma, which is to say, they will proceed from buddhafield to buddhafield, bringing beings to maturity and [F.301.a] refining a buddhafield as well.
- 19.21 “Kauśika, so it is that those sons or daughters of good families who want these good qualities to be perfected should take up, should uphold, should recite, should master, and should focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom and not be separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience. Until they fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, they will be endowed with the good qualities of this life and those good qualities of other lives.”
- 19.22 This completes the nineteenth chapter from “The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines.”

CHAPTER 20

- 20.1 Then a hundred or so rival tīrthikas and wandering mendicants intent on looking for an opportunity to inflict harm approached the place where the Blessed One was. Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, had the thought, ‘These rival tīrthikas and wandering mendicants intent on looking for an opportunity to inflict harm have approached the place where the Blessed One is. So that when the perfection of wisdom is being preached, those rival tīrthikas and wandering mendicants do not, having approached the Blessed One, create obstacles, I should by all means chant by heart as much of this perfection of wisdom as I have taken up from the Blessed One.’
- 20.2 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, chanted by heart as much of the perfection of wisdom as he had taken up from the Blessed One. Thereupon, those rival tīrthikas and wandering mendicants circumambulated the Blessed One from afar, in a clockwise direction, and then went back on the same path and through the same [F.301.b] door.
- 20.3 Then the venerable Śāradvatīputra thought, “What is the reason those rival tīrthikas and wandering mendicants circumambulated the Blessed One from afar, in a clockwise direction, and then went back on the same path and through the same door?”
- 20.4 The Blessed One, knowing in his mind the thought occurring to the venerable Śāradvatīputra, said to the venerable Śāradvatīputra, “Śāradvatīputra, this is Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, focusing his thoughts, as he habitually does, on the perfection of wisdom. For that reason those rival tīrthikas and wandering mendicants, having circumambulated me from afar, in a clockwise direction, have gone back on that same path and through that same door. Śāradvatīputra, among those rival tīrthikas and wandering mendicants I do not see any with a bright mind. All those rival tīrthikas and wandering mendicants have malicious thoughts and are only intent on looking for an opportunity to inflict harm, even though they think only this assembly is the one they should come into. Śāradvatīputra, I do not see among the beings of this world, with its gods, demons, Brahmā deities, virtuous ascetics, and brahmin priests, any, while this perfection of wisdom is being taught, who would approach with thoughts of hatred, intent on looking for an opportunity to harm. It is impossible.

20.5 “If you ask why, Śāradvatīputra, it is because this perfection of wisdom is taken care of⁷¹⁸ by the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm; the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm, the Yāma realm, the Tuṣita realm, the Nirmāṇarati realm, and the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm; and the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm, the Brahmapurohita realm, [F.302.a] the Brahmapāṛṣadya realm, the Mahābrahmā realm, the Ābha realm, the Parīttābha realm, the Apramāṇābha realm, the Ābhāsvara realm, the Śubha realm, the Parīttāśubha realm, the Apramāṇāśubha realm, the Śubhakṛtsna realm, the Vṛha realm, the Parīttavṛha realm, the Apramāṇavṛha realm, the Vṛhatphala realm, the Avṛha realm, the Atapa realm, the Sudṛśa realm, the Sudarśana realm, and the Akaniṣṭha realm in this great billionfold world system—all of them, as many as there are—and by as many śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas as there are, and by as many bodhisattvas as there are. If you ask why, it is because absolutely all of them have originated from the perfection of wisdom.

20.6 “Moreover, Śāradvatīputra, this perfection of wisdom is taken care of by however many lord buddhas there are, along with their communities of śrāvakas, and however many pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattva great beings, gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas there are, all of them, in the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā. If you ask why, it is because absolutely all of them have originated from the perfection of wisdom. This perfection of wisdom is taken care of by however many lord buddhas there are, along with their communities of śrāvakas, and however many pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattva great beings, gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas there are, [F.302.b] all of them, in the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā. If you ask why, it is because absolutely all of them have originated from the perfection of wisdom. This perfection of wisdom is taken care of by however many lord buddhas there are, along with their communities of śrāvakas, and however many pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattva great beings, gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas there are, all of them, in the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā. If you ask why, it is because absolutely all of them have originated from the perfection of wisdom. This perfection of wisdom is taken care of by however many lord buddhas there are, along with their communities of śrāvakas, and however many pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattva great beings, gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas there are, all of them, in the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā. If you ask why, it is because absolutely all of them have originated from the perfection of wisdom. This perfection of wisdom is taken care of by however many lord buddhas there are, along with their communities of śrāvakas, and however many pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattva great beings, gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, [F.303.a] garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas there are, all of them, in the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā. If you ask why, it is because absolutely all of them have originated from the perfection of wisdom. This perfection of wisdom is taken care of by however many lord buddhas there are, along with their communities of śrāvakas, and however many pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattva great beings, gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas there are, all of them, in the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā. If you ask why, it is because absolutely all of them have originated from the perfection of wisdom. This perfection of wisdom is taken care of by however many lord buddhas there are, along with their communities of śrāvakas, and however many pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattva great beings, gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas there are, all of them, in the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā. If you ask why, it is because absolutely all of them have originated from the perfection of wisdom. This perfection of wisdom is taken care of by however many lord buddhas there are, along with their communities of śrāvakas, [F.303.b] and however many pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattva great beings, gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas there are, all of them, in the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā. If you ask why, it is because absolutely all of them have originated from the perfection of wisdom. This perfection of wisdom is taken care of by however many lord buddhas there are, along with their communities of śrāvakas, and however many pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattva great beings, gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas there are, all of them, in the world systems of the direction below, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā. If you ask why, it is because absolutely all of them have originated from the perfection of wisdom. This perfection of wisdom is taken care of by however many lord buddhas there are, along with their communities of śrāvakas, and however many pratyekabuddhas, bodhisattva great beings, gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas there are, all of them, in the world systems of the direction above, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā. If you ask why, it is because absolutely all of them have originated from the perfection of wisdom.”

20.7 Then evil Māra had the thought, “It is certain that from among these four assemblies of the tathāgata, arhat, [F.304.a] perfectly complete buddha that are present here, and these gods living in the desire realm and these gods living in the form realm that are also present, that there are bodhisattva great beings who will be prophesied to attain unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, so I should go to where the Blessed One is and create an obstacle.”

20.8 Evil Māra, wishing to go to where the Blessed One was, then conjured up a massive army with four cohorts. Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, had the thought, “Oh! This evil Māra has conjured up a massive army with four cohorts with the wish to go to where the Blessed One is. However, this array of evil Māra’s massive army with four cohorts cannot be compared with the array of King Bimbisāra’s army with four cohorts, it cannot be compared with the arrays of the massive armies with four cohorts of King Prasenajit, the Śākyas, or the Licchavis. This evil Māra has for a long time been looking for an opportunity to inflict harm on the Blessed One, seeking for an opportunity to inflict harm with the intention of hurting beings who are engaging correctly,⁷¹⁹ so I should focus on this perfection of wisdom as is my habit and chant it by heart.”

20.9 Thinking like that, Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, focused on this perfection of wisdom as was his habit and chanted it clearly from memory, and as Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, clearly chanted this perfection of wisdom by heart, so too, did those evil [F.304.b] māras go back on that same path and through that same door.

20.10 Then those gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, up to the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm, as many as there were in that assembly, conjured up many divine flowers and sets of robes that stayed in the sky, from where they sprinkled them over where the Blessed One was. Having showered them over where the Blessed One was, they said, “May the human beings of Jambudvīpa practice this perfection of wisdom for a long time, because, for as long as these human beings of Jambudvīpa practice this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete Buddha will not disappear, the Dharma will remain for a long time, and the precious jewel of the Saṅgha will become manifest in the world. For as long as these human beings of Jambudvīpa practice this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas in this great billionfold world system, up to the world systems of the ten directions will not disappear, the Dharma will remain for a long time, and the precious jewel of the Saṅgha will continue to become manifest in the world. The more distinguished conduct of bodhisattva great beings will also exist. Know that the place where the sons or daughters of good families commit this perfection of wisdom to writing and make it into a book, the place where they uphold it, is endowed with luminosity.⁷²⁰ Know that that place has a protector and is free from darkness.”

20.11 Then the Blessed One said to Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, and to the other gods, up to [F.305.a] those of Akaniṣṭha, “Kauśika, it is so, it is so! Gods, it is so, it is so! For as long as these human beings of Jambudvīpa practice this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete Buddha will not disappear, the Dharma will remain for a long time, and the precious jewel of the Saṅgha will become manifest in the world. For as long as these human beings of Jambudvīpa practice this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas in this great billionfold world system, up to the world systems of the ten directions will not disappear, the Dharma will remain for a long time, and the precious jewel of the Saṅgha will become manifest in the world. The more distinguished conduct of bodhisattva great beings will also exist. I know that the place where the sons or daughters of good families commit this perfection of wisdom to writing and make it into a book, the place where they uphold it, is endowed with luminosity. I know that that place has a protector and is free from darkness.”

20.12 Then those gods, having conjured up many divine flowers and showered them over where the Blessed One was, made this statement: “Blessed Lord, Māra and the gods included within the class of māras who seek an opportunity to inflict harm will find no opportunity to inflict harm on any sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom. Blessed Lord, we too [F.305.b] will always guard, protect, and defend those sons or daughters of good families without interruption. If you ask why, it is because we consider those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom as the Teacher or as amounting to the Teacher’s equal.”

20.13 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom are not endowed with feeble roots of virtue.

20.14 “Blessed Lord, those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom have fulfilled their duties under the conquerors of the past. Blessed Lord, those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom will have venerated many buddhas, and they will have been taken care of by spiritual mentors. If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because it is through this, namely, the perfection of wisdom, that they must seek for all-aspect omniscience; because it is through this, Blessed Lord, namely, [F.306.a] all-aspect omniscience, that they must seek for the perfection of wisdom.

20.15 “If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because the perfection of wisdom is not one thing and all-aspect omniscience another, and all-aspect omniscience is not one thing and the perfection of wisdom another, so the perfection of wisdom and all-aspect omniscience are without duality and cannot be divided into two.”

20.16 “Kauśika, so it is, so it is!” said the Blessed One. “Kauśika, the all-aspect omniscience of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas has originated from the perfection of wisdom. The perfection of wisdom has originated from all-aspect omniscience. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the perfection of wisdom is not one thing and all-aspect omniscience another, and all-aspect omniscience is not one thing and the perfection of wisdom another, so, in that case, the perfection of wisdom and all-aspect omniscience are without duality and cannot be divided into two.”

20.17 This completes the twentieth chapter from “The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines.”

CHAPTER 21

- 21.1 Then the venerable Ānanda said to the Blessed One, “In the manner the Blessed Lord proclaims the name of the perfection of wisdom he does not proclaim the name of the perfection of generosity, [F.306.b] does not proclaim the name of the perfection of ethical discipline, does not proclaim the name of the perfection of tolerance, does not proclaim the name of the perfection of perseverance, and does not proclaim the name of the perfection of meditative concentration. In the manner the Blessed Lord proclaims the name of the perfection of wisdom he does not proclaim the emptiness of internal phenomena, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of external phenomena, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of emptiness, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of great extent, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of ultimate reality, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of the unlimited, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of nonexclusion, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of inherent nature, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of all phenomena, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of nonentities, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of essential nature, [F.307.a] and does not proclaim the name of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. In the manner the Blessed Lord proclaims the name of the perfection of wisdom he does not proclaim the name of the applications of mindfulness, does not proclaim the name of the correct exertions, does not proclaim the name of the supports for miraculous ability, does not proclaim the name of the faculties, does not proclaim the name of the powers, does not proclaim the name of the branches of enlightenment, and does not proclaim the name of the noble eightfold path; does not proclaim the name of the truths of the noble ones, does not proclaim the name of the meditative concentrations, does not proclaim the name of the immeasurable attitudes, does not proclaim the name of the formless absorptions, does not proclaim the name of the eight liberations, does not proclaim the name of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, does not proclaim the name of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, does not proclaim the name of the extrasensory powers, does not proclaim the name of the meditative stabilities, and does not proclaim the name of the [F.307.b] dhāraṇī gateways. In the manner the Blessed Lord proclaims the name of the perfection of wisdom he does not proclaim the name of the ten powers of the tathāgatas, does not proclaim the name of the four fearlessnesses, does not proclaim the name of the four kinds of exact knowledge, does not proclaim the name of great compassion, and does not proclaim the name of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.”

21.2 “Ānanda,” said the Blessed One, “this is because this perfection of wisdom has precedence over and is the guide of the other perfections, all the emptinesses, the thirty-seven factors conducive to enlightenment, the four truths of the noble ones, the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the extrasensory powers, the meditative stabilities, the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.

21.3 “Ānanda, do you think that the generosity that is not dedicated to all-aspect omniscience is the perfection of generosity?

“No, Blessed Lord!” he replied.

21.4 “Do you think that the ethical discipline that is not dedicated to all-aspect omniscience [F.308.a] is the perfection of ethical discipline?” asked the Blessed One.

“No, Blessed Lord!” he replied.

21.5 “Do you think that the tolerance that is not dedicated to all-aspect omniscience is the perfection of tolerance?” asked the Blessed One.

“No, Blessed Lord!” he replied.

21.6 “Do you think that the perseverance that is not dedicated to all-aspect omniscience is the perfection of perseverance?” asked the Blessed One.

“No, Blessed Lord!” he replied.

- 21.7 “Do you think that the meditative concentration that is not dedicated to all-aspect omniscience is the perfection of meditative concentration?” asked the Blessed One.
- “No, Blessed Lord!” he replied.
- 21.8 “Do you think that the wisdom that is not dedicated to all-aspect omniscience is the perfection of wisdom?” asked the Blessed One.
- 21.9 “No, Blessed Lord!” he replied. “But in that case, Blessed Lord, how is generosity dedicated to all-aspect omniscience when it is the perfection of generosity? How is ethical discipline dedicated to all-aspect omniscience when it is the perfection of ethical discipline? How is tolerance dedicated to all-aspect omniscience when it is the perfection of tolerance? How is perseverance dedicated to all-aspect omniscience when it is the perfection of perseverance? How is meditative concentration dedicated to all-aspect omniscience when it is the perfection of meditative concentration? How is wisdom dedicated to all-aspect omniscience [F.308.b] when it is the perfection of wisdom?”
- 21.10 “Ānanda,” the Blessed One answered, “generosity that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nondual manner is the perfection of generosity. Generosity that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nonarising manner and in a nonapprehending manner is the perfection of generosity. Ethical discipline that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nondual manner is the perfection of ethical discipline. Ethical discipline that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nonarising manner and in a nonapprehending manner is the perfection of ethical discipline. Tolerance that is dedicated to all-
aspect omniscience in a nondual manner is the perfection of tolerance. Tolerance that is dedicated to all-
aspect omniscience in a nonarising manner and in a nonapprehending manner is the perfection of tolerance. Perseverance that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nondual manner is the perfection of perseverance. Perseverance that is dedicated to all-
aspect omniscience in a nonarising manner and in a nonapprehending manner is the perfection of perseverance. Meditative concentration that is dedicated to [F.309.a] all-aspect omniscience in a nondual manner is the perfection of meditative concentration. Meditative concentration that is dedicated to all-
aspect omniscience in a nonarising manner and in a nonapprehending manner is the perfection of meditative concentration. Wisdom that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nondual manner is the perfection of wisdom. Wisdom that is dedicated to all-
aspect omniscience in a nonarising manner and in a nonapprehending manner is the perfection of wisdom.”

21.11 Ānanda then asked, “Blessed Lord, why is generosity that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nondual manner, in a nonarising manner, and in a nonapprehending manner the perfection of generosity? Why is ethical discipline that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nondual manner, in a nonarising manner, and in a nonapprehending manner the perfection of ethical discipline? Why is tolerance that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nondual manner, in a nonarising manner, and in a nonapprehending manner the perfection of tolerance? Why is perseverance that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nondual manner, in a nonarising manner, and in a nonapprehending manner the perfection of perseverance? Why is meditative concentration that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nondual manner, in a nonarising manner, and in a nonapprehending manner the perfection of meditative concentration? [F.309.b] Why is wisdom that is dedicated to all-aspect omniscience in a nondual manner, in a nonarising manner, and in a nonapprehending manner the perfection of wisdom?”

21.12 The Blessed One replied, “It is because of the nondual manner of physical forms, it is because of the nondual manner of feelings, it is because of the nondual manner of perceptions, it is because of the nondual manner of formative predispositions, and it is because of the nondual manner of consciousness; it is because of the nondual manner of the eyes, it is because of the nondual manner of the ears, it is because of the nondual manner of the nose, it is because of the nondual manner of the tongue, it is because of the nondual manner of the body, and it is because of the nondual manner of the mental faculty; it is because of the nondual manner of sights, it is because of the nondual manner of sounds, it is because of the nondual manner of odors, it is because of the nondual manner of tastes, it is because of the nondual manner of tangibles, and it is because of the nondual manner of mental phenomena; it is because of the nondual manner of visual consciousness, it is because of the nondual manner of auditory consciousness, it is because of the nondual manner of olfactory consciousness, it is because of the nondual manner of gustatory consciousness, it is because of the nondual manner of tactile consciousness, and it is because of the nondual manner of mental consciousness; it is because of the nondual manner of visually compounded sensory contact, it is because of the nondual manner of aurally compounded sensory contact, it is because of the nondual manner of nasally compounded sensory contact, it is because of the nondual manner of lingually compounded sensory contact, it is because of the nondual manner of corporeally compounded sensory contact, and it is because of the nondual manner of mentally compounded sensory contact; it is because of the nondual manner of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory

contact, it is because of the nondual manner of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, it is because of the nondual manner of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, it is because of the nondual manner of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, it is because of the nondual manner [F.310.a] of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and it is because of the nondual manner of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; it is because of the nondual manner of the earth element, it is because of the nondual manner of the water element, it is because of the nondual manner of the fire element, it is because of the nondual manner of the wind element, it is because of the nondual manner of the space element, and it is because of the nondual manner of the consciousness element; it is because of the nondual manner of ignorance, it is because of the nondual manner of formative predispositions, it is because of the nondual manner of consciousness, it is because of the nondual manner of name and form, it is because of the nondual manner of the six sense fields, it is because of the nondual manner of sensory contact, it is because of the nondual manner of sensation, it is because of the nondual manner of craving, it is because of the nondual manner of grasping, it is because of the nondual manner of the rebirth process, it is because of the nondual manner of birth, and it is because of the nondual manner of aging and death; it is because of the nondual manner of the perfection of generosity, it is because of the nondual manner of the perfection of ethical discipline, it is because of the nondual manner of the perfection of tolerance, it is because of the nondual manner of the perfection of perseverance, it is because of the nondual manner of the perfection of meditative concentration, and it is because of the nondual manner of the perfection of wisdom; it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of internal phenomena, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of external phenomena, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of emptiness, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of great extent, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of ultimate reality, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, it is because of the nondual manner [F.310.b] of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of the unlimited, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of nonexclusion, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of inherent nature, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of all phenomena, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of nonentities, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of essential nature, and it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; it is because of the nondual manner of the applications of mindfulness, it is because of the nondual manner of the correct exertions, it is because of the nondual manner of the supports for miraculous ability, it is because of the nondual manner of the faculties, it is because of the nondual manner of the powers, it is because of the nondual manner of the branches of enlightenment, and it is because of the nondual manner of the noble eightfold path; it is because of the nondual manner of the truths of the noble ones, it is because of the nondual manner of the meditative concentrations, it is because of the nondual manner of the immeasurable attitudes, it is because of the nondual manner of the formless absorptions, it is because of the nondual manner of the liberations, it is because of the nondual manner of the serial steps of meditative absorption, it is because of the nondual manner of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, it is because of the nondual manner of the extrasensory powers, [F.311.a] it is because of the nondual manner of the meditative stabilities, and it is because of the nondual manner of the dhāraṇī gateways; it is because of the nondual manner of the ten powers of the tathāgatas, it is because of the nondual manner of the four fearlessnesses, it is because of the nondual manner of the four kinds of exact knowledge, it is because of the nondual manner of great compassion, and it is because of the nondual manner of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and it is because of the nondual manner of the fruit of having entered the stream, it is because of the nondual manner of the fruit of once-returner, it is because of the nondual manner of the fruit of non-returner, it is because of the nondual manner of arhatship, it is because of the nondual manner of individual enlightenment, and it is because of the nondual manner of unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.”

- 21.13 Ānanda then asked, “Why is it because of the nondual manner of physical forms, why is it because of the nondual manner of feelings, why is it because of the nondual manner of perceptions, why is it because of the nondual manner of formative predispositions, and why is it because of the nondual manner of consciousness? Why is it because of the nondual manner of the eyes, why is it because of the nondual manner of the ears, why is it because of the nondual manner of the nose, why is it because of the nondual manner of the tongue, why is it because of the nondual manner of the body, and why is it because of the nondual manner of the mental faculty? Why is it because of the nondual manner of sights, why is it because of the nondual manner of sounds, why is it because of the nondual manner of odors, why is it because of the nondual manner of tastes, why is it because of the nondual manner of tangibles, and why is it because of the nondual manner of mental phenomena? [F.311.b] Why is it because of the nondual manner of visual consciousness, why is it because of the nondual manner of auditory consciousness, why is it because of the nondual manner of olfactory consciousness, why is it because of the nondual manner of gustatory consciousness, why is it because of the nondual manner of tactile consciousness, and why is it because of the nondual manner of mental consciousness? Why is it because of the nondual manner of visually compounded sensory contact, why is it because of the nondual manner of aurally compounded sensory contact, why is it because of the nondual manner of nasally compounded sensory contact, why is it because of the nondual manner of lingually compounded sensory contact, why is it because of the nondual manner of corporeally compounded sensory contact, and why is it because of the nondual manner of mentally compounded sensory contact? Why is it because of the nondual manner of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, why is it because of the nondual manner of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, why is it because of the nondual manner of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, why is it because of the nondual manner of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, why is it because of the nondual manner of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and why is it because of the nondual manner of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact? Why is it because of the nondual manner of the earth element, why is it because of the nondual manner of the water element, why is it because of the nondual manner of the fire element, why is it because of the nondual manner of the wind element, why is it because of the nondual manner of the space element, and why is it because of [F.312.a] the nondual manner of the consciousness element? Why is it because of the nondual manner of ignorance, why is it because of the nondual manner of formative predispositions, why is it because of the nondual manner of consciousness, why is it because of the nondual manner of name and form, why is it because of the nondual manner of the six sense fields, why is it because of the nondual manner of sensory contact, why is it because of the nondual manner of sensation, why is it because of the nondual manner of craving, why is it because of the nondual manner of grasping, why is it because of the nondual manner of the rebirth process, why is it because of the nondual manner of birth, and why is it because of the nondual manner of aging and death? Why is it because of the nondual manner of the perfection of generosity, why is it because of the nondual manner of the perfection of ethical discipline, why is it because of the nondual manner of the perfection of tolerance, why is it because of the nondual manner of the perfection of perseverance, why is it because of the nondual manner of the perfection of meditative concentration, and why is it because of the nondual manner of the perfection of wisdom? Why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of internal phenomena, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of external phenomena, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of emptiness, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of great extent, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of ultimate reality, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, why is it because of the nondual manner [F.312.b] of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of the unlimited, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of nonexclusion, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of inherent nature, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of all phenomena, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of nonentities, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of essential nature, and why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities? Why is it because of the nondual manner of the applications of mindfulness, why is it because of the nondual manner of the correct exertions, why is it because of the nondual manner of the supports for miraculous ability, why is it because of the nondual manner of the faculties, why is it because of the nondual manner of the powers, why is it because of the nondual manner of the branches of enlightenment, and why is it because of the nondual manner of the noble eightfold path? Why is it because of the nondual manner of the truths of the noble ones, why is it because of the nondual manner of the meditative concentrations, why is it because of the nondual manner of the immeasurable attitudes, why is it because of the nondual manner of the formless absorptions, why is it because of the nondual manner of the eight liberations, why is it because of the nondual manner [F.313.a] of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, why is it because of the nondual manner of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, why is it because of the nondual manner of the extrasensory powers, why is it because of the nondual manner of the meditative stabilities, and why is it because of the nondual manner of the dhāraṇī gateways? Why is it because of the nondual manner of the ten powers of the tathāgatas, why is it because of the nondual manner of the four fearlessnesses, why is it because of the nondual manner of the four kinds of exact knowledge, why is it because of the nondual manner of great compassion, and why is it because of the nondual manner of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas? And why is it because of the nondual manner of the fruit of having entered the stream, why is it because of the nondual manner of the fruit of once-returner, why is it because of the nondual manner of the fruit of non-returner, why is it because of the nondual manner of arhatship, why is it because of the nondual manner of individual enlightenment, why is it because of the nondual manner of the knowledge of the aspects of the path, why is it because of the nondual manner of all-aspect omniscience, and why is it because of the nondual manner of unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment?" [B23]

21.14 "Ānanda," replied the Blessed One, "it is because physical forms are empty of physical forms. If you ask why, it is because these two, physical forms and the perfections, are without duality and [F.313.b] cannot be divided into two. It is because feelings are empty of feelings. If you ask why, it is because these two, feelings and the perfections are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because perceptions are empty of perceptions. If you ask why, it is because these two, perceptions and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because formative predispositions are empty of formative predispositions. If you ask why, it is because these two, formative predispositions and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because consciousness is empty of consciousness. If you ask why, it is because these two, consciousness and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

21.15 "It is because the eyes are empty of the eyes. If you ask why, it is because these two, the eyes and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the ears are empty of the ears. If you ask why, it is because these two, the ears and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the nose is empty of the nose. If you ask why, it is because these two, the nose and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the tongue is empty of the tongue. If you ask why, it is because these two, the tongue and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the body is empty of the body. If you ask why, it is because these two, the body and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because mental faculty is empty of the mental faculty. If you ask why, it is because these two, the mental faculty and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because sights are empty of sights. If you ask why, it is because these two, sights and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because sounds are empty of sounds. If you ask why, it is because these two, sounds and the perfections, [F.314.a] are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because odors are empty of odors. If you ask why, it is because these two, odors and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because tastes are empty of tastes. If you ask why, it is because these two, tastes and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because tangibles are empty of tangibles. If you ask why, it is because these two, tangibles and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because mental phenomena are empty of mental phenomena. If you ask why, it is because these two, mental phenomena and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because visual consciousness is empty of visual consciousness. If you ask why, it is because these two, visual consciousness and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because auditory consciousness is empty of auditory consciousness. If you ask why, it is because these two, auditory consciousness and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because olfactory consciousness is empty of olfactory consciousness. If you ask why, it is because these two, olfactory consciousness and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because gustatory consciousness is empty of gustatory consciousness. If you ask why, it is because these two, gustatory consciousness and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because tactile consciousness is empty of tactile consciousness. If you ask why, it is because these two, tactile consciousness and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because mental consciousness is empty of mental consciousness. If you ask why, it is because these two, mental consciousness [F.314.b] and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because visually compounded sensory contact is empty of visually compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, visually compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because aurally compounded sensory contact is empty of aurally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, aurally compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because nasally compounded sensory contact is empty of nasally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, nasally compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because lingually compounded sensory contact is empty of lingually compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, lingually compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because corporeally compounded sensory contact is empty of corporeally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, corporeally compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because mentally compounded sensory contact is empty of mentally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, mentally compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality [F.315.a] and cannot be divided into two. It is because feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are empty of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

21.16 “It is because the earth element is empty of the earth element. If you ask why, it is because these two, the earth element and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the water element is empty of the water element. If you ask why, it is because these two, the water element and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the fire element is empty of the fire element. If you ask why, it is because these two, the fire element and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the wind element is empty of the wind element. If you ask why, it is because these two, the wind element and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. [F.315.b] It is because the space element is empty of the space element. If you ask why, it is because these two, the space element and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the consciousness element is empty of the consciousness element. If you ask why, it is because these two, the consciousness element and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

21.17 “It is because ignorance is empty of ignorance. If you ask why, it is because these two, ignorance and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because formative predispositions are empty of formative predispositions. If you ask why, it is because these two, formative predispositions and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because consciousness is empty of consciousness. If you ask why, it is because these two, consciousness and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because name and form are empty of name and form. If you ask why, it is because these two, name and form and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the six sense fields are empty of the six sense fields. If you ask why, it is because these two, the six sense fields and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because sensory contact is empty of sensory contact. If you ask why, it is because these two, sensory contact and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because sensation is empty of sensation. If you ask why, it is because these two, sensation and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because craving is empty of craving. If you ask why, it is because these two, craving and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because grasping is empty of grasping. [F.316.a] If you ask why, it is because these two, grasping and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the rebirth process is empty of the rebirth process. If you ask why, it is because these two, the rebirth process and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because birth is empty of birth. If you ask why, it is because these two, birth and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because aging and death are empty of aging and death. If you ask why, it is because these two, aging and death and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

21.18 “It is because the perfection of generosity is empty of the perfection of generosity. If you ask why, it is because these two, the perfection of generosity and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the perfection of ethical discipline is empty of the perfection of ethical discipline. If you ask why, it is because these two, the perfection of ethical discipline and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the perfection of tolerance is empty of the perfection of tolerance. If you ask why, it is because these two, the perfection of tolerance and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the perfection of perseverance is empty of the perfection of perseverance. If you ask why, it is because these two, the perfection of perseverance and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the perfection of meditative concentration is empty of the perfection of meditative concentration. If you ask why, it is because these two, the perfection of meditative concentration and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the perfection of wisdom [F.316.b] is empty of the perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, it is because these two, the perfection of wisdom and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

21.19 “It is because the emptiness of internal phenomena is empty of the emptiness of internal phenomena. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of internal phenomena and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of external phenomena is empty of the emptiness of external phenomena. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of external phenomena and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is empty of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of emptiness is empty of the emptiness of emptiness. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of emptiness and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of great extent is empty of the emptiness of great extent. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of great extent and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of ultimate reality is empty of the emptiness of ultimate reality. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of ultimate reality and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is empty of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is empty of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of the unlimited [F.317.a] is empty of the emptiness of the unlimited. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of the unlimited and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is empty of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of nonexclusion is empty of the emptiness of nonexclusion. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of nonexclusion and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of inherent nature is empty of the emptiness of inherent nature. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of inherent nature and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of all phenomena is empty of the emptiness of all phenomena. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of all phenomena and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is empty of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is empty of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of nonentities is empty of the emptiness of nonentities. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of nonentities and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of essential nature is empty of the emptiness of essential nature. If you ask why, [F.317.b] it is because these two, the emptiness of essential nature and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is empty of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

21.20 “It is because the applications of mindfulness are empty of the applications of mindfulness. If you ask why, it is because these two, the applications of mindfulness and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the correct exertions are empty of the correct exertions. If you ask why, it is because these two, the correct exertions and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the supports for miraculous ability are empty of the supports for miraculous ability. If you ask why, it is because these two, the supports for miraculous ability and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the faculties are empty of the faculties. If you ask why, it is because these two, the faculties and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the powers are empty of the powers. If you ask why, it is because these two, the powers and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the branches of enlightenment are empty of the branches of enlightenment. If you ask why, it is because these two, the branches of enlightenment and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the path is empty of the path. If you ask why, it is because these two, the path and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

21.21 It is because the truths of the noble ones [F.318.a] are empty of the truths of the noble ones. If you ask why, it is because these two, the truths of the noble ones and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the meditative concentrations are empty of the meditative concentrations. If you ask why, it is because these two, the meditative concentrations and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the immeasurable attitudes are empty of the immeasurable attitudes. If you ask why, it is because these two, the immeasurable attitudes and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the formless absorptions are empty of the formless absorptions. If you ask why, it is because these two, the formless absorptions and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the liberations are empty of the liberations. If you ask why, it is because these two, the liberations and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the serial steps of meditative absorption are empty of the serial steps of meditative absorption. If you ask why, it is because these two, the serial steps of meditative absorption and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are empty of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. If you ask why, it is because these two, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the extrasensory powers [F.318.b] are empty of the extrasensory powers. If you ask why, it is because these two, the extrasensory powers and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the meditative stabilities are empty of the meditative stabilities. If you ask why, it is because these two, the meditative stabilities and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the dhāraṇī gateways are empty of the dhāraṇī gateways. If you ask why, it is because these two, the dhāraṇī gateways and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

21.22 “It is because the powers of the tathāgatas are empty of the powers of the tathāgatas. If you ask why, it is because these two, the powers of the tathāgatas and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the fearlessnesses are empty of the fearlessnesses. If you ask why, it is because these two, the fearlessnesses and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the kinds of exact knowledge are empty of the kinds of exact knowledge. If you ask why, it is because these two, the kinds of exact knowledge and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because great compassion is empty of great compassion. If you ask why, it is because these two, great compassion and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the distinct qualities of the buddhas are empty of the distinct qualities of the buddhas. If you ask why, it is because these two, the distinct qualities of the buddhas and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

21.23 “It is because the fruit of having entered the stream is empty of the fruit of having entered the stream. If you ask why, [F.319.a] it is because these two, the fruit of having entered the stream and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the fruit of once-returner is empty of the fruit of once-returner. If you ask why, it is because these two, the fruit of once-returner and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the fruit of non-returner is empty of the fruit of non-returner. If you ask why, it is because these two, the fruit of non-returner and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because arhatship is empty of arhatship. If you ask why, it is because these two, arhatship and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because individual enlightenment is empty of individual enlightenment. If you ask why, it is because these two, individual enlightenment and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because the knowledge of the aspects of the path is empty of the knowledge of the aspects of the path. If you ask why, it is because these two, the knowledge of the aspects of the path and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two. It is because unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment is empty of unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. If you ask why, it is because these two, unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment and the perfections, are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

21.24 “So it is, Ānanda, that just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over those five perfections, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over all the emptinesses, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the thirty-seven factors conducive to enlightenment, [F.319.b] just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the four truths of the noble ones, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the four meditative concentrations, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the four immeasurable attitudes, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the four formless absorptions, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the eight liberations, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the extrasensory powers, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over all the meditative stabilities, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over all the dhāraṇī gateways, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the ten powers of the tathāgatas, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the four fearlessnesses, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the four kinds of exact knowledge, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over knowledge of all the dharma, just the perfection of wisdom has precedence over the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and just the perfection of wisdom [F.320.a] has precedence over all-aspect omniscience.

21.25 “Ānanda, to illustrate, seeds sown on the great earth, having met with the collection of causes and conditions, flourish. The great earth is their foundation. Based on the great earth the seeds will grow. Similarly, based on the perfection of wisdom the five perfections flourish; the emptiness of internal phenomena flourishes, the emptiness of external phenomena flourishes, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena flourishes, the emptiness of emptiness flourishes, the emptiness of great extent flourishes, the emptiness of ultimate reality flourishes, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena flourishes, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena flourishes, the emptiness of the unlimited flourishes, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end flourishes, the emptiness of nonexclusion flourishes, the emptiness of inherent nature flourishes, the emptiness of all phenomena flourishes, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics flourishes, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended flourishes, the emptiness of nonentities flourishes, the emptiness of essential nature flourishes, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities flourishes; the applications of mindfulness flourish, the correct exertions flourish, the supports for miraculous ability flourish, the faculties flourish, the powers flourish, the branches of enlightenment flourish, and the noble eightfold path flourishes; the truths of the noble ones flourish, [F.320.b] the meditative concentrations flourish, the immeasurable attitudes flourish, the formless absorptions flourish, the eight liberations flourish, the serial steps of meditative absorption flourish, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation flourish, the extrasensory powers flourish, the meditative stabilities flourish, and the dhāraṇī gateways flourish; the ten powers of the tathāgatas flourish, the four fearlessnesses flourish, the four kinds of exact knowledge flourish, great compassion flourishes, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas flourish; and knowledge of all the dharmas flourishes, the knowledge of the aspects of the path flourishes, and all-aspect omniscience flourishes.

- 21.26 “Ānanda, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the five perfections flourish; with all-aspect omniscience as the basis all the emptinesses flourish; with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the four applications of mindfulness flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the four correct exertions flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the four supports for miraculous ability flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the five faculties flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis [F.321.a] the five powers flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the seven branches of enlightenment flourish, and with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the noble eightfold path flourishes; with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the four truths of the noble ones flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the four meditative concentrations flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the four immeasurable attitudes flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the four formless absorptions flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the eight liberations flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the nine serial steps of meditative absorption flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the extrasensory powers flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the meditative stabilities flourish, and with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the dhāraṇī gateways flourish; with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the ten powers of the tathāgatas flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the four fearlessnesses flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the four kinds of exact knowledge flourish, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis [F.321.b] great compassion flourishes, and with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas flourish; and with all-aspect omniscience as the basis knowledge of all the dharmas flourishes, with all-aspect omniscience as the basis the knowledge of the aspects of the path flourishes, and with all-aspect omniscience as the basis all-aspect omniscience flourishes.

21.27 “Ānanda, the perfection of wisdom consummates⁷²¹ the five perfections; consummates all the emptinesses; consummates the four applications of mindfulness, consummates the four correct exertions, consummates the four supports for miraculous ability, consummates the five faculties, consummates the five powers, consummates the seven branches of enlightenment, and consummates the noble eightfold path; consummates the four truths of the noble ones, consummates the four meditative concentrations, consummates the four immeasurable attitudes, consummates the four formless absorptions, consummates the eight liberations, consummates the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, consummates the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, consummates the extrasensory powers, consummates the meditative stabilities, and consummates the dhāraṇī gateways; consummates the ten powers of the tathāgatas, consummates the four fearlessnesses, consummates the four kinds of exact knowledge, [F.322.a] consummates great compassion, and consummates the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and consummates knowledge of all the dharmas, consummates the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and consummates all-aspect omniscience.”

21.28 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete Buddha has not yet proclaimed all the good qualities of the perfection of wisdom that I have heard from the Blessed Lord—those good qualities of sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, as many as there are, and those good qualities, as many as there are, that I, in the presence of the Blessed Lord, have taken up, upheld, recited, mastered, and propagated.

- 21.29 “Blessed Lord, it is by having taken up, upheld, recited, propagated, and having focused attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom that the path of the ten virtuous actions appears in the world; that the four meditative concentrations appear in the world, the four immeasurable attitudes appear in the world, the four formless absorptions appear in the world, and the five extrasensory powers appear in the world; that the perfection of generosity appears in the world, the perfection of ethical discipline appears in the world, [F.322.b] the perfection of tolerance appears in the world, the perfection of perseverance appears in the world, the perfection of meditative concentration appears in the world, and the perfection of wisdom appears in the world; that the emptiness of internal phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of external phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of emptiness appears in the world, the emptiness of great extent appears in the world, the emptiness of ultimate reality appears in the world, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of the unlimited appears in the world, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end appears in the world, the emptiness of nonexclusion appears in the world, the emptiness of inherent nature appears in the world, the emptiness of all phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics appears in the world, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended appears in the world, the emptiness of nonentities appears in the world, the emptiness of essential nature appears in the world, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities appears in the world; that the four applications of mindfulness appear in the world, the four correct exertions appear in the world, the four supports for miraculous ability appear in the world, the five faculties appear in the world, the five powers appear in [F.323.a] the world, the seven branches of enlightenment appear in the world, and the noble eightfold path appears in the world; and that the truths of the noble ones appear in the world, the eight liberations appear in the world, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption appear in the world, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation appear in the world, the meditative stabilities appear in the world, the dhāraṇī gateways appear in the world, the powers of the tathāgatas appear in the world, the four fearlessnesses appear in the world, the four kinds of exact knowledge appear in the world, great compassion appears in the world, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas appear in the world.

21.30 “Blessed Lord, it is by having taken up, upheld, recited, and having focused attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom that great and lofty royal families appear in the world, great and lofty priestly families appear in the world, and great and lofty householder families appear in the world; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm appear in the world, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm appear in the world, the gods of the Yāma realm appear in the world, the gods of the Tuṣita realm appear in the world, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm appear in the world, [F.323.b] and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm appear in the world; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm appear in the world, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm appear in the world, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm appear in the world, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm appear in the world; that the gods of the Ābha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Parīttābha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm appear in the world, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm appear in the world; that the gods of the Śubha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Apramāṇāśubha realm appear in the world, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm appear in the world; that the gods of the Vṛha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm appear in the world, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm appear in the world; and that the gods of the Avṛha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Atapa realm appear in the world, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm appear in the world, the gods of the Sudarśana realm appear in the world, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm appear in the world.

21.31 “Blessed Lord, it is by having taken up, upheld, recited, and having focused attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom that those who have entered the stream appear in the world, once-returners appear in the world, non-returners appear in the world, arhats appear in the world, pratyekabuddhas appear in the world, and bodhisattva great beings appear in the world. Blessed Lord, it is by having taken up, [F.324.a] upheld, recited, and having focused attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom that the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddhas appear in the world.”

21.32 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “I do not speak exhaustively about the good qualities of those sons or daughters of good families who have taken up, upheld, recited, mastered, and focused their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those sons or daughters of good families who will take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, will possess an immeasurable aggregate of ethical discipline; those sons or daughters of good families who will take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, will possess an immeasurable aggregate of meditative stability; those sons or daughters of good families who will take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, will possess an immeasurable aggregate of wisdom; those sons or daughters of good families who will take up, uphold, recite, master, [F.324.b] and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, will possess an immeasurable aggregate of liberation; and those sons or daughters of good families who will take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, will possess an immeasurable aggregate of knowledge and seeing of liberation.

21.33 “You should know that those sons or daughters of good families who will take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, have done the practice for the purpose of becoming a tathāgata.⁷²²

21.34 “Kauśika, with regard to the aggregate of ethical discipline, the aggregate of meditative stability, the aggregate of wisdom, the aggregate of liberation, and the aggregate of knowledge and seeing of liberation of all the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, and the aggregate of ethical discipline, the aggregate of meditative stability, the aggregate of wisdom, the aggregate of liberation, and the aggregate of knowledge and seeing of liberation of those sons and daughters of good families, Kauśika, the aggregate of ethical discipline, the aggregate of meditative stability, the aggregate of wisdom, the aggregate of liberation, and the aggregate of knowledge and seeing of liberation of all the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas [F.325.a] would come nowhere near even a hundredth part, would come nowhere near even a thousandth part, would come nowhere near even a hundred thousandth part, would come nowhere near even a ten millionth part, would come nowhere near even a hundred ten millionth part, would come nowhere near even a thousand ten millionth part, would come nowhere near even a hundred thousand ten million billionth part, would come nowhere near to any number, would come nowhere near to any fraction, would come nowhere near to any calculation, would come

nowhere near to any example, and would not stand up to any comparison of the aggregate of ethical discipline, the aggregate of meditative stability, the aggregate of wisdom, the aggregate of liberation, and the aggregate of knowledge and seeing of liberation that they have. If you ask why, it is because the minds of those sons and daughters of good families are liberated from the levels of the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, and yet nothing at all has been fully understood.

21.35 “Kauśika, I do speak about the good qualities attained accordingly in this lifetime and in later lives by those sons or daughters of good families who write out, take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with many flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments.”

21.36 Śakra said, “Blessed Lord, I will always guard, protect, and defend without interruption those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, and who commit this perfection of wisdom to writing [F.325.b] and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments.”

21.37 “Kauśika,” replied the Blessed One, “when sons or daughters of good families chant this perfection of wisdom by heart, many hundreds of thousands of gods will delightedly arrive to hear the Dharma, and when those sons or daughters of good families are teaching the Dharma endowed with the perfection of wisdom the gods will indeed think that they should reinforce that inspired eloquence,⁷²³ and also when those Dharma teachers get tired of speaking, the gods will think that they should reinforce that inspired eloquence by just that honoring of them.

21.38 “Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and who commit it to writing and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, will acquire these good qualities in this lifetime as well.

21.39 “Moreover, Kauśika, when those sons or daughters of good families are teaching the perfection of wisdom to the four assemblies, they will not become discouraged by the thought that someone might seek to censure them and look for an opportunity to inflict harm. If you ask [F.326.a] why, it is because this same perfection of wisdom will guard, protect, and defend those sons or daughters of good families. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom all that is mundane and supramundane, contaminated and uncontaminated, common and uncommon, virtuous and nonvirtuous, and conditioned and unconditioned, and the attributes of the śrāvakas, the attributes of the pratyekabuddhas, the attributes of the bodhisattvas, and the attributes of the buddhas, are undifferentiated.

21.40 “If you ask why, it is because this is the treasury⁷²⁴ of all virtuous phenomena, and since those sons or daughters of good families abide in the emptiness of internal phenomena, abide in the emptiness of external phenomena, abide in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, abide in the emptiness of emptiness, abide in the emptiness of great extent, abide in the emptiness of ultimate reality, abide in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, abide in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, abide in the emptiness of the unlimited, abide in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, abide in the emptiness of nonexclusion, abide in the emptiness of inherent nature, abide in the emptiness of all phenomena, abide in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, abide in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, abide in the emptiness of nonentities, abide in the emptiness of essential nature, and abide in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, in the perfection of wisdom they neither observe [F.326.b] censure nor do they observe one who censures, nor do they observe that which is censured. So, because they have been assisted by the perfection of wisdom, there is no one at all looking for an opportunity to inflict harm on those sons or daughters of good families.

21.41 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom will not become disheartened and will not feel intimidated; they will not be afraid, will not be frightened, and will not become terrified. If you ask why, it is because those sons or daughters of good families do not observe any sort of thing that might become disheartened, feel intimidated, be afraid, be frightened, or become terrified.

21.42 “Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and who commit it to writing and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, will acquire these good qualities in his lifetime as well.

21.43 “Moreover, Kauśika, any son or daughter of good family who takes up, upholds, recites, masters, [F.327.a] and focuses their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and who commits it to writing and honors, venerates, respects, and worships it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, will be greatly valued by⁷²⁵ their fathers, friends, mothers, kings, ministers, virtuous ascetics, and brahmin priests. They will also be greatly valued, and will be held dear, by the lord buddhas who reside in the world systems of the ten directions, as many as there are, and the bodhisattva great beings, pratyekabuddhas, arhats, non-returners, once-returners, and those who have entered the stream, as many as there are. They will also be greatly valued, and will be held dear, by the world with its gods, demons, and Brahmā deities, with the beings who are its virtuous ascetics and brāhmin priests, and with its gods, humans, and asuras.

21.44 “They will not be robbed of inspired eloquence, will not be robbed of the perfection of generosity, will not be robbed of the perfection of ethical discipline, will not be robbed of the perfection of tolerance, will not be robbed of the perfection of perseverance, will not be robbed of the perfection of meditative concentration, and will not be robbed of the perfection of wisdom; they will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of internal phenomena, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of external phenomena, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, will not be robbed of the cultivation of [F.327.b] the emptiness of emptiness, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of great extent, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of ultimate reality, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of the unlimited, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of nonexclusion, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of inherent nature, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of all phenomena, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of nonentities, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of essential nature, and will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; they will not be robbed of the cultivation of the applications of mindfulness, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the correct exertions, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the supports for miraculous ability, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the faculties, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the powers, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the branches of enlightenment, and will not be robbed of the cultivation of the noble eightfold path; they will not be robbed of the cultivation of the four truths of the noble ones, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the four meditative concentrations, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the four immeasurable attitudes, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the [F.328.a] four formless absorptions, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the eight liberations, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the extrasensory powers, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the meditative stabilities, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the dhāraṇī gateways, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the ten powers of the tathāgatas, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the four fearlessnesses, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the four kinds of exact knowledge, will not be robbed of the cultivation of great compassion, and will not be robbed of the cultivation of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and they will not be robbed of the cultivation of the requirement to bring beings to maturation, will not be robbed of the cultivation of the requirement to refine a buddhafiield, and will not be robbed of the cultivation of all-aspect omniscience. They will have the power to give a response to the arguments that have been raised by others, as many as there are, in accordance with the Dharma.

21.45 “Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom without being separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience, and who commit it to writing and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, [F.328.b] victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, will acquire these good qualities in his lifetime as well. [B24]

21.46 “Moreover, Kauśika, the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm in the great billionfold world system who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and also the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm, the Yāma realm, the Tuṣita realm, the Nirmāṇarati realm, and the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm; the Brahmakāyika realm, the Brahmapurohita realm, the Brahmapārśadya realm, and the Mahābrahmā realm; the Ābha realm, the Parīttābha realm, the Apramāṇābha realm, and the Ābhāsvara realm; the Śubha realm, the Parīttāśubha realm, the Apramāṇaśubha realm, and the Śubhakṛtsna realm; and the Vṛha realm, the Parīttavṛha realm, the Apramāṇavṛha realm, and the Vṛhatphala realm who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment think they should come to where those sons or daughters of good families who have committed this perfection of wisdom to writing, made it into a book, and upheld it are, and, having recited, taken up, mastered, paid homage to, and bowed before this perfection of wisdom, again take their leave. The gods of the Śuddhāvāsa realms—the Avṛha realm, the Atapa realm, the Sudṛśa realm, the Sudarśana realm, and the Akaniṣṭha realm—also think they should come there, and, having recited, taken up, mastered, paid homage to, and bowed before this perfection of wisdom, depart.

21.47 “Moreover, Kauśika, the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm in the world systems of the ten directions who have set out [F.329.a] for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and also the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm, the Yāma realm, the Tuṣita realm, the Nirmāṇarati realm, and the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm; the Brahmakāyika realm, the Brahmapurohita realm, the Brahmapārśadya realm, and the Mahābrahmā realm; the Ābha realm, the Parīttābha realm, the Apramāṇābha realm, and the Ābhāsvara realm; the Śubha realm, the Parīttāśubha realm, the Apramāṇaśubha realm, and the Śubhakṛtsna realm; and the Vṛha realm, the Parīttavṛha realm, the Apramāṇavṛha realm, and the Vṛhatphala realm who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and the gods of the Śuddhāvāsa realms—the Avṛha realm, the Atapa realm, the Sudṛśa realm, the Sudarśana realm, and the Akaniṣṭha realm—and other than them, also many greatly splendid gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas, think they should come there, and, having recited, taken up, mastered, paid homage to, and bowed before this perfection of wisdom, depart.

21.48 “Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families should have the following thought: ‘May this generosity be a gift of the Dharma to those gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, the Trayastriṃśa realm, the Yāma realm, the Tuṣita realm, the Nirmāṇarati realm, and the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm; the Brahmakāyika realm, the Brahmapurohita realm, the Brahmāpārśadya realm, and the Mahābrahmā realm; the Ābha realm, the Parīttābha realm, the Apramāṇābha realm, and the Ābhāsvara realm; the Śubha realm, the Parīttāśubha realm, the Apramāṇaśubha realm, and the Śubhakṛtsna realm; and the Vṛha realm, the Parīttavṛha realm, the Apramāṇavṛha realm, and the Vṛhatphala realm who have set out [F.329.b] for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, as well as the gods of the Śuddhāvāsa realms—the Avṛha realm, the Atapa realm, the Sudṛśa realm, the Sudarśana realm, and the Akaniṣṭha realm—and, other than them, to the greatly splendid gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas who have come here in order to recite, uphold, master, pay homage to, and worship this perfection of wisdom.’ Having recited, upheld, mastered, worshiped, paid homage to, and bowed before this perfection of wisdom, they depart.

21.49 “Kauśika, the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, the Trayastriṃśa realm, the Yāma realm, the Tuṣita realm, the Nirmāṇarati realm, and the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm; the Brahmakāyika realm, the Brahmapurohita realm, the Brahmapārṣadya realm, and the Mahābrahmā realm; the Ābha realm, the Parīttābha realm, the Apramāṇābha realm, and the Ābhāsvara realm; the Śubha realm, the Parīttāśubha realm, the Apramāṇāśubha realm, and the Śubhakṛtsna realm; and the Vṛha realm, the Parīttavṛha realm, the Apramāṇavṛha realm, and the Vṛhatphala realm; and the Avṛha realm, the Atapa realm, the Sudṛśa realm, the Sudarśana realm, and the Akaniṣṭha realm in the great billionfold world system, and the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, the Trayastriṃśa realm, the Yāma realm, the Tuṣita realm, the Nirmāṇarati realm, and the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm; the Brahmakāyika realm, the Brahmapurohita realm, [F.330.a] the Brahmapārṣadya realm, and the Mahābrahmā realm; the Ābha realm, the Parīttābha realm, the Apramāṇābha realm, and the Ābhāsvara realm; the Śubha realm, the Parīttāśubha realm, the Apramāṇāśubha realm, and the Śubhakṛtsna realm; and the Vṛha realm, the Parīttavṛha realm, the Apramāṇavṛha realm, and the Vṛhatphala realm; and the Avṛha realm, the Atapa realm, the Sudṛśa realm, the Sudarśana realm, and the Akaniṣṭha realm in the world systems of the ten directions, will guard, protect, and defend those sons and daughters of good families. Kauśika, unless there is the maturation of a past action, those looking for an opportunity to inflict harm on them will not find an opportunity to inflict harm.

21.50 “Those sons and daughters of good families will, because of this, acquire such good qualities as these in this lifetime as well.

21.51 “Kauśika, those gods who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment also think they should come to worship this perfection of wisdom and to guard, protect, and defend those sons and daughters of good families. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those sons or daughters of good families have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and they remain available for the purpose of protecting all beings, bringing all beings to maturity, and for the benefit and happiness of all beings.”

21.52 Śakra then asked, “Blessed Lord, how will those sons or daughters of good families know, ‘The gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm have arrived here,’ ‘The gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm have arrived here,’ ‘The gods of the Yāma realm have arrived here,’ [F.330.b] ‘The gods of the Tuṣita realm have arrived here,’ ‘The gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm have arrived here,’ and ‘The gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm have arrived here’; ‘The gods of the Brahmakāyika realm have arrived here,’ ‘The gods of the Brahmapurohita realm have arrived here,’ ‘The gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm have arrived here,' and 'The gods of the Mahābrahmā realm have arrived here'; 'The gods of the Ābha realm have arrived here,' 'The gods of the Parittābha realm have arrived here,' 'The gods of the Apramāṇābha realm have arrived here,' and 'The gods of the Ābhāsvara realm have arrived here'; 'The gods of the Śubha realm have arrived here,' 'The gods of the Parittaśubha realm have arrived here,' 'The gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm have arrived here,' and 'The gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm have arrived here'; 'The gods of the Vṛha realm have arrived here,' 'The gods of the Parittavṛha realm have arrived here,' 'The gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm have arrived here,' and 'The gods of the Vṛhatphala realm have arrived here'; and 'The gods of the Avṛha realm have arrived here,' 'The gods of the Atapa realm have arrived here,' 'The gods of the Sudṛśa realm have arrived here,' 'The gods of the Sudarśana realm have arrived here,' and 'The gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm have arrived here,' from world systems in all the ten directions, to recite, take up, master, pay homage to, bow before, serve, respect, honor, and worship this perfection of wisdom?"

21.53 "Kauśika," [F.331.a] replied the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families behold a great light where this perfection of wisdom has been placed, those sons or daughters of good families should know with certainty, 'The gods with the great power of the powerful, great miraculous abilities, great authority, and great splendor have come in order to recite, uphold, master, pay homage to, bow before, serve, respect, honor, and worship this perfection of wisdom.' "

21.54 "Moreover, Kauśika, if those sons or daughters of good families maintain scrupulous conduct,⁷²⁶ on account of their scrupulous conduct those gods will, having arrived and having recited, taken up, mastered, served, respected, honored, and worshiped this perfection of wisdom, become utterly overjoyed. The gods whose power is feeble, as many as there are in that place, will be unable to bear the splendor, glory, and majesty of the gods with the great power of the powerful, and they will think that they should depart from that place. The more the gods with the great power of the powerful, great miraculous abilities, great authority, and great splendor think that they should come there, the more those sons or daughters of good families will become those with great conviction.⁷²⁷

21.55 "In the vicinity of that place, without having deviated from conducting themselves scrupulously, in order to carry out worship of this perfection of wisdom, those sons or daughters of good families should sprinkle the ground of that area with scented water and adorn the ground of that area in many ways: scattering flowers and perfume, placing censers [F.331.b] wafting incense, and stretching out a canopy of brocade with an attached fringe of silk tassels.

21.56 “Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families will not tire, and they will not be exhausted. Those sons or daughters of good families will experience ease of body, lightness of body, and radiance⁷²⁸ of body, and those sons or daughters of good families will also experience ease of mind, lightness of mind, and radiance of mind.

21.57 “Therefore, since even when they go to bed at night, with an aspiration for this perfection of wisdom, they have a confident belief, they do not dream dreams of wickedness. While dreaming, in their dreams they will see the body of the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete Buddha, excellently adorned with the thirty-two major marks of a great person and embellished with the eighty minor signs, with a golden body, surrounded by the community of monks and with the bodhisattvas spread out in front, teaching the Dharma. They will also hear from the Tathāgata the teaching of the Dharma—of the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; of the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which [F.332.a] cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; of the applications of mindfulness, the correct exertions, the supports for miraculous ability, the faculties, the powers, the branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and of the truths of the noble ones, the meditative concentrations, the immeasurable attitudes, the formless absorptions, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the extrasensory powers, the meditative stabilities, the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, great loving kindness, great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.

21.58 “They will also hear the meaning of that perfection of generosity being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that perfection of ethical discipline being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that perfection of tolerance being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that perfection of perseverance being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that perfection of meditative concentration being differentiated, and will hear the meaning of that perfection of wisdom being differentiated. They will hear the meaning of that emptiness of internal phenomena being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of external phenomena being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that [F.332.b] emptiness of external and internal phenomena being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of emptiness being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of great extent being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of ultimate reality being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of conditioned phenomena being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of unconditioned phenomena being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of the unlimited being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of nonexclusion being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of inherent nature being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of all phenomena being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of nonentities being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that emptiness of essential nature being differentiated, and will hear the meaning of that emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities being differentiated. They will hear the meaning of those four applications of mindfulness being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those four correct exertions being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those four supports for miraculous ability being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those five faculties being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those five powers being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those seven branches of enlightenment [F.333.a] being differentiated, and will hear the meaning of that noble eightfold path being differentiated. And they will hear the meaning of those four truths of the noble ones being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those four meditative concentrations being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those four immeasurable attitudes being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those four formless absorptions being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those eight liberations being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those nine serial steps of meditative absorption being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those extrasensory powers being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those meditative stabilities being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those dhāraṇī gateways being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those ten powers of the tathāgatas being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those four fearlessnesses being differentiated, will hear the meaning of those four kinds of exact knowledge being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that great loving kindness being differentiated, will hear the meaning of that great compassion being differentiated, and will hear the meaning of those eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas being differentiated.

21.59 “They will also see the tree of enlightenment; will see the bodhisattva great being approach the tree of enlightenment; [F.333.b] will see him fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment; will see him, having fully awakened, turning the wheel of the Dharma; and will also see many hundreds of thousands of bodhisattvas discussing the Dharma together,⁷²⁹ saying, ‘All-aspect omniscience should be achieved like this, many beings should be brought to maturity like this, a buddhafiield should be refined like this, and Māra along with his entourage should be defeated like this.’

21.60 “They will hear the voices of many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the eastern direction. They will hear the voices saying, ‘In such and such a world system is the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha so-and-so teaching the Dharma, surrounded and attended by as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion bodhisattvas and as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion śrāvakas.’ They will hear the voices of many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the southern direction. They will hear the voices saying, ‘In such and such a world system is the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha so-and-so teaching the Dharma, surrounded and attended by as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion bodhisattvas and as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion śrāvakas.’ They will hear the voices of many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the western direction. They will hear the voices saying, ‘In such and such a world system is the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha so-and-so teaching the Dharma, surrounded and attended by as many as a hundred thousand [F.334.a] ten million billion bodhisattvas and as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion śrāvakas.’ They will hear the voices of many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the northern direction. They will hear the voices saying, ‘In such and such a world system is the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha so-and-so teaching the Dharma, surrounded and attended by as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion bodhisattvas and as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion śrāvakas.’ They will hear the voices of many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the intermediate northeastern direction. They will hear the voices saying, 'In such and such a world system is the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha so-and-so teaching the Dharma, surrounded and attended by as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion bodhisattvas and as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion śrāvakas.' They will hear the voices of many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the intermediate southeastern direction. They will hear the voices saying, 'In such and such a world system is the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha so-and-so teaching the Dharma, surrounded and attended by as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion bodhisattvas and as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion śrāvakas.' They will hear the voices of many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the intermediate southwestern direction. They will hear the voices saying, 'In such and such [F.334.b] a world system is the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha so-and-so teaching the Dharma, surrounded and attended by as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion bodhisattvas and as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion śrāvakas.' They will hear the voices of many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the intermediate northwestern direction. They will hear the voices saying, 'In such and such a world system is the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha so-and-so teaching the Dharma, surrounded and attended by as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion bodhisattvas and as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion śrāvakas.' They will hear the voices of many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the direction below. They will hear the voices saying, 'In such and such a world system is the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha so-and-so teaching the Dharma, surrounded and attended by as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion bodhisattvas and as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion śrāvakas.' They will hear the voices of many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the direction above. They will hear the voices saying, 'In such and such a world system is the tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha so-and-so teaching the Dharma, surrounded and attended by as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion bodhisattvas and as many as a hundred thousand ten million billion śrāvakas.'

- 21.61 "They will see many [F.335.a] hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the eastern direction passing into final nirvāṇa, they will see many hundred thousand ten million billion stūpas of those tathāgatas made of the seven precious materials, and they will see those stūpas being served, respected, honored, and worshiped with many various offerings of flowers, perfumes, garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags. They will see many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the southern direction passing into final nirvāṇa, they will see many hundred thousand ten million billion stūpas of those tathāgatas made of the seven precious materials, and they will see those stūpas being served, respected, honored, and worshiped with many various offerings of flowers, perfumes, garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags. They will see many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the western direction passing into final nirvāṇa, they will see many hundred thousand ten million billion stūpas of those tathāgatas made of the seven precious materials, and they will see those stūpas being served, respected, honored, and worshiped with many various offerings of flowers, perfumes, [F.335.b] garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags. They will see many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the northern direction passing into final nirvāṇa, they will see many hundred thousand ten million billion stūpas of those tathāgatas made of the seven precious materials, and they will see those stūpas being served, respected, honored, and worshiped with many various offerings of flowers, perfumes, garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags. They will see many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the intermediate northeastern direction passing into final nirvāṇa, they will see many hundred thousand ten million billion stūpas of those tathāgatas made of the seven precious materials, and they will see those stūpas being served, respected, honored, and worshiped with many various offerings of flowers, perfumes, garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags. They will see many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the intermediate southeastern direction passing into final nirvāṇa, they will see many hundred thousand ten million billion stūpas of those tathāgatas made of the seven precious materials, and they will see those stūpas being served, respected, honored, and worshiped with many various offerings of flowers, perfumes, [F.336.a] garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags. They will see many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the intermediate southwestern direction passing into final nirvāṇa, they will see many hundred thousand ten million billion stūpas of those tathāgatas made of the seven precious materials, and they will see those stūpas being served, respected, honored, and worshiped with many various offerings of flowers, perfumes, garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags. They will see many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the intermediate northwestern direction passing into final nirvāṇa, they will see many hundred thousand ten million billion stūpas of those tathāgatas made of the seven precious materials, and they will see those stūpas being served, respected, honored, and worshiped with many various offerings of flowers, perfumes, garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags. They will see many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the direction below passing into final nirvāṇa, they will see many [F.336.b] hundred thousand ten million billion stūpas of those tathāgatas made of the seven precious materials, and they will see those stūpas being served, respected, honored, and worshiped with many various offerings of flowers, perfumes, garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags. They will see many hundred thousand ten million billion buddhas in the direction above passing into final nirvāṇa, they will see many hundred thousand ten million billion stūpas of those tathāgatas made of the seven precious materials, and they will see those stūpas being served, respected, honored, and worshiped with many various offerings of flowers, perfumes, garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags.

21.62 “Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families will dream these types of auspicious dreams.”

21.63 “Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families will fall asleep easily and they will awaken easily. Their bodies will have a vitality. They will not have a strong attachment to the basic necessities: they will not have a strong attachment to food, they will not have a strong attachment to clothing, and they will not have a strong attachment to medications used to treat ill health. They will think about the basic necessities less: they will think about food less, they will think about clothing less, and they will think about medications used to treat ill health less. To illustrate, Kauśika, it is just like [F.337.a] the mind of a monk who practices yoga, on arising from meditative stability, saturated with attention. It does not have a strong attachment to food; it thinks about food less. Similarly, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families will also not have a strong attachment to food and will think about food less.

21.64 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because nonhumans supply the bodies they have with vitality. As many lord buddhas as there are, as many bodhisattvas as there are, and as many gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas as there are in the eastern direction, they all supply their bodies with vitality. As many lord buddhas as there are, as many bodhisattvas as there are, and as many gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas as there are in the southern direction, they all supply their bodies with vitality. As many lord buddhas as there are, as many bodhisattvas as there are, and as many gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas as there are in the western direction, they all supply their bodies with vitality. As many lord buddhas as there are, as many bodhisattvas as there are, and as many gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas as there are in the northern direction, they all supply their bodies with vitality. As many lord buddhas as there are, as many bodhisattvas [F.337.b] as there are, and as many gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas as there are in the intermediate northeastern direction, they all supply their bodies with vitality. As many lord buddhas as there are, as many bodhisattvas as there are, and as many gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas as there are in the intermediate southeastern direction, they all supply their bodies with vitality. As many lord buddhas as there are, as many bodhisattvas as there are, and as many gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas as there are in the intermediate southwestern direction, they all supply their bodies with vitality. As many lord buddhas as there are, as many bodhisattvas as there are, and as many gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas as there are in the intermediate northwestern direction, they all supply their bodies with vitality. As many lord buddhas as there are, as many bodhisattvas as there are, and as many gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas [F.338.a] as there are in the direction below, they all supply their bodies with vitality. And as many lord buddhas as there are, as many bodhisattvas as there are, and as many gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas as there are in the direction above, they all supply their bodies with vitality.

21.65 “Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who want to acquire these good qualities right here in this lifetime should earnestly listen to, take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this very perfection of wisdom. They should not be separated from the mind of all-aspect omniscience.

21.66 “Kauśika, even if those sons or daughters of good families have not taken up, have not upheld, have not recited, have not mastered, and have not focused their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, those sons or daughters of good families should commit this perfection of wisdom to writing and make it into a book, and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments. In that manner, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families will have undertaken something for the benefit of many beings and for the happiness of many beings.⁷³⁰

21.67 “Kauśika, if any son or daughter of good family were to take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and, having committed it to writing, were to serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, the merit of that son of good family [F.338.b] or daughter of good family would increase even more than if they did that, while it would not do so were they even, for the duration of their lives, to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas, along with their communities of śrāvakas residing in the world systems of all the ten directions, with many of the basic necessities: food, bedding, medications used to treat ill health, and even also, for the duration of their lives, were they to have served, respected, honored, and worshiped stūpas made of the seven precious materials with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, after those tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas, along with their communities of śrāvakas, had passed into nirvāṇa.”

21.68 This completes the twenty-first chapter from “The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines.”

CHAPTER 22

- 22.1 Then the Blessed One asked Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, “Kauśika, if you could possess Jambudvīpa, filled to the brim with the relics of the tathāgatas, and if someone were to present you with this perfection of wisdom, written in the form of a book, which of these would you take?”
- 22.2 “Blessed Lord,” replied Śakra, “if someone were to present me with Jambudvīpa, filled to the brim with the relics of the tathāgatas, and if someone were to present me with this perfection of wisdom, written in the form of a book, I would take just this perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, [F.339.a] Blessed Lord, it is not that I do not honor those relics of the tathāgatas, it is not that I do not have confidence⁷³¹ in them, and it is not that I do not think highly⁷³² of them. Blessed Lord, it is not that I do not want to honor, or that I do not want to venerate, or that I do not want to respect, or that I do not want to worship the relics of the tathāgatas. Blessed Lord, those relics of the tathāgatas have also originated from the perfection of wisdom and that is why the relics of the tathāgatas should be honored, should be venerated, should be respected, and should be worshiped. Those relics have been brought into being⁷³³ by the perfection of wisdom. That is why those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped.
- 22.3 “Blessed Lord, when I serve, respect, honor, and worship the relics of the tathāgatas with divine flowers, divine garlands, divine perfume, divine unguents, divine powders, divine robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, divine flags, and various divine musical instruments, it is also because these relics of the tathāgatas have originated from the perfection of wisdom. It is that which this world with its gods, humans, and asuras is serving, respecting, honoring, and worshiping, so that they are protected, served, respected, honored, and worshipped.” [F.339.b]
- 22.4 Then the venerable Śāradvatīputra said to Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, “Kauśika, since this perfection of wisdom cannot be grasped, is immaterial, is impossible to indicate, is unimpeded, and has only one defining characteristic, which is to say, is without defining characteristics, how could you think a perfection of wisdom that cannot be grasped, is immaterial, is impossible to indicate, is unimpeded, and has only one defining characteristic, which is to say, is without defining characteristics, is graspable? If you ask why, it is because it is not something to be grasped or rejected. It is not to be decreased, it is not to be increased; it is not to be expanded, it is not to be abbreviated; it is not to be accumulated, it is not to be dispersed; it is not to be taken away from, it is not to be added to; and it is not for defilement, and it is not for purification. It is not the establisher of the attributes of the buddhas and it is not the rejecter of the attributes of ordinary persons. It is not the bestower of the attributes of the bodhisattvas, it is not the establisher of the attributes of the pratyekabuddhas, it is not the establisher of the attributes of the śrāvakas, it is not the establisher of the attributes of those in training or not in training, and it is not the rejecter of the attributes of ordinary persons. It is not the establisher of the unconditioned element and it is not the rejecter of the conditioned element. It is not the establisher of the perfection of generosity, it is not the establisher of the perfection of ethical discipline, it is not the establisher of the perfection of tolerance, it is not the establisher of the perfection of perseverance, it is not the establisher of the perfection of meditative concentration, and it is not the establisher of the perfection of wisdom; it is not the establisher of the emptiness of internal phenomena, it is not the establisher [F.340.a] of the emptiness of external phenomena, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of emptiness, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of great extent, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of ultimate reality, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of the unlimited, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of nonexclusion, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of inherent nature, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of all phenomena, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of nonentities, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of essential nature, and it is not the establisher of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; it is not the establisher of the applications of mindfulness, it is not the establisher of the correct exertions, it is not the establisher of the supports for miraculous ability, it is not the establisher of the faculties, it is not the establisher of the powers, it is not the establisher of the branches of enlightenment, and it is not the establisher of the noble eightfold path; it is not the establisher of the truths of the noble ones, it is not the establisher of the meditative concentrations, it is not the establisher of the immeasurable attitudes, it is not the establisher of the formless absorptions, it is not the establisher of the liberations, it is not the establisher of the serial steps of meditative absorption, it is not the establisher of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, [F.340.b] it is not the establisher of the extrasensory powers, it is not the establisher of the meditative stabilities, it is not the establisher of the dhāraṇī gateways, it is not the establisher of the powers of the tathāgatas, it is not the establisher of the fearlessnesses, it is not the establisher of the kinds of exact knowledge, it is not the establisher of great compassion, and it is not the establisher of the distinct qualities of the buddhas; and it is not the establisher of the fruit of having entered the stream, it is not the establisher of the fruit of once-returner, it is not the establisher of the fruit of non-returner, it is not the establisher of arhatship, it is not the establisher of individual enlightenment, it is not the establisher of the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and it is not the establisher of all-aspect omniscience.”

- 22.5 “Venerable monk Śāradvatīputra, it is so, it is so!” replied Śakra. “Those who know that the perfection of wisdom is not the establisher of the attributes of the buddhas and is not the rejecter of the attributes of ordinary persons; that it is not the establisher of the attributes of the bodhisattvas, it is not the establisher of the attributes of the pratyekabuddhas, it is not the establisher of the attributes of the śrāvakas, it is not the establisher of the attributes of those in training or not in training, and it is not the rejecter of the attributes of ordinary persons; it is not the establisher of the unconditioned element and it is not the rejecter of the conditioned element; it is not the establisher of the perfection of generosity, it is not the establisher of the perfection of ethical discipline, it is not the establisher of the perfection of tolerance, it is not the establisher of the perfection of perseverance, [F.341.a] it is not the establisher of the perfection of meditative concentration, and it is not the establisher of the perfection of wisdom; it is not the establisher of the emptiness of internal phenomena, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of external phenomena, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of emptiness, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of great extent, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of ultimate reality, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of the unlimited, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, it is not the

establisher of the emptiness of nonexclusion, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of inherent nature, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of all phenomena, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of nonentities, it is not the establisher of the emptiness of essential nature, and it is not the establisher of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; it is not the establisher of the applications of mindfulness, it is not the establisher of the correct exertions, it is not the establisher of the supports for miraculous ability, it is not the establisher of the faculties, it is not the establisher of the powers, it is not the establisher of the branches of enlightenment, and it is not the establisher of the noble eightfold path; it is not the establisher of the truths of the noble ones, it is not the establisher of the meditative concentrations, it is not the establisher of the immeasurable attitudes, it is not the establisher of the formless absorptions, it is not the establisher of the eight liberations, it is not the establisher of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, [F.341.b] it is not the establisher of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, it is not the establisher of the extrasensory powers, it is not the establisher of the meditative stabilities, it is not the establisher of the dhāraṇī gateways, it is not the establisher of the powers of the tathāgatas, it is not the establisher of the fearlessnesses, it is not the establisher of the kinds of exact knowledge, it is not the establisher of great compassion, and it is not the establisher of the distinct qualities of the buddhas; and it is not the establisher of the fruit of having entered the stream, it is not the establisher of the fruit of once-returner, it is not the establisher of the fruit of non-returner, it is not the establisher of arhatship, it is not the establisher of individual enlightenment, it is not the establisher of the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and it is not the establisher of all-aspect omniscience are practitioners of the perfection of wisdom—they are cultivators of the perfection of wisdom.

- 22.6 “The perfection of wisdom is not something that can be known as two things. The perfection of wisdom is not two things. The perfection of meditative concentration is not something that can be known as two things. The perfection of meditative concentration is not two things. The perfection of perseverance is not something that can be known as two things. The perfection of perseverance is not two things. The perfection of tolerance is not something that can be known as two things. The perfection of tolerance is not two things. The perfection of ethical discipline is not something that can be known as two things. The perfection of ethical discipline is not two things. The perfection of generosity [F.342.a] is not something that can be known as two things. The perfection of generosity is not two things.”

22.7 Then the Blessed One applauded Śakra, mighty lord of the gods: “Kauśika, that is excellent. That is excellent. It is so. It is as you have spoken. The perfection of wisdom is not something that can be known as two things. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of wisdom is not two things. The perfection of meditative concentration is not something that can be known as two things. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of meditative concentration is not two things. The perfection of perseverance is not something that can be known as two things. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of perseverance is not two things. The perfection of tolerance is not something that can be known as two things. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of tolerance is not two things. The perfection of ethical discipline is not something that can be known as two things. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of ethical discipline is not two things. The perfection of generosity is not something that can be known as two things. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of generosity is not two things.

22.8 “Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of wisdom is two things simply hold that the realm of phenomena is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the realm of phenomena and the perfection of wisdom are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of meditative concentration is two things simply hold that the realm of phenomena is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the realm of phenomena and the perfection of meditative concentration are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold [F.342.b] that the perfection of perseverance is two things simply hold that the realm of phenomena is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the realm of phenomena and the perfection of perseverance are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of tolerance is two things simply hold that the realm of phenomena is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the realm of phenomena and the perfection of tolerance are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of ethical discipline is two things simply hold that the realm of phenomena is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the realm of phenomena and the perfection of ethical discipline are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of generosity is two things simply hold that the realm of phenomena is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the realm of phenomena and the perfection of generosity are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

22.9 “Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of wisdom is two things simply hold that the real nature is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the real nature and the perfection of wisdom are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of meditative concentration is two things simply hold that the real nature is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the real nature and the perfection of meditative concentration are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of perseverance is two things simply hold that the real nature is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the real nature and [F.343.a] the perfection of perseverance are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of tolerance is two things simply hold that the real nature is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the real nature and the perfection of tolerance are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of ethical discipline is two things simply hold that the real nature is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the real nature and the perfection of ethical discipline are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of generosity is two things simply hold that the real nature is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the real nature and the perfection of generosity are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

22.10 “Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of wisdom is two things simply hold that the very limit of reality is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the very limit of reality and the perfection of wisdom are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of meditative concentration is two things simply hold that the very limit of reality is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the very limit of reality and the perfection of meditative concentration are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of perseverance is two things simply hold that the very limit of reality is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the very limit of reality and the perfection of perseverance are without duality and cannot be [F.343.b] divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of tolerance is two things simply hold that the very limit of reality is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the very limit of reality and the perfection of tolerance are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of ethical discipline is two things simply hold that the very limit of reality is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the very limit of reality and the perfection of ethical discipline are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of generosity is two things simply hold that the very limit of reality is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the very limit of reality and the perfection of generosity are without duality and cannot be divided into two.

22.11 “Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of wisdom is two things simply hold that the inconceivable realm is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the inconceivable realm and the perfection of wisdom are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of meditative concentration is two things simply hold that the inconceivable realm is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the inconceivable realm and the perfection of meditative concentration are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of perseverance is two things simply hold that the inconceivable realm is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the inconceivable realm [F.344.a] and the perfection of perseverance are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of tolerance is two things simply hold that the inconceivable realm is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the inconceivable realm and the perfection of tolerance are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of ethical discipline is two things simply hold that the inconceivable realm is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the inconceivable realm and the perfection of ethical discipline are without duality and cannot be divided into two. Kauśika, those who hold that the perfection of generosity is two things simply hold that the inconceivable realm is two things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the inconceivable realm and the perfection of generosity are without duality and cannot be divided into two.” [B25]

22.12 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, this perfection of wisdom is worthy of homage by the world with its gods, humans, and asuras. Having trained in it, bodhisattva great beings have attained, are attaining, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

22.13 “Blessed Lord, [F.344.b] when I am seated on my seat, which is that of the mighty lord of the gods, in the divine assembly of Sudharmā, those gods who come to serve me, as many as there are, worship me. But when I do not go there and I am not seated on that seat, at that time as well those gods come to that assembly, and thinking, ‘Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, seated on this seat teaches the Dharma to the gods of Trayastrimśa,’ circumambulate that seat from the right, pay homage to it, and then depart. Blessed Lord, in the same way, the gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas, as many as there are in the world systems of the ten directions, come to that place where this perfection of wisdom has been committed to writing, and will be upheld, chanted out loud by heart, and taught to others, and they too, thinking, 'The tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas have originated from it, all the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas have also originated from it, and even all the everyday necessities for the happiness of all beings have originated from it,' pay homage to and bow to the perfection of wisdom, and then go back again.

22.14 "Also, the worship that the relics of the tathāgatas receive, it is worship they receive because they have been brought into being⁷³⁴ by the perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because when bodhisattva great beings practice the conduct of a bodhisattva, the perfection of wisdom serves as the ground of the knower of omniscience, serves as the cause, serves as the condition, and serves as the one that brings it about.⁷³⁵ Therefore, Blessed Lord, from those two choices, [F.345.a] I would take just this perfection of wisdom.

22.15 "Blessed Lord, when I, having taken up in this perfection of wisdom, chant it by heart with the mental consciousness included in phenomena,⁷³⁶ I do not observe even the mere sign of fear or panic.⁷³⁷ Blessed Lord, if you ask why, it is because the perfection of wisdom is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the perfection of meditative concentration is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the perfection of meditative concentration is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the perfection of perseverance is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the perfection of perseverance is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the perfection of tolerance is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the perfection of tolerance is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the perfection of ethical discipline is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the perfection of ethical discipline is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the perfection of generosity is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the perfection of generosity is indescribable.

22.16 "Blessed Lord, the emptiness of internal phenomena is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of internal phenomena is [F.345.b] indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of external phenomena is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of external phenomena is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of emptiness is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of emptiness is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of great extent is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of great extent is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of ultimate reality is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of ultimate reality is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of the unlimited is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of the unlimited is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end [F.346.a] is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of nonexclusion is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of nonexclusion is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of inherent nature is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of inherent nature is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of all phenomena is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of all phenomena is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of nonentities is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of nonentities is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of essential nature is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of essential nature is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is indescribable.

- 22.17 “Blessed Lord, [F.346.b] the applications of mindfulness are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the applications of mindfulness are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the correct exertions are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the correct exertions are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the supports for miraculous ability are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the supports for miraculous ability are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the faculties are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the faculties are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the powers are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the powers are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the branches of enlightenment are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the branches of enlightenment are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the noble eightfold path is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the noble eightfold path is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the truths of the noble ones are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the truths of the noble ones are indescribable. Blessed Lord, [F.347.a] the meditative concentrations are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the meditative concentrations are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the immeasurable attitudes are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the immeasurable attitudes are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the formless absorptions are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the formless absorptions are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the liberations are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the liberations are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the serial steps of meditative absorption are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the serial steps of meditative absorption are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the extrasensory powers are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the extrasensory powers are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the meditative stabilities are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the meditative stabilities are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the dhāraṇī gateways are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. [F.347.b] Blessed Lord, the dhāraṇī gateways are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the powers of the tathāgatas are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the powers of the tathāgatas are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the fearlessnesses are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the fearlessnesses are indescribable. Blessed Lord, the kinds of exact knowledge are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the kinds of exact knowledge are indescribable. Blessed Lord, great compassion is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, great compassion is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the distinct qualities of the buddhas are signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the distinct qualities of the buddhas are indescribable. Blessed Lord, omniscience is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, omniscience is indescribable. Blessed Lord, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is indescribable. Blessed Lord, all-aspect omniscience is signless, without an indication, and inexpressible. Blessed Lord, all-aspect omniscience is indescribable.

22.18 “Blessed Lord, [F.348.a] if the perfection of wisdom, which is signless, were not signless, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas, having comprehended that all phenomena are signless, without an indication, inexpressible, and indescribable, and fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, would not teach beings the Dharma that is signless, without an indication, inexpressible, and indescribable. Blessed Lord, it is because the perfection of wisdom is signless, without an indication, inexpressible, and indescribable that the tathāgatas, having comprehended that all phenomena are signless, without an indication, inexpressible, and indescribable, and fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, teach beings the Dharma that is signless, without an indication, inexpressible, and indescribable.

22.19 “So it is, Blessed Lord, that this perfection of wisdom is worthy of being served, respected, honored, and worshiped by the world with its gods, humans, and asuras with flowers, garlands, perfume, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments. Having committed it to writing, it is worthy of being served, respected, honored, and worshiped by the world with its gods, humans, and asuras [F.348.b] with flowers, garlands, perfume, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments.

22.20 “Blessed Lord, someone who takes up, upholds, recites, masters, and focuses their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and, having committed it to writing, honors, venerates, respects, and worships it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, until they have fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, does not need to worry about⁷³⁸ life in the hells, does not need to worry about life in the animal realm or life in the world of Yama, and does not need to worry about the level of the śrāvakas or the level of the pratyekabuddhas. They will not be separated from seeing the tathāgatas, will not be separated from bringing beings to maturation, and will proceed from buddhafiield to buddhafiield serving, respecting, honoring, and worshiping those tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments.

- 22.21 “Moreover, Blessed Lord, if I were presented with this great billionfold world system filled to the brim with relics of the tathāgatas, and if I were presented with this perfection of wisdom, committed to writing, Blessed Lord, from these two precious jewels⁷³⁹ I [F.349.a] would take just this perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because the tathāgatas and the relics of the tathāgatas have originated from her, and it is for that reason that those relics of the tathāgatas are served, respected, honored, and worshiped. If those sons or daughters of good families serve, respect, honor, and worship them, they will not proceed into the degenerations and the terrible forms of life. Rather, having experienced the excellence of gods and humans, they will attain final nirvāṇa by means of the vehicle of the śrāvakas, the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas, or the vehicle of the perfectly complete buddhas, in accordance with their aspiration.
- 22.22 “Therefore, Blessed Lord, seeing the tathāgata and seeing the perfection of wisdom committed to writing are not dissimilar. If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because the perfection of wisdom and the tathāgata are without duality and cannot be divided into two.
- 22.23 “Moreover, Blessed Lord, a tathāgata, arhat, perfectly complete buddha, abiding in the three miraculous powers and teaching and explaining the discourses, the sayings in prose and verse, the prophetic declarations, the verses, the statements made for a purpose, the introductions, the accounts, the tales of past lives, the most extensive teachings, the marvelous events, the narratives, and the established instructions, and any son or daughter of good family taking up, [F.349.b] comprehending, and teaching the perfection of wisdom to others—these two are also not dissimilar. If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas have originated from her, the three miraculous abilities have originated from her, and the discourses, the sayings in prose and verse, the prophetic declarations, the verses, the statements made for a purpose, the introductions, the accounts, the tales of past lives, the most extensive teachings, the marvelous events, the narratives, and the established instructions have originated from her.
- 22.24 “Moreover, Blessed Lord, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the eastern direction; the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the southern direction; the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the western direction; the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the northern direction; the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the intermediate northeastern direction; the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the intermediate southeastern direction; the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the intermediate southwestern direction; the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the intermediate northwestern direction; the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete [F.350.a] buddhas of the direction below; and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the direction above, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, abiding in the three miraculous powers and teaching and explaining the discourses, the sayings in prose and verse, the prophetic declarations, the verses, the statements made for a purpose, the introductions, the accounts, the tales of past lives, the most extensive teachings, the marvelous events, the narratives, and the established instructions, and any son or daughter of good family taking up, comprehending, and teaching the perfection of wisdom to others—these two are also not dissimilar. If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the ten directions have originated from her, the three miraculous abilities have originated from her, and the discourses, the sayings in prose and verse, the prophetic declarations, the verses, the statements made for a purpose, the introductions, the accounts, the tales of past lives, the most extensive teachings, the marvelous events, the narratives, and the established instructions have originated from her.

22.25 “Moreover, Blessed Lord, serving, respecting, honoring, and worshiping the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the world systems in each of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, and, having committed this perfection of wisdom to writing in the form of a book, serving, respecting, honoring, and worshiping it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, [F.350.b] unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments—these two are also not dissimilar. If you ask why, it is because the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas have originated from her.

22.26 “Moreover, Blessed Lord, those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and who also extensively explain it to others, do not need to worry about life in the hells, do not need to worry about life in the animal realm or life in the world of Yama, and do not need to worry about the level of the śrāvakas or the level of the pratyekabuddhas. If you ask why, it is because those sons or daughters of good families should be known to dwell on the level of an irreversible bodhisattva. If you ask why, it is because they write out, take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, and serve, respect, honor, and worship what they have written out with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments. It is because, Blessed Lord, this perfection of wisdom is the calmer of all fears and is the alleviator of all sicknesses.

22.27 “Moreover, Blessed Lord, those sons or daughters of good families [F.351.a] who commit to writing, take up, uphold, recite, and master this perfection of wisdom, and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and various musical instruments, do not need to worry about danger arising anywhere.

22.28 “Blessed Lord, to illustrate, when a person scared of a wealthy man stays with a king and relies on a king, because they stay with the king and rely on the king, whomever they fear, because they rely on him, does not frighten them. If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because that is logically what happens⁷⁴⁰ for someone who relies on a king, which is to say, relies on a person with power. Similarly, Blessed Lord, those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped because they have been brought into being by the perfection of wisdom.

22.29 “Blessed Lord, the transcendental knowledge of an all-aspect omniscient should also be viewed as having been brought into being by the perfection of wisdom. Therefore, Blessed Lord, from those two choices, I would take just this perfection of wisdom. Blessed Lord, if you ask why, it is because the relics of the tathāgatas have originated from her, the thirty-two major marks of a great person have originated from her, the ten powers of the tathāgatas have originated from her, the four fearlessnesses have originated from her, the four kinds of exact knowledge have originated from her, [F.351.b] the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas have originated from her, great loving kindness has originated from her, and great compassion has originated from her.

22.30 “Blessed Lord, the five perfections have originated from her, so they get the name perfection, up to the all-aspect omniscience of the tathāgatas has originated from her.⁷⁴¹

22.31 “So, Blessed Lord, in villages, or towns, or cities, or regions, or kingdoms, or in the great billionfold world system where they take up, uphold, recite, and master this perfection of wisdom, and, having committed it to writing, serve, respect, honor, and worship it, the humans or nonhuman beings who are looking for an opportunity to inflict harm and seeking for an opportunity to inflict harm will not find an opportunity to inflict harm on them, and all those beings, in whichever of the three vehicles is appropriate, will eventually also become qualified for final nirvāṇa.

22.32 “Therefore, Blessed Lord, this perfection of wisdom is greatly beneficial. She is present⁷⁴² in the billionfold world system to benefit beings as a buddha. In any world system where this perfection of wisdom circulates, Blessed Lord, she should be viewed like the appearance of a buddha.

22.33 “Blessed Lord, to illustrate, there is a most precious gemstone called priceless. It possesses the attributes of a most precious gemstone such as these: Wherever this gemstone is placed, nonhumans will find no opportunity to inflict harm; also a man or woman possessed by a nonhuman, [F.352.a] when that most precious gem is shown, that nonhuman will be unable to withstand its brilliance and will swiftly depart and not dwell there. When that most precious gem is fastened to a body tormented by a bile disorder, the bile disorder will be purged; when that most precious gem is fastened to a body afflicted by a wind disorder, the wind disorder will be purged; when that most precious gem is fastened to a body oppressed by a phlegm disorder, the phlegm disorder will be alleviated; and when that most precious gem is fastened to a body afflicted by combined humoral disorders, the combined humoral disorders will be alleviated and will not increase. At night it will provide illumination. In the hot season, wherever that most precious gem is placed, it will provide coolness to that place; in the cold season, wherever that most precious gem is placed, it will provide warmth to that place—whatever the place on the earth where that most precious gem is placed, it will be neither too hot nor too cold, but pleasantly moderate. Whatever the place on the earth where that most precious gem is placed, on that place on the earth the venomous snakes and, apart from them, scorpions and so on will not move; and Blessed Lord, when that most precious gem is shown to any man or woman who had been bitten by a poisonous snake, immediately after seeing it, the poison is purged.

22.34 “Blessed Lord, this most precious gem possesses attributes such as these: a man or woman afflicted by pustules or eyesight that has become blurred, whatever the disease that has arisen, be it eye disease, [F.352.b] ear disease, nose disease, tongue disease, throat disease, or disease of the body, when this most precious gem is fastened to their body those pustules, or blurred vision, or eye disease, or ear disease, or nose disease, or tongue disease, or throat disease, or disease of the body are alleviated.

22.35 “Blessed Lord, this most precious gem possesses attributes such as these: If this most precious gem were immersed in turbid water, all the water would then have the eight qualities of pure water and become the same natural color; if this most precious gem were wrapped in a blue robe⁷⁴³ and immersed in water, that water too would take on its very nature; if this most precious gem were wrapped in a yellow robe and immersed in water, that water too would take on its very nature; if this most precious gem were wrapped in a red robe and immersed in water, that water too would take on its very nature; if this most precious gem were wrapped in a purple⁷⁴⁴ robe and immersed in water, that water too would take on its very nature; if this most precious gem were wrapped in a crystal-colored robe and immersed in water, that water too would take on its very nature; if this most precious gem were wrapped in a robe of other various colors than them and immersed in water, that water too would take on that very nature as well; and even if the water were turbid, [F.353.a] it would be made clear by that most precious gem.

22.36 “Blessed Lord, this most precious gem possesses attributes such as these and many others besides, and, Blessed Lord, this perfection of wisdom, like that most precious divine gem, is indeed the source of all positive attributes, and is the remover of all misdeeds.”

22.37 Then the venerable Ānanda asked Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, “Kauśika, do you think that this most precious gem is a divine one, or does this most precious gem also exist among the human beings of Jambudvīpa?”

22.38 “Venerable Ānanda,” replied Śakra, “this most precious gem is a divine one. Venerable Ānanda, those precious gems that exist among the human beings of Jambudvīpa are small and heavy, whereas the most precious divine gems are large and light. Those most precious gems of the human beings of Jambudvīpa are not completely perfect in all their facets, as are the divine ones. Indeed, those most precious gems of the human beings of Jambudvīpa come nowhere near any number, fraction, calculation, example, or comparison of the precious divine gems.”

22.39 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, once this most precious gem has been placed again and again in a basket, even after it has been removed from the basket. the basket becomes pleasing on account of the good qualities of that precious gem, and others also develop a longing⁷⁴⁵ for it. Similarly, Blessed Lord, wherever this perfection of wisdom circulates, all physical and mental suffering and affliction, [F.353.b] whether originating from human beings or nonhuman beings, will not happen to sons or daughters of good families. Blessed Lord, most precious gem is an expression for the perfection of wisdom; it is an expression for the transcendental knowledge of an all-aspect omniscient one.

22.40 “Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the perfection of wisdom there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the perfection of wisdom are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the perfection of wisdom. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the perfection of meditative concentration there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the perfection of meditative concentration are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the perfection of meditative concentration. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the perfection of perseverance there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the perfection of perseverance are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the perfection of perseverance. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the perfection of tolerance there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the perfection of tolerance are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the perfection of tolerance. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the perfection of ethical discipline there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the perfection of ethical discipline are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the perfection of ethical discipline. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities [F.354.a] of the perfection of generosity there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the perfection of generosity are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the perfection of generosity.

22.41 “Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of internal phenomena there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of internal phenomena are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of internal phenomena. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of external phenomena there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of external phenomena are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of external phenomena. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of emptiness there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of emptiness are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of emptiness. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of great extent there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of great extent are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of great extent. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of ultimate reality there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of ultimate reality are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of ultimate reality. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of [F.354.b] the emptiness of conditioned phenomena are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of the unlimited there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of the unlimited are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of the unlimited. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of nonexclusion there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of nonexclusion are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of nonexclusion. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of inherent nature there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of inherent nature are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of inherent nature. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of all phenomena there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of all phenomena are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of all phenomena. Blessed Lord, let alone however many [F.355.a] good qualities of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of nonentities there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of nonentities are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of nonentities. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of essential nature there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of essential nature are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of essential nature. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

22.42 “Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the four applications of mindfulness there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the applications of mindfulness are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the applications of mindfulness. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the four correct exertions there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the correct exertions are immeasurable, [F.355.b] and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the correct exertions. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the four supports for miraculous ability there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the supports for miraculous ability are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the supports for miraculous ability. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the five faculties there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the faculties are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the faculties. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the five powers there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the powers are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the powers. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the seven branches of enlightenment there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the branches of enlightenment are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the branches of enlightenment. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the noble eightfold path there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the noble eightfold path are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the noble eightfold path.

22.43 “Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the four truths of the noble ones there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the truths of the noble ones are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the truths of the noble ones. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the four meditative concentrations there are that can be spoken about, [F.356.a] the good qualities of the meditative concentrations are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the meditative concentrations. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the four immeasurable attitudes there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the immeasurable attitudes are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the immeasurable attitudes. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the four formless absorptions there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the formless absorptions are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the formless absorptions. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the eight liberations there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the liberations are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the liberations. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the serial steps of meditative absorption are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the serial steps of meditative absorption. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the gateways to liberation are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the gateways to liberation. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the extrasensory powers there are that can be [F.356.b] spoken about, the good qualities of the extrasensory powers are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the extrasensory powers. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the meditative stabilities there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the meditative stabilities are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the meditative stabilities. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the dhāraṇī gateways there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the dhāraṇī gateways are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the dhāraṇī gateways. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the ten powers of the tathāgatas there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the powers of the tathāgatas are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the powers of the tathāgatas. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the four fearlessnesses there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the fearlessnesses are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the fearlessnesses. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the four kinds of exact knowledge there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the kinds of exact knowledge are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the kinds of exact knowledge. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of great compassion there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of great compassion are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of great compassion. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of [F.357.a] the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the distinct qualities of the buddhas are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

22.44 “Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of knowledge of all the dharmas there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of knowledge of all the dharmas are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of knowledge of all the dharmas. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the knowledge of the aspects of the path there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the knowledge of the aspects of the path are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the knowledge of the aspects of the path. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of all-aspect omniscience there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of all-aspect omniscience are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of all-aspect omniscience. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the real nature there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the real nature are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the real nature. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the unmistaken real nature there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the unmistaken real nature are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the unmistaken real nature. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the one and only real nature there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the one and only real nature are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas [F.357.b] are a container of the one and only real nature. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the reality of phenomena there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the reality of phenomena are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the reality of phenomena. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the realm of phenomena there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the realm of phenomena are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the realm of phenomena. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the abiding nature of reality there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the abiding nature of reality are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the abiding nature of reality. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the unchanging nature of reality⁷⁴⁶ there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the unchanging nature of reality are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the unchanging nature of reality. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of very limit of reality there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of very limit of reality are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of very limit of reality. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the realm of the inconceivable there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the realm of the inconceivable are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the realm of the inconceivable.

22.45 “Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the abandonment of all the afflicted mental states and their connecting propensities there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the abandonment of all the afflicted mental states and their connecting propensities are [F.358.a] immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the abandonment of all the afflicted mental states and their connecting propensities. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of abiding in perpetual equanimity there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of abiding in perpetual equanimity are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of abiding in perpetual equanimity. Blessed Lord, let alone however many good qualities of the state where the attributes do not decline there are that can be spoken about, the good qualities of the state where the attributes do not decline are immeasurable, and those relics of the tathāgatas are a container of the state where the attributes do not decline.

22.46 “Therefore, those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped.

22.47 “Blessed Lord, those relics of the tathāgatas are the container of the perfections that are precious jewels. Therefore, those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped. Blessed Lord, those relics of the tathāgatas are the container of the perfections that are neither afflicted nor purified. Therefore, those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped. Blessed Lord, those relics of the tathāgatas are the container of the perfections that neither arise nor cease. Therefore, those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped. Blessed Lord, those relics of the tathāgatas are the container of the perfections that are without appropriation and without rejection. Therefore, those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped. Blessed Lord, [F.358.b] those relics of the tathāgatas are the container of the perfections without subtraction and without addition.⁷⁴⁷ Therefore, those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped. Blessed Lord, those relics of the tathāgatas are the container of the perfections that are without coming, going, or staying. Therefore, those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped. Blessed Lord, those relics of the tathāgatas are the container of the perfections that are the reality of phenomena; those relics of the tathāgatas are imbued with the reality of phenomena. Therefore, those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped. Therefore, those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped even after the tathāgatas have passed into nirvāṇa.

22.48 “Moreover, leaving aside this thousandfold world system filled to the brim with relics of the tathāgatas, Blessed Lord, if I were presented with all the world systems of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, filled to the brim with the relics of the tathāgatas, and the perfection of wisdom, committed to writing in the form of a book, then, Blessed Lord, from those two choices I would take just this perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because the relics of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas have originated from her and that is why they get to be worshiped.

22.49 “Blessed Lord, it is because those relics of the tathāgatas get to be worshiped when the perfection of wisdom has been thoroughly cultivated.⁷⁴⁸ So, Blessed Lord, even the sons or daughters of good families who honor, respect, [F.359.a] venerate, and worship the relics of the tathāgatas, and, without apprehending the limit of those roots of virtue, on account of just those roots of virtue, having experienced the perfect state and happiness of human beings and gods among great and lofty royal families, or great and lofty priestly families, or great and lofty householder families, or among the gods of the Cāturmahārājika, or the gods of Trayastriṃśa, Yāma, Tuṣita, Nirmāṇarati, or Paranirmitavaśavartin, put an end to suffering—the fruit of their worshipping the relics of the tathāgatas finishes with just that.

22.50 “But when they take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, they will fulfill the perfection of meditative stability, they will fulfill the perfection of perseverance, they will fulfill the perfection of tolerance, they will fulfill the perfection of ethical discipline, and they will fulfill the perfection of generosity; they will fulfill the emptiness of internal phenomena, they will fulfill the emptiness of external phenomena, they will fulfill the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, they will fulfill the emptiness of emptiness, they will fulfill the emptiness of great extent, they will fulfill the emptiness of ultimate reality, they will fulfill the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, they will fulfill the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, they will fulfill the emptiness of the unlimited, they will fulfill [F.359.b] the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, they will fulfill the emptiness of nonexclusion, they will fulfill the emptiness of inherent nature, they will fulfill the emptiness of all phenomena, they will fulfill the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, they will fulfill the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, they will fulfill the emptiness of nonentities, they will fulfill the emptiness of essential nature, and they will fulfill the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; they will fulfill the four applications of mindfulness, they will fulfill the four correct exertions, they will fulfill the four supports for miraculous ability, they will fulfill the five faculties, they will fulfill the five powers, they will fulfill the seven branches of enlightenment, and they will fulfill the noble eightfold path; they will fulfill the four truths of the noble ones, they will fulfill the four meditative concentrations, they will fulfill the four immeasurable attitudes, they will fulfill the four formless absorptions, they will fulfill the eight liberations, they will fulfill the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, they will fulfill the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, they will fulfill the extrasensory powers, they will fulfill the meditative stabilities, and they [F.360.a] will fulfill the dhāraṇī gateways; and they will fulfill the ten powers of the tathāgatas, they will fulfill the four fearlessnesses, they will fulfill the four kinds of exact knowledge, they will fulfill great compassion, and they will fulfill the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. They will intentionally acquire a physical body, and through their physical bodies they will bring beings to maturation, which is to say, either with the body of an imperial monarch, or, having taken birth in a great and lofty royal family, a great and lofty priestly family, or a great and lofty householder family, with one of those bodies, or else in the form of Śakra, in the form of Brahmā, or in the form of Viśrāntin, as appropriate. In those bodies they will bring beings to maturation.

22.51 “Therefore, Blessed Lord, it is not that I do not want to honor the relics of the tathāgatas, that I do not believe in my heart⁷⁴⁹ in them, that I do not want to worship them, or that I do not want to hold them. Blessed Lord, it is that when the sons or daughters of good families serve, respect, honor, and worship this perfection of wisdom, they absolutely [F.360.b] do accumulate the cause for all the attributes of the buddhas, are in full possession of all excellences, and the relics of the tathāgatas will be served, respected, honored, and worshiped as well.

22.52 “Moreover, Blessed Lord, those wishing to behold and wishing to worship the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas, as many as there are, who reside and maintain themselves teaching the Dharma in the immeasurable and innumerable world systems of the ten directions as the dharma body, the form body, or the transcendental knowledge body, should take up, should uphold, should recite, should master, should worship, should teach extensively to others, and should focus their attention correctly on this very perfection of wisdom. Then those sons of good families or daughters sons of good families will behold the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas in the countless and immeasurable world systems of the ten directions. Therefore, those sons or daughters of good families who practice the perfection of wisdom should cultivate the recollection of the Buddha as the reality of phenomena.⁷⁵⁰

22.53 “Moreover, Blessed Lord, those sons or daughters of good families who wish to behold those tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas should take up, should uphold, should recite, should master, should worship, should teach extensively to others, and should focus their attention correctly on the reality of phenomena.

22.54 “Blessed Lord, these two are the reality of phenomena. [F.361.a] If you ask what these two are, they are the reality of conditioned phenomena and the reality of unconditioned phenomena. Of these, Blessed Lord, if you ask what is the reality of conditioned phenomena, the reality of conditioned phenomena is the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of internal phenomena, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of external phenomena, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of emptiness, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of great extent, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of ultimate reality, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of the unlimited, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of nonexclusion, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of inherent nature, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of all phenomena, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of nonentities, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of essential nature, and the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the transcendental knowledge of the four applications of mindfulness, the transcendental knowledge of the four correct exertions, the transcendental knowledge of the four supports for miraculous ability, the transcendental knowledge of the five faculties, the transcendental knowledge of the five powers, the transcendental knowledge of the seven branches of enlightenment, and the transcendental knowledge of the noble eightfold path; the transcendental knowledge of the four truths of the noble ones, the transcendental knowledge of the four meditative concentrations, the transcendental knowledge of the four immeasurable attitudes, the transcendental knowledge of the four formless absorptions, the transcendental knowledge of the eight liberations, the transcendental knowledge of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the transcendental knowledge of the emptiness, signlessness, [F.361.b] and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the transcendental knowledge of the five extrasensory powers, the transcendental knowledge of all the meditative stabilities, the transcendental knowledge of all the dhāraṇī gateways, the transcendental knowledge of the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the transcendental knowledge of the four fearlessnesses, the transcendental knowledge of the four kinds of exact knowledge, the transcendental knowledge of great compassion, and the transcendental knowledge of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and it is the transcendental knowledge of virtuous phenomena and the transcendental knowledge of nonvirtuous phenomena; the transcendental knowledge of uncontaminated phenomena and the transcendental knowledge of contaminated phenomena; and the transcendental knowledge of mundane phenomena and the transcendental knowledge of supramundane phenomena. That is called the reality of conditioned phenomena.

22.55 “If you ask what, of these, is the reality of unconditioned phenomena, it is the essential nature of that which is without arising and without ceasing, does not last and does not last and then change into something else, is without defilement and without purification, and is without increase and without decrease. If you ask what the essential nature of all phenomena is, it is that all phenomena are, in their essential nature, nonentities. This is called the reality of unconditioned phenomena.”

22.56 “Kauśika, it is so, it is so!” said the Blessed One. “The tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, as many as appeared, also fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, dependent on just this perfection of wisdom. [F.362.a] The tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the future, as many as will appear, will also fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, dependent on this perfection of wisdom. And the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the present time, as many as there are, who are residing and maintaining themselves and teaching the Dharma in the immeasurable and countless world systems of the ten directions, also fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, dependent on this perfection of wisdom.

22.57 “The śrāvakas of those tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, as many as appeared; of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the future, as many as will appear; and of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the present time, as many as there are, also, dependent on this perfection of wisdom, have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of once-returner; have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, will attain, and are attaining arhatship. The pratyekabuddhas of the past, as many as appeared; the pratyekabuddhas of the future, as many as will appear; and the pratyekabuddhas of the present time, as many as there are, [F.362.b] who are residing and maintaining themselves in the immeasurable and countless world systems of the ten directions, also have attained, will attain, and are attaining individual enlightenment, dependent on this perfection of wisdom.

22.58 “If you ask why, it is because this perfection of wisdom has extensively explained all the three vehicles—explained them by way of signlessness, by way of nonapprehending, by way of nonarising, by way of nonceasing, by way of nondefilement, by way of nonpurification, by way of nonconditioning, by way of nonappropriation, by way of nonrejection, by way of nondiminishing, by way of nonenhancing, by way of nongrasping, and by way of nonabandoning. Furthermore, it has explained them by way of worldly convention, not ultimately.

22.59 “If you ask why, it is because this perfection of wisdom has not gone far off and has not gone to the other side, is not over here and is not over there,⁷⁵¹ is not there as the plain and is not there as the valley,⁷⁵² is not even and is not uneven, is not a sign and is not signless, is not mundane and is not supramundane, is not a conditioned phenomenon and is not an unconditioned phenomenon, is not virtuous and is not nonvirtuous, and it is not past, is not future, and is not present.

22.60 “Kauśika, the perfection of wisdom is not the establisher of the attributes of the buddhas. Kauśika, the perfection of wisdom is not the establisher of the attributes of those who have entered the stream. Kauśika, the perfection of wisdom is not the establisher of the attributes of once-returners. Kauśika, [F.363.a] the perfection of wisdom is not the establisher of the attributes of the non-returners. Kauśika, the perfection of wisdom is not the establisher of the attributes of the arhats. Kauśika, the perfection of wisdom is not the establisher of the attributes of the pratyekabuddhas. Kauśika, the perfection of wisdom is not the rejecter of the attributes of ordinary persons. [B26]

22.61 Śakra replied, “Blessed Lord, this perfection of wisdom is a great perfection. Blessed Lord, the bodhisattva great beings who practice this perfection of wisdom know the minds and conduct of all beings, but they do not apprehend a being. They do not apprehend the designation of a being. They do not apprehend the self, do not apprehend a being, do not apprehend a life form, do not apprehend a living being, do not apprehend life, do not apprehend an individual, do not apprehend a person, do not apprehend one born of Manu, do not apprehend a child of Manu, do not apprehend an agent, do not apprehend an experiencer, do not apprehend a knower, and do not apprehend a viewer; they do not apprehend physical forms, do not apprehend feelings, do not apprehend perceptions, do not apprehend formative predispositions, and do not apprehend consciousness; they do not apprehend the eyes, do not [F.363.b] apprehend the ears, do not apprehend the nose, do not apprehend the tongue, do not apprehend the body, and do not apprehend the mental faculty; they do not apprehend sights, do not apprehend sounds, do not apprehend odors, do not apprehend tastes, do not apprehend tangibles, and do not apprehend mental phenomena; they do not apprehend visual consciousness, do not apprehend auditory consciousness, do not apprehend olfactory consciousness, do not apprehend gustatory consciousness, do not apprehend tactile consciousness, and do not apprehend mental consciousness; they do not apprehend visually compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend aurally compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend nasally compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend lingually compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend corporeally compounded sensory contact, and do not apprehend mentally compounded sensory contact; they do not apprehend feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, do not apprehend feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and do not apprehend feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; they do not apprehend the earth element, do not apprehend the water element, do not apprehend the fire element, do not apprehend [F.364.a] the wind element, do not apprehend the space element, and do not apprehend the consciousness element; they do not apprehend ignorance, do not apprehend formative predispositions, do not apprehend consciousness, do not apprehend name and form, do not apprehend the six sense fields, do not apprehend sensory contact, do not apprehend sensation, do not apprehend craving, do not apprehend grasping, do not apprehend the rebirth process, do not apprehend birth, and do not apprehend aging and death; they do not apprehend the perfection of generosity, do not apprehend the perfection of ethical discipline, do not apprehend the perfection of tolerance, do not apprehend the perfection of perseverance, do not apprehend the perfection of meditative concentration, and do not apprehend the perfection of wisdom; they do not apprehend the emptiness of internal phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of external phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of emptiness, do not apprehend the emptiness of great extent, do not apprehend the emptiness of ultimate reality, do not apprehend the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of the unlimited, do not apprehend the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, do not apprehend the emptiness of nonexclusion, [F.364.b] do not apprehend the emptiness of inherent nature, do not apprehend the emptiness of all phenomena, do not apprehend the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, do not apprehend the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, do not apprehend the emptiness of nonentities, do not apprehend the emptiness of essential nature, and do not apprehend the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; they do not apprehend the applications of mindfulness, do not apprehend the correct exertions, do not apprehend the supports for miraculous ability, do not apprehend the faculties, do not apprehend the powers, do not apprehend the branches of enlightenment, and do not apprehend the noble eightfold path; they do not apprehend the truths of the noble ones, do not apprehend the meditative concentrations, do not apprehend the immeasurable attitudes, do not apprehend the formless absorptions, do not apprehend the eight liberations, do not apprehend the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, do not apprehend the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, do not apprehend the extrasensory powers, do not apprehend the meditative stabilities, do not apprehend the dhāraṇī gateways, do not apprehend the powers of the tathāgatas, do not apprehend the fearlessnesses, do not apprehend the kinds [F.365.a] of exact knowledge, do not apprehend great compassion, and do not apprehend the distinct qualities of the buddhas; and they do not apprehend the fruit of having entered the stream, do not apprehend the fruit of once-returner, do not apprehend the fruit of non-returner, do not apprehend arhatship, do not apprehend individual enlightenment, do not apprehend the knowledge of the aspects of the path, do not apprehend enlightenment, do not apprehend a buddha, and do not apprehend the attributes of a buddha.

22.62 “The perfection of wisdom is not established by way of apprehending anything. If you ask why, it is because an essential nature that might apprehend, that might apprehend something, and that might apprehend somewhere does not exist in her.”

22.63 “Kauśika, it is so, it is so!” said the Blessed One. “Through practicing the perfection of wisdom for a long time without apprehending anything, those bodhisattva great beings do not apprehend even enlightenment, let alone a buddha, let alone the attributes of the buddhas.”

- 22.64 Śakra then asked, “Blessed Lord, do bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom but not practice the other perfections apart from it?”
- 22.65 “Kauśika,” replied the Blessed One, “bodhisattva great beings indeed practice all six perfections, but they do so without [F.365.b] apprehending anything. They do not apprehend a gift, do not apprehend a giver, and do not apprehend a recipient. They do not apprehend ethical discipline, do not apprehend someone who is ethically disciplined, and do not apprehend immorality. They do not apprehend tolerance, do not apprehend someone who is tolerant, and do not apprehend maliciousness. They do not apprehend perseverance, do not apprehend someone who perseveres, and do not apprehend indolence. They do not apprehend meditative concentration, do not apprehend someone who is in meditative concentration, and do not apprehend distraction. They do not apprehend wisdom, do not apprehend someone who is wise, and do not apprehend stupidity.
- 22.66 “Nevertheless, Kauśika, by way of not apprehending all phenomena—by way of not apprehending physical forms, by way of not apprehending feelings, by way of not apprehending perceptions, by way of not apprehending formative predispositions, and by way of not apprehending consciousness; by way of not apprehending the eyes, by way of not apprehending the ears, by way of not apprehending the nose, by way of not apprehending the tongue, by way of not apprehending the body, and by way of not apprehending the mental faculty; by way of not apprehending sights, by way of not apprehending sounds, by way of not apprehending odors, by way of not apprehending tastes, by way of not apprehending tangibles, and by way of not apprehending mental phenomena; by way of not apprehending visual consciousness, by way of not apprehending auditory consciousness, by way of not apprehending olfactory consciousness, by way of not apprehending gustatory consciousness, by way of not apprehending tactile consciousness, and by way of not apprehending mental consciousness; [F.366.a] by way of not apprehending visually compounded sensory contact, by way of not apprehending aurally compounded sensory contact, by way of not apprehending nasally compounded sensory contact, by way of not apprehending lingually compounded sensory contact, by way of not apprehending corporeally compounded sensory contact, and by way of not apprehending mentally compounded sensory contact; by way of not apprehending feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, by way of not apprehending feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, by way of not apprehending feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, by way of not apprehending feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, by way of not apprehending feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and by way of not apprehending feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; by way of not apprehending the earth element, by way of not apprehending the water element, by way of not apprehending the fire element, by way of not apprehending the wind element, by way of not apprehending the space element, and by way of not apprehending the consciousness element; by way of not apprehending ignorance, by way of not apprehending formative predispositions, by way of not apprehending consciousness, by way of not apprehending name and form, by way of not apprehending the six sense fields, by way of not apprehending sensory contact, by way of not apprehending sensation, by way of not apprehending craving, by way of not apprehending grasping, by way of not apprehending the rebirth process, by way of not apprehending birth, and by way of not apprehending aging and death; by way of not apprehending the perfection of generosity, by way of not apprehending the perfection of ethical discipline, by way of [F.366.b] not apprehending the perfection of tolerance, by way of not apprehending the perfection of perseverance, by way of not apprehending the perfection of meditative concentration, and by way of not apprehending the perfection of wisdom; by way of not apprehending the emptiness of internal phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of external phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of emptiness, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of great extent, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of ultimate reality, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of the unlimited, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of nonexclusion, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of inherent nature, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of all phenomena, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of nonentities, by way of not apprehending the emptiness of essential nature, and by way of not apprehending the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; by way of not apprehending the four applications of mindfulness, by way of not apprehending the four correct exertions, by way of not apprehending the four supports for miraculous ability, by way of not apprehending the five faculties, by way of not apprehending the five powers, by way of not apprehending the seven branches of enlightenment, and by way of not apprehending the noble eightfold path; by way of not apprehending the four truths of the noble ones, by way of [F.367.a] not apprehending the four meditative concentrations, by way of not apprehending the four immeasurable attitudes, by way of not apprehending the four formless absorptions, by way of not apprehending the eight liberations, by way of not apprehending the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, by way of not apprehending the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, by way of not apprehending the five extrasensory powers, by way of not apprehending all the meditative stabilities, by way of not apprehending all the dhāraṇī gateways, by way of not apprehending the ten powers of the tathāgatas, by way of not apprehending the four fearlessnesses, by way of not apprehending the four kinds of exact knowledge, by way of not apprehending great loving kindness, by way of not apprehending great compassion, and by way of not apprehending the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and by way of not apprehending the fruit of having entered the stream, by way of not apprehending the fruit of once-returner, by way of not apprehending the fruit of non-returner, by way of not apprehending arhatship, by way of not apprehending individual enlightenment, by way of not apprehending the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and by way of not apprehending all-aspect omniscience—just the perfection of wisdom takes precedence for bodhisattva great beings giving gifts in order to fulfill the perfection of generosity, just the perfection of wisdom takes precedence for bodhisattva great beings maintaining ethical discipline in order to fulfill the perfection of ethical discipline, [F.367.b] just the perfection of wisdom takes precedence for bodhisattva great beings fully achieving tolerance in order to fulfill the perfection of tolerance, just the perfection of wisdom takes precedence for bodhisattva great beings making an effort at perseverance in order to fulfill the perfection of perseverance, just the perfection of wisdom takes precedence for bodhisattva great beings absorbed in meditative concentration in order to fulfill the perfection of meditative concentration, and just the perfection of wisdom takes precedence for those bodhisattva great beings surveying⁷⁵³ phenomena in order to fulfill the perfection of wisdom.

- 22.67 “Kauśika, to illustrate, just as the trees of Jambudvīpa have diverse foliage, diverse flowers, diverse fruits, diverse shapes, and diverse height and width,⁷⁵⁴ but, insofar as their shade is concerned, are without distinctions or details, similarly, Kauśika, in the case of the five perfections that are assisted by the perfection of wisdom and have been dedicated to the transcendental knowledge of an all-aspect omniscient one, no distinctions or details are apprehended.”

- 22.68 Śakra then said, “Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom is endowed with great good qualities because it fulfills all good qualities. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom is endowed with immeasurable good qualities because it is endowed with good qualities that are immeasurable.⁷⁵⁵ [F.368.a] Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom is endowed with limitless good qualities because it is endowed with boundless good qualities.⁷⁵⁶
- 22.69 “Blessed Lord, any sons or daughters of good families who, having committed this perfection of wisdom to writing and made it into a book, were to uphold it and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, incense, unguents, butter lamps, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, ribbons, and diverse musical instruments, and, on top of that, were to focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom as it has been explained, and were any sons or daughters of good families, having made this perfection of wisdom into a book, to bestow it upon others, which of these two would increase the merit more?”
- 22.70 “So then, Kauśika,” replied the Blessed One, “I will ask you yourself a question and you should answer as best you can. Kauśika, were certain sons or daughters of good families to serve, respect, honor, and worship many relics of the tathāgatas with flowers, garlands, incense, unguents, butter lamps, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, ribbons, and diverse musical instruments, and were certain sons or daughters of good families to give mustard seed-size relic of the tathāgatas, were to share them so certain sons or daughters of good families, having received [F.368.b] a mustard seed-size relic of the tathāgatas, might serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, incense, unguents, butter lamps, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, ribbons, and diverse musical instruments, which of these two do you think would increase the merit more?”
- 22.71 Śakra answered, “Blessed Lord, as I understand the meaning of what the Blessed Lord has said, those who bestow a mustard seed-size relic of the tathāgatas on others would increase merit more than the sons or daughters of good families who have served, respected, honored, and worshiped many relics of the tathāgatas with flowers, garlands, incense, unguents, butter lamps, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, ribbons, and diverse musical instruments.
- 22.72 “Blessed Lord, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas, seeing that very fact, generated great compassion for the beings, among the classes of beings, who can be trained by means of the pearl relics⁷⁵⁷ of the tathāgata, became absorbed in the vajra-like meditative stability, destroyed their vajra-like body, and the blessed relics of the tathāgatas remained. Blessed Lord, if any were to worship a relic of the tathāgatas, as small as it gets, mustard-seed size, with various offerings, by the time that root of virtue reached its end they would all have made an end to suffering.”

22.73 “Kauśika, it is so, it is so!” said the Blessed One.

“Kauśika, [F.369.a] any sons or daughters of good families who commit this perfection of wisdom to writing and then bestow it upon others out of joy in the Dharma would increase merit more than the sons or daughters of good families who, having made this perfection of wisdom into a book, have served, respected, honored, and worshiped it with flowers, garlands, incense, unguents, butter lamps, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, ribbons, and diverse musical instruments.

22.74 “Moreover, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to approach others and explain and teach, expound and interpret, and disclose and elucidate the perfection of wisdom, just as it has been taught, those sons or daughters of good families would increase merit more than the former sons or daughters of good families. They would be thought of as the Teacher. They would be thought of as those worthy of the position of guru, as learned⁷⁵⁸ and like Brahmā in conduct.⁷⁵⁹ If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because they are the Teacher of this very perfection of wisdom. The Teacher is not one thing and the perfection of wisdom another; rather, the very perfection of wisdom is the Teacher, and the very Teacher is the perfection of wisdom. If you ask why, it is because, having trained in this very perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, [F.369.b] perfect, complete enlightenment. Those who are like Brahmā in conduct are none other than the irreversible bodhisattvas. They too, having trained in this same perfection of wisdom, have attained, will attain, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

22.75 “Kauśika, those who follow the vehicle of the śrāvakas too, having trained in this very perfection of wisdom, have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of once-returner; have attained, will attain, and are attaining the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, will attain, and are attaining arhatship. Those who follow the vehicle of the śrāvakas too, having trained in this very perfection of wisdom, have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to individual enlightenment. Bodhisattva great beings too, having trained in this very perfection of wisdom, have entered, will enter, and are entering a bodhisattva’s full maturity. They have attained, will attain, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

- 22.76 “Therefore, Kauśika, the sons or daughters of good families who wish to honor, who wish to venerate, who wish to respect, and who wish to worship the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas with flowers, garlands, perfume, unguents, butter lamps, powders, [F.370.a] robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and diverse musical instruments should commit this perfection of wisdom to writing and serve, respect, honor, and worship it with flowers, garlands, incense, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, ribbons, and diverse musical instruments.
- 22.77 “Kauśika, when I, seeing the force of this very fact, having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, thought, ‘What should I rely on and make a practice of serving, respecting, honoring, worshiping?’ and when, Kauśika, in regard to that, I did not observe anyone similar or superior to me in this world with its gods, demons, and Brahmā deities, with its beings who are virtuous ascetics and brahmin priests, and with its many gods, humans, and asuras, I thought, ‘In that case, I should rely on and make a practice of serving, respecting, honoring, worshiping just that peaceful, sublime Dharma through which I myself fully awakened.’
- 22.78 “Kauśika, if you ask what that Dharma is, it is this very perfection of wisdom. So it is, Kauśika, that even somebody like me⁷⁶⁰ honors, venerates, respects, and worships this perfection of wisdom, and given that I make a practice of serving, respecting, honoring, and worshiping in that manner, Kauśika, [F.370.b] it goes without saying that those sons or daughters of good families who wish to fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment should serve, respect, honor, and worship this very perfection of wisdom with flowers, garlands, perfume, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and diverse musical instruments. It goes without saying that those sons or daughters of good families who follow the vehicle of the śrāvakas and those sons or daughters of good families who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas should serve, respect, honor, and worship the perfection of wisdom with flowers, garlands, perfume, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, and diverse musical instruments. If you ask why, it is because the bodhisattva great beings have originated from the perfection of wisdom; the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas have originated from the bodhisattvas; and the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas have originated from the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas.
- 22.79 “Therefore, Kauśika, sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas, or sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the śrāvakas or the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas, should serve, respect, honor, and worship the perfection of wisdom with flowers, garlands, perfume, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory [F.371.a] banners, flags, and diverse musical instruments. Those sons or daughters of good families who train accordingly in her, have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment; those who follow the vehicle of the śrāvakas also have attained, will attain, and are attaining arhatship; and those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas also have attained, will attain, and are attaining individual enlightenment.”

22.80 This completes the twenty-second chapter from “The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines.”

23.

CHAPTER 23: ŚAKRA

23.1 Then the Blessed One said to Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of Jambudvīpa in the paths of the ten virtuous actions, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would have greatly increased their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!”

23.2 The Blessed One then said, “Kauśika, if any were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might recite it, write it out, or chant it by heart, they would even more greatly increase their merit than that. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively such attributes as those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature⁷⁶¹ have attained, [F.371.b] attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, fully awaken, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.3 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of

conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which [F.372.a] cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. They are the uncontaminated attributes. They are taught extensively in the perfection of wisdom. Having trained in them, sons or daughters of good families have fully awakened, fully awaken, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

- 23.4 “Kauśika, if they have established a single being in the fruit of having entered the stream, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families would increase more greatly, but it would not from having established the beings of Jambudvīpa in the paths of the ten virtuous actions. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the beings who are established in the paths of the ten virtuous actions are not liberated [F.372.b] from the hells, the animal realm, and the world of Yama. Kauśika, since the being who has been established in the fruit of having entered the stream is liberated from the hells, the animal realm, and the world of Yama, what need one say about those who are established in the fruit of once-returner, the fruit of non-returner, and arhatship.
- 23.5 “Kauśika, any who have established a single being in individual enlightenment would increase their merit more greatly than any who have established the beings of Jambudvīpa in the fruit of having entered the stream, the fruit of once-returner, the fruit of non-returner, or arhatship.
- 23.6 “Kauśika, any sons or daughters of good families who have established a single being in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment would increase their merit more greatly than any sons or daughters of good families who have established the beings of Jambudvīpa in the fruit of having entered the stream. If you ask why, it is because the single being⁷⁶² has acted in order that the continuum of the way of the Buddha will not be cut.

- 23.7 “Kauśika, any sons or daughters of good families who have established a single being in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment would increase their merit more greatly than any sons or daughters of good families who have established the beings of Jambudvīpa in the fruit of once-returner. If you ask why, it is because the single being has acted [F.373.a] in order that the continuum of the way of the Buddha will not be cut.
- 23.8 “Kauśika, any sons or daughters of good families who have established a single being in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment would increase their merit more greatly than any sons or daughters of good families who have established the beings of Jambudvīpa in the fruit of non-returner. If you ask why, it is because the single being has acted in order that the continuum of the way of the Buddha will not be cut.
- 23.9 “Kauśika, any sons or daughters of good families who have established a single being in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment would increase their merit more greatly than any sons or daughters of good families who have established the beings of Jambudvīpa in arhatship. If you ask why, it is because the single being has acted in order that the continuum of the way of the Buddha will not be cut.
- 23.10 “Kauśika, any sons or daughters of good families who have established a single being in unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment would increase their merit more greatly than any sons or daughters of good families who have established the beings of Jambudvīpa in individual enlightenment. If you ask why, it is because the single being who is placed into unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment has acted in order that the continuum of the way of the Buddha will not be cut.
- 23.11 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those who have entered the stream, once-returners, non-returners, arhats, and pratyekabuddhas have originated from the bodhisattvas. The tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas [F.373.b] have originated from the bodhisattvas. Therefore, Kauśika, one should know this to be the case, that the bodhisattvas should be worshiped and respected, that they should be served, respected, honored, and worshiped with flowers, garlands, perfume, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, ribbons, and diverse musical instruments by the world with its gods, its demons, its Brahmā deities, and its virtuous ascetics and brahmin priests.
- 23.12 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish all the beings of Jambudvīpa in the paths of the ten virtuous actions, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”
- “Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.13 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would even more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; [F.374.a] have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, fully awaken, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.14 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, [F.374.b] the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

- 23.15 “From this round of teaching⁷⁶³ also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.
- 23.16 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, [F.375.a] the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇāśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; [F.375.b] that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.17 “Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of Jambudvīpa, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings [F.376.a] of the world system with its four continents, as many as there are, in the paths of the ten virtuous actions, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.18 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken [F.376.b] to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

- 23.19 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, [F.377.a] and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.
- 23.20 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.
- 23.21 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the

gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; [F.377.b] that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, [F.378.a] the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream

exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.22 “Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of the world system with its four continents, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the small thousandfold world system, as many as there are, in the paths of the ten virtuous actions, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.23 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, [F.378.b] “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.24 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, [F.379.a] the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for

miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.25 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart [F.379.b] increase their merit more greatly.

23.26 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, [F.380.a] the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, [F.380.b] the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist. [B27]

23.27 “Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of the small thousandfold world system, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the medium millionfold world system, as many as there are, in the paths of the ten virtuous actions, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.28 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, [F.381.a] having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.29 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, [F.381.b] the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.30 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.31 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, [F.382.a] great and lofty priestly families exist, and

great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, [F.382.b] the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, [F.383.a] the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.32 “Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of the medium millionfold world system, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the great billionfold world system, as many as there are, in the paths of the ten virtuous actions, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.33 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain [F.383.b] the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.34 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the

emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; [F.384.a] the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.35 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.36 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, [F.384.b] and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, [F.385.a] the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, [F.385.b] once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.37 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the world systems in each of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the paths of the ten virtuous actions, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.38 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, [F.386.a] attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.39 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, [F.386.b] the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.40 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.41 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, [F.387.a] and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇāśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature [F.387.b] of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.42 “Moreover, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families [F.388.a] were to establish the human beings of Jambudvīpa, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.43 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to [F.388.b] unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.44 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, [F.389.a] great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.45 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.46 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the

gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, [F.389.b] the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; [F.390.a] that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream

exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.47 “Leaving aside the beings of Jambudvīpa, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings in the world system with its four continents, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, [F.390.b] and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.48 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.49 “Kauśika, if you ask what [F.391.a] are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, [F.391.b] great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.50 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.51 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana [F.392.a] realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, [F.392.b] the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.52 “Leaving aside the beings in the world system with its four continents, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings in the thousandfold world system, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! [F.393.a] Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.53 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.54 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, [F.393.b] the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.55 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom [F.394.a] into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

“If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇāśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods [F.394.b] of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless

absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, [F.395.a] the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist. [V19] [F.1.b] [B1]

23.57 “Leaving aside the beings in the thousandfold world system, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings in the medium millionfold world system, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.58 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, [F.2.a] or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.59 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, [F.2.b] the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of

internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.60 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know [F.3.a] that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.61 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, [F.3.b] the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, [F.4.a] the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.62 “Leaving aside the beings in the medium millionfold world system Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings in the great billionfold world system, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.63 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to [F.4.b] writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.64 "Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, [F.5.a] the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of

exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.65 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.66 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by [F.5.b] this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, [F.6.a] and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; [F.6.b] that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.67 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the world systems in the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.68 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; [F.7.a] have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.69 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, [F.7.b] and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.70 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.71 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, [F.8.a] the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, [F.8.b] the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, [F.9.a] once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.72 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the world systems in the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.73 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain [F9.b] the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.74 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of

mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, [F.10.a] the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.75 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.76 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, [F.10.b] the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of

emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of an inherent nature exists, [F.11.a] the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, [F.11.b] arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.77 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the world systems in the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.78 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain [F.12.a] the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.79 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, [F.12.b] the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.80 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.81 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and

lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, [F.13.a] the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, [F.13.b] the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, [F.14.a] arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.82 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the world systems in the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.83 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; [F.14.b] have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.84 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of

conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; [F.15.a] the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.85 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.86 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, [F.15.b] the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣṭa realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapāraśadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; [B2] that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, [F.16.a] the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, [F.16.b] and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

- 23.87 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the world systems in the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.88 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.89 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, [F.17.a] they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.90 “From this round [F.17.b] of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.91 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇāśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, [F.18.a] the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, [F.18.b] the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.92 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the world systems in the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.93 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; [F.19.a] and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.94 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, [F.19.b] the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.95 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.96 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parītaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, [F.20.a] the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, [F.20.b] the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.97 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the world systems in the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.98 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. [F.21.a] If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.99 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, [F.21.b] and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of

mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.100 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.101 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm exist, [F.22.a] and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of

emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, [F.22.b] the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.102 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the world systems in the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, [F.23.a] do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.103 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.104 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; [F.23.b] the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.105 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.106 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these [F.24.a] that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parītābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaṅvṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaṅvṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, [F.24.b] the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, [F.25.a] pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

23.107 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the world systems in the direction below, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.108 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter [F.25.b] into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.109 “Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of

internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, [F.26.a] the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.110 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.111 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods [F.26.b] of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, [F.27.a] the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist.

- 23.112 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to establish the beings of the world systems in the direction above, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the four meditative concentrations, and establish them in the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.113 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if any sons or daughters of good families were to bestow a book of this perfection of wisdom on others so that they might commit it to writing, or recite it, or chant it by heart, they would more greatly increase their merit. If you ask why, it is because in this perfection of wisdom it reveals extensively those uncontaminated attributes, having trained in which sons or daughters of good families have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the perfect nature; have attained, attain, [F.27.b] and will attain the fruit of having entered the stream; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of once-returner; have attained, attain, and will attain the fruit of non-returner; and have attained, attain, and will attain arhatship; those who follow the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas have attained, attain, and will attain individual enlightenment; and those who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment have entered, enter, and will enter into the maturity of the bodhisattvas, and have fully awakened, are fully awakening, and will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.114 "Kauśika, if you ask what are those uncontaminated attributes, they are the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and [F.28.a] the four truths of the noble ones, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the six extrasensory powers, all the meditative stabilities, all the

dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, great loving kindness, great compassion, great empathetic joy, and great equanimity. It also reveals extensively other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas.

23.115 “From this round of teaching also, Kauśika, one should know that any sons or daughters of good families who make this perfection of wisdom into a book and give it to others in order that they might recite it, write it out, and chant it by heart increase their merit more greatly.

23.116 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all the attributes are revealed extensively by this perfection of wisdom. It is owing to these that great and lofty royal families exist, great and lofty priestly families exist, and great and lofty householder families exist; that the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm exist, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm exist, the gods of the Yāma realm exist, the gods of the Tuṣita realm exist, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm exist, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm exist; that the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm exist, the gods of the Brahmapārśadya realm exist, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm exist; that the gods of the Ābha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttābha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm exist, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm [F.28.b] exist; that the gods of the Śubha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇāśubha realm exist, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm exist; that the gods of the Vṛha realm exist, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm exist, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm exist, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm exist; that the gods of the Avṛha realm exist, the gods of the Atapa realm exist, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm exist, the gods of the Sudarśana realm exist, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm exist; that the gods of the sphere of infinite space exist, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness exist, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all exist, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception exist; that the perfection of generosity exists, the perfection of ethical discipline exists, the perfection of tolerance exists, the perfection of perseverance exists, the perfection of meditative concentration exists, and the perfection of wisdom exists; that the emptiness of internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of external phenomena exists, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena exists, the emptiness of emptiness exists, the emptiness of great extent exists, the emptiness of ultimate reality exists, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena exists, the emptiness of the unlimited exists, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end exists, the emptiness of nonexclusion exists, the emptiness of inherent nature exists, the emptiness of all phenomena exists, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics exists, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended exists, the emptiness of nonentities exists, the emptiness of essential nature exists, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities exists; that the applications of mindfulness exist, the correct exertions exist, the supports for miraculous ability exist, the faculties exist, the powers exist, the branches of enlightenment exist, [F.29.a] and the noble eightfold path exists; that the truths of the noble ones exist, the meditative concentrations exist, the immeasurable attitudes exist, the formless absorptions exist, the eight liberations exist, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption exist, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation exist, the extrasensory powers exist, the meditative stabilities exist, the dhāraṇī gateways exist, the powers of the tathāgatas exist, the fearlessnesses exist, the kinds of exact knowledge exist, great compassion exists, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas exist; that the fruit of having entered the stream exists, the fruit of once-returner exists, the fruit of non-returner exists, arhatship exists, individual enlightenment exists, the knowledge of the aspects of the path exists, and all-aspect omniscience exists; and that those who have entered the stream exist, once-returners exist, non-returners exist, arhats exist, pratyekabuddhas exist, bodhisattva great beings exist, and the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas exist. [B3]

- 23.117 “Moreover, Kauśika,⁷⁶⁴ if any sons or daughters of good families were to take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on this perfection of wisdom, their merit would greatly increase, but it would not from having established the beings of Jambudvīpa in the path of the ten virtuous actions, or from having established them in the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, [F.29.b] the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers; it would not from having established the beings of the world system with its four continents in the path of the ten virtuous actions, or from having established them in the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers; it would not from having established the beings of the thousandfold world system in the path of the ten virtuous actions, or from having established them in the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers; it would not from having established the beings of the medium millionfold world system in the path of the ten virtuous actions, or from having established them in the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers; and it would not from having established the beings of the great billionfold world system in the path of the ten virtuous actions, or from having established them in the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers.

23.118 “As for focusing the attention correctly on her, it is this: With a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on the perfection of wisdom. With a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on the perfection of meditative concentration. With a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they take up, uphold, recite, [F.30.a] master, and focus their attention correctly on the perfection of perseverance. With a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on the perfection of tolerance. With a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on the perfection of ethical discipline. And with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on the perfection of generosity.

23.119 “With a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of internal phenomena; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of external phenomena; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of external and internal phenomena; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of emptiness; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of great extent; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of ultimate reality; [F.30.b] with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of conditioned phenomena; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of the unlimited; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of nonexclusion; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of inherent nature; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of all phenomena; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of nonentities; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of essential nature; and with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

23.120 “With a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the applications of mindfulness; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the correct exertions; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the supports for miraculous ability; [F.31.a] with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the faculties; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the powers; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the branches of enlightenment; and with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the noble eightfold path.

23.121 “With a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the truths of the noble ones; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the meditative concentrations; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the immeasurable attitudes; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the formless absorptions; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the eight liberations; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the nine serial steps of meditative absorption; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the extrasensory powers; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in [F.31.b] nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the meditative stabilities; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the dhāraṇī gateways; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the powers of the tathāgatas; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the fearlessnesses; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the kinds of exact knowledge; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on great compassion; and with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

23.122 “With a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on knowledge of all the dharmas; with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on the knowledge of the aspects of the path; and with a mind that is not engaging in duality and not engaging in nonduality, they focus their attention correctly on all-aspect omniscience.

23.123 “Moreover, Kauśika, if any son or daughter of good family were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail to others in many rounds of teaching, were to explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose and give conclusive instructions about its meaning, there the meaning of the perfection of wisdom would be as follows: it should not be viewed as a duality and should not be viewed as a [F.32.a] nonduality, not as having a sign and not as signless, not as appropriated and not as rejected, not as subtracted from and not as added to, not as defilement and not as purification, not as arising and not as ceasing, not as taken up and not as not taken up, not as adopted and not as repudiated, not as abiding and not as not abiding, not as authentic and not as erroneous, not as conjoined and not as disjoined, not as hybrid and not as not hybrid, not as conditional and not as unconditional, not as a phenomenon and not as not a phenomenon, not as real nature and not as not real nature, and not as the very limit of reality and not as not the very limit of reality.

23.124 “The son or daughter of good family, Kauśika, who describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail in many rounds of teaching, and explains and interprets, analyzes and elucidates, and completely discloses and gives conclusive instructions about its meaning to others, greatly increases their merit, but not those who take up, master, uphold, read, and focus their attention correctly on it for themselves alone.

23.125 “Moreover, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus their attention correctly on this profound perfection of wisdom, and were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail in many rounds of teaching themselves, and also were to explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose and give conclusive instructions about its meaning to others as well, then, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families would very greatly increase.”

23.126 Śakra then asked, “Blessed Lord, should those sons or daughters of good families thus give instructions according to the meaning and the letter of the perfection of wisdom?”

23.127 “Kauśika,” replied the Blessed One, “sons or daughters of good families should give instructions according to the meaning and the letter of the perfection of wisdom. Kauśika, the sons or daughters of good families who give instruction according to the meaning and [F.32.b] the letter in that manner will possess immeasurable and incalculable masses of merit.

23.128 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were, for the duration of their lives, to serve, respect, honor, and worship the immeasurable, countless tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the eastern direction with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, various musical instruments, and all the requirements for happiness, compared to them, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to others in many rounds of teaching, and were to explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it, this merit of those sons or daughters of good families would increase more greatly. If you ask why, it is because, having trained in this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.129 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were, for the duration of their lives, to serve, respect, honor, and worship the immeasurable, countless tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the southern direction with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, various musical instruments, and all the requirements for happiness, compared to them, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to others in many rounds of teaching, and were to explain and interpret, analyze [F.33.a] and elucidate, and completely disclose it, this merit of those sons or daughters of good families would increase more greatly. If you ask why, it is because, having trained in this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.130 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were, for the duration of their lives, to serve, respect, honor, and worship the immeasurable, countless tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the western direction with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, various musical instruments, and all the requirements for happiness, compared to them, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to others in many rounds of teaching, and were to explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it, this merit of those sons or daughters of good families would increase more greatly. If you ask why, it is because, having trained in this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.131 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were, [F.33.b] for the duration of their lives, to serve, respect, honor, and worship the immeasurable, countless tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the northern direction with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, various musical instruments, and all the requirements for happiness, compared to them, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to others in many rounds of teaching, and were to explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it, this merit of those sons or daughters of good families would increase more greatly. If you ask why, it is because, having trained in this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.132 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were, for the duration of their lives, to serve, respect, honor, and worship the immeasurable, countless tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the intermediate northeastern direction with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, various musical instruments, and all the requirements for happiness, compared to them, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to others in many rounds of teaching, and were to explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it, [F.34.a] this merit of those sons or daughters of good families would increase more greatly. If you ask why, it is because, having trained in this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.133 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were, for the duration of their lives, to serve, respect, honor, and worship the immeasurable, countless tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the intermediate southeastern direction with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, various musical instruments, and all the requirements for happiness, compared to them, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to others in many rounds of teaching, and were to explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it, this merit of those sons or daughters of good families would increase more greatly. If you ask why, it is because, having trained in this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.134 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were, for the duration of their lives, to serve, respect, honor, and worship the immeasurable, [F.34.b] countless tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the intermediate southwestern direction with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, various musical instruments, and all the requirements for happiness, compared to them, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to others in many rounds of teaching, and were to explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it, this merit of those sons or daughters of good families would increase more greatly. If you ask why, it is because, having trained in this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.135 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were, for the duration of their lives, to serve, respect, honor, and worship the immeasurable, countless tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the intermediate northwestern direction with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, various musical instruments, and all the requirements for happiness, compared to them, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to others in many rounds of teaching, and were to explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it, [F.35.a] this merit of those sons or daughters of good families would increase more greatly. If you ask why, it is because, having trained in this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.136 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were, for the duration of their lives, to serve, respect, honor, and worship the immeasurable, countless tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the direction below with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, flags, various musical instruments, and all the requirements for happiness, compared to them, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to others in many rounds of teaching, and were to explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it, this merit of those sons or daughters of good families would increase more greatly. If you ask why, it is because, having trained in this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.137 “Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were, for the duration of their lives, to serve, respect, honor, and worship [F.35.b] the immeasurable, countless tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the direction above with flowers, garlands, perfumes, unguents, powders, robes, parasols,

victory banners, flags, various musical instruments, and all the requirements for happiness, compared to them, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to others in many rounds of teaching, and were to explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it, this merit of those sons or daughters of good families would increase more greatly. If you ask why, it is because, having trained in this perfection of wisdom, the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present have fully awakened, will fully awaken, and are fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.138 “Moreover, Kauśika, compared to any sons or daughters of good families who, over immeasurable, countless eons, practice the perfection of generosity by way of apprehending anything; over immeasurable, countless eons, practice the perfection of ethical discipline by way of apprehending anything; over immeasurable, countless eons, practice the perfection of tolerance by way of apprehending anything; over immeasurable, countless eons, practice the perfection of perseverance by way of apprehending anything; over immeasurable, countless eons, practice the perfection of meditative concentration by way of apprehending anything; and over immeasurable, countless eons, practice the perfection of wisdom by way of apprehending anything, [F.36.a] if someone, without apprehending anything, describes and teaches in detail this perfection of wisdom according to the meaning and the letter to others in many rounds of teaching, and explains, arranges and establishes, analyzes and elucidates, and completely discloses it, their merit increases much more.

23.139 “In regard to this apprehending something, Kauśika, here if bodhisattvas give a gift by way of apprehending something, and think, ‘I am giving a gift. This is the gift that I am giving. I will give to them,’ the generosity of those giving in that manner is just generosity, but it is not the perfection of generosity. If they maintain ethical discipline by way of apprehending something, and think, ‘I am maintaining ethical discipline. This is the ethical discipline that I am maintaining,’ the maintenance of ethical discipline in that manner is just ethical discipline, but it is not the perfection of ethical discipline. If they cultivate tolerance by way of apprehending something, and think, ‘I am cultivating tolerance. This is the tolerance that I am cultivating,’ the cultivation of tolerance in that manner is just tolerance, but it is not the perfection of tolerance. If they undertake perseverance by way of apprehending something, and think, ‘I am undertaking perseverance. This is the perseverance that I am undertaking,’ the undertaking of perseverance in that manner is just perseverance, but it is not the perfection of perseverance. If they are absorbed in meditative concentration by way of apprehending something, and think, 'I am absorbed in meditative concentration. This is the meditative concentration that I am absorbed in,' the absorption in meditative concentration in that manner is just meditative concentration, but it is not the perfection of meditative concentration. If they cultivate wisdom by way of apprehending something, and think, [F.36.b] 'I am cultivating wisdom. This is the wisdom that I am cultivating,' the cultivation of wisdom in that manner is just wisdom, but it is not the perfection of wisdom.

23.140 “Kauśika, sons or daughters of good families who practice while apprehending in that manner do not complete the perfection of generosity, do not complete the perfection of ethical discipline, do not complete the perfection of tolerance, do not complete the perfection of perseverance, do not complete the perfection of meditative concentration, and do not complete the perfection of wisdom.”

23.141 Śakra then asked, “Blessed Lord, how do bodhisattva great beings practice when the perfection of generosity is complete? How do bodhisattva great beings practice when the perfection of ethical discipline is complete? How do bodhisattva great beings practice when the perfection of tolerance is complete? How do bodhisattva great beings practice when the perfection of perseverance is complete? How do bodhisattva great beings practice when the perfection of meditative concentration is complete? And how do bodhisattva great beings practice when the perfection of wisdom is complete?”

23.142 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “here, when bodhisattva great beings undertake acts of generosity, they do not apprehend the undertaking, and they do not apprehend the act of generosity or the recipient. When they maintain ethical discipline, they do not apprehend ethical discipline or the proper adopting of ethical discipline. When they cultivate tolerance, they do not apprehend tolerance or the cultivation of tolerance. When they undertake perseverance, they do not apprehend [F.37.a] perseverance or the undertaking of perseverance. When they become absorbed in meditative concentration, they do not apprehend meditative concentration or the cultivation of meditative concentration. When they cultivate wisdom, they do not apprehend wisdom, the cultivation of wisdom, or being endowed with wisdom.

23.143 “Kauśika, when bodhisattva great beings practice in that manner, the perfection of generosity is complete, the perfection of ethical discipline is complete, the perfection of tolerance is complete, the perfection of perseverance is complete, the perfection of meditative concentration is complete, and the perfection of wisdom is complete.

- 23.144 “Kauśika, given sons or daughters of good families without such a comprehension, instruction in the perfection of wisdom should be according to the meaning and the letter.⁷⁶⁵ Given those without such a comprehension, instruction in the perfection of meditative concentration should be according to the meaning and the letter. Given those without such a comprehension, instruction in the perfection of perseverance should be according to the meaning and the letter. Given those without such a comprehension, instruction in the perfection of tolerance should be according to the meaning and the letter. Given those without such a comprehension, instruction in the perfection of ethical discipline should be according to the meaning and the letter. And given those without such a comprehension, instruction in the perfection of generosity should be according to the meaning and the letter.
- 23.145 “If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because at a time in the future there will be certain sons or daughters of good families who will give instructions in a reflection⁷⁶⁶ of perfection of wisdom to followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattvas. Even sons or daughters of good families who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, having heard that reflection, will destroy the path, [F.37.b] so instruction in the perfection of wisdom should be given to them according to the meaning and the letter.”
- 23.146 Śakra then asked, “Blessed Lord, what is a reflection of the perfection of wisdom?”
- “In this regard, Kauśika,” replied the Blessed One, “sons or daughters of good families thinking, ‘We will give instruction in the perfection of wisdom,’ give instruction in the reflection.”
- 23.147 Śakra asked, “Blessed Lord, how do those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in a reflection of the perfection of wisdom?”
- 23.148 “Kauśika,” replied the Blessed One, “in this regard, when sons or daughters of good families are giving instruction in the perfection of wisdom, they are giving instruction in a reflection of the perfection of wisdom. There, a reflection of the perfection of wisdom is like this: They teach that physical forms are impermanent, teach that physical forms are suffering, teach that physical forms are nonself, and teach that physical forms are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine⁷⁶⁷ that physical forms are impermanent, imagine that physical forms are suffering, imagine that physical forms are nonself, and imagine that physical forms are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that physical forms are impermanent, imagine that physical forms are suffering, imagine that physical forms are nonself, and imagine that physical forms are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

- 23.149 “They teach that feelings are impermanent, teach that feelings are suffering, teach that feelings are nonself, and teach that feelings are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught [F.38.a] will also imagine that feelings are impermanent, imagine that feelings are suffering, imagine that feelings are nonself, and imagine that feelings are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that feelings are impermanent, imagine that feelings are suffering, imagine that feelings are nonself, and imagine that feelings are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.150 “They teach that perceptions are impermanent, teach that perceptions are suffering, teach that perceptions are nonself, and teach that perceptions are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that perceptions are impermanent, imagine that perceptions are suffering, imagine that perceptions are nonself, and imagine that perceptions are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that perceptions are impermanent, imagine that perceptions are suffering, imagine that perceptions are nonself, and imagine that perceptions are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.151 “They teach that formative predispositions are impermanent, teach that formative predispositions are suffering, teach that formative predispositions are nonself, and teach that formative predispositions are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that formative predispositions are impermanent, imagine that formative predispositions are suffering, imagine that formative predispositions are nonself, and imagine that formative predispositions are unpleasant. Thus, because they [F.38.b] imagine that formative predispositions are impermanent, imagine that formative predispositions are suffering, imagine that formative predispositions are nonself, and imagine that formative predispositions are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.152 “They teach that consciousness is impermanent, teach that consciousness is suffering, teach that consciousness is nonself, and teach that consciousness is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that consciousness is impermanent, imagine that consciousness is suffering, imagine that consciousness is nonself, and imagine that consciousness is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that consciousness is impermanent, imagine that consciousness is suffering, imagine that consciousness is nonself, and imagine that consciousness is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.153 “They teach that the eyes are impermanent, teach that the eyes are suffering, teach that the eyes are nonself, and teach that the eyes are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the eyes are impermanent, imagine that the eyes are suffering, imagine that the eyes are nonself, and imagine that the eyes are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the eyes are impermanent, imagine that the eyes are suffering, imagine that the eyes are nonself, and imagine that the eyes are unpleasant, [F.39.a] they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.154 “They teach that the ears are impermanent, teach that the ears are suffering, teach that the ears are nonself, and teach that the ears are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the ears are impermanent, imagine that the ears are suffering, imagine that the ears are nonself, and imagine that the ears are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the ears are impermanent, imagine that the ears are suffering, imagine that the ears are nonself, and imagine that the ears are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.155 “They teach that the nose is impermanent, teach that the nose is suffering, teach that the nose is nonself, and teach that the nose is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the nose is impermanent, imagine that the nose is suffering, imagine that the nose is nonself, and imagine that the nose is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the nose is impermanent, imagine that the nose is suffering, imagine that the nose is nonself, and imagine that the nose is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.156 “They teach that the tongue is impermanent, teach that the tongue is suffering, teach that the tongue is nonself, and teach that the tongue is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the tongue is impermanent, imagine that the tongue is suffering, imagine that the tongue is nonself, [F.39.b] and imagine that the tongue is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the tongue is impermanent, imagine that the tongue is suffering, imagine that the tongue is nonself, and imagine that the tongue is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

- 23.157 “They teach that the body is impermanent, teach that the body is suffering, teach that the body is nonself, and teach that the body is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the body is impermanent, imagine that the body is suffering, imagine that the body is nonself, and imagine that the body is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the body is impermanent, imagine that the body is suffering, imagine that the body is nonself, and imagine that the body is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.158 “They teach that the mental faculty is impermanent, teach that the mental faculty is suffering, teach that the mental faculty is nonself, and teach that the mental faculty is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the mental faculty is impermanent, imagine that the mental faculty is suffering, imagine that the mental faculty is nonself, and imagine that the mental faculty is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the mental faculty is impermanent, imagine that the mental faculty is suffering, imagine that the mental faculty is nonself, and imagine that the mental faculty is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.159 “They teach that sights are impermanent, teach that sights are suffering, teach that sights are nonself, and teach that sights [F.40.a] are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that sights are impermanent, imagine that sights are suffering, imagine that sights are nonself, and imagine that sights are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that sights are impermanent, imagine that sights are suffering, imagine that sights are nonself, and imagine that sights are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.160 “They teach that sounds are impermanent, teach that sounds are suffering, teach that sounds are nonself, and teach that sounds are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that sounds are impermanent, imagine that sounds are suffering, imagine that sounds are nonself, and imagine that sounds are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that sounds are impermanent, imagine that sounds are suffering, imagine that sounds are nonself, and imagine that sounds are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.161 “They teach that odors are impermanent, teach that odors are suffering, teach that odors are nonself, and teach that odors are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that odors are impermanent, imagine that odors are suffering, imagine that odors are nonself, and imagine that odors are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine [F.40.b] that odors are impermanent, imagine that odors are suffering, imagine that odors are nonself, and imagine that odors are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.162 “They teach that tastes are impermanent, teach that tastes are suffering, teach that tastes are nonself, and teach that tastes are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that tastes are impermanent, imagine that tastes are suffering, imagine that tastes are nonself, and imagine that tastes are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that tastes are impermanent, imagine that tastes are suffering, imagine that tastes are nonself, and imagine that tastes are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.163 “They teach that tangibles are impermanent, teach that tangibles are suffering, teach that tangibles are nonself, and teach that tangibles are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that tangibles are impermanent, imagine that tangibles are suffering, imagine that tangibles are nonself, and imagine that tangibles are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that tangibles are impermanent, imagine that tangibles are suffering, imagine that tangibles are nonself, and imagine that tangibles are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.164 “They teach that mental phenomena are impermanent, teach that mental phenomena are suffering, teach that mental phenomena are nonself, and teach that mental phenomena are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly [F.41.a] are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that mental phenomena are impermanent, imagine that mental phenomena are suffering, imagine that mental phenomena are nonself, and imagine that mental phenomena are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that mental phenomena are impermanent, imagine that mental phenomena are suffering, imagine that mental phenomena are nonself, and imagine that mental phenomena are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.165 “They teach that visual consciousness is impermanent, teach that visual consciousness is suffering, teach that visual consciousness is nonself, and teach that visual consciousness is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that visual consciousness is impermanent, imagine that visual consciousness is suffering, imagine that visual consciousness is nonself, and imagine that visual consciousness is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that visual consciousness is impermanent, imagine that visual consciousness is suffering, imagine that visual consciousness is nonself, and imagine that visual consciousness is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.166 “They teach that auditory consciousness is impermanent, teach that auditory consciousness is suffering, teach that auditory consciousness is nonself, and teach that auditory consciousness is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ [F41.b] Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that auditory consciousness is impermanent, imagine that auditory consciousness is suffering, imagine that auditory consciousness is nonself, and imagine that auditory consciousness is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that auditory consciousness is impermanent, imagine that auditory consciousness is suffering, imagine that auditory consciousness is nonself, and imagine that auditory consciousness is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.167 “They teach that olfactory consciousness is impermanent, teach that olfactory consciousness is suffering, teach that olfactory consciousness is nonself, and teach that olfactory consciousness is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that olfactory consciousness is impermanent, imagine that olfactory consciousness is suffering, imagine that olfactory consciousness is nonself, and imagine that olfactory consciousness is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that olfactory consciousness is impermanent, imagine that olfactory consciousness is suffering, imagine that olfactory consciousness is nonself, and imagine that olfactory consciousness is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.168 “They teach that gustatory consciousness is impermanent, teach that gustatory consciousness is suffering, teach that gustatory consciousness is nonself, and teach that gustatory consciousness is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly [F42.a] are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that gustatory consciousness is impermanent, imagine that gustatory consciousness is suffering, imagine that gustatory consciousness is nonself, and imagine that gustatory consciousness is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that gustatory consciousness is impermanent, imagine that gustatory consciousness is suffering, imagine that gustatory consciousness is nonself, and imagine that gustatory consciousness is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.169 “They teach that tactile consciousness is impermanent, teach that tactile consciousness is suffering, teach that tactile consciousness is nonself, and teach that tactile consciousness is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that tactile consciousness is impermanent, imagine that tactile consciousness is suffering, imagine that tactile consciousness is nonself, and imagine that tactile consciousness is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that tactile consciousness is impermanent, imagine that tactile consciousness is suffering, imagine that tactile consciousness is nonself, and imagine that tactile consciousness is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.170 “They teach that mental consciousness is impermanent, teach that mental consciousness is suffering, teach that mental consciousness is nonself, and teach [F.42.b] that mental consciousness is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that mental consciousness is impermanent, imagine that mental consciousness is suffering, imagine that mental consciousness is nonself, and imagine that mental consciousness is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that mental consciousness is impermanent, imagine that mental consciousness is suffering, imagine that mental consciousness is nonself, and imagine that mental consciousness is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.171 “They teach that visually compounded sensory contact is impermanent, teach that visually compounded sensory contact is suffering, teach that visually compounded sensory contact is nonself, and teach that visually compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that visually compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that visually compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that visually compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that visually compounded sensory contact is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that visually compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that visually compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that visually compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that visually compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.172 “They teach that aurally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, teach that aurally compounded sensory contact is suffering, teach that aurally compounded sensory contact [F.43.a] is nonself, and teach that aurally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that aurally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that aurally compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that aurally compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that aurally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that aurally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that aurally compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that aurally compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that aurally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.173 “They teach that nasally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, teach that nasally compounded sensory contact is suffering, teach that nasally compounded sensory contact is nonself, and teach that nasally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that nasally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that nasally compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that nasally compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that nasally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that nasally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that nasally compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that nasally compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that nasally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.174 “They teach that lingually compounded sensory contact is impermanent, teach that lingually compounded sensory contact is suffering, [F.43.b] teach that lingually compounded sensory contact is nonself, and teach that lingually compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that lingually compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that lingually compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that lingually compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that lingually compounded sensory contact is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that lingually compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that lingually compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that lingually compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that lingually compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.175 “They teach that corporeally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, teach that corporeally compounded sensory contact is suffering, teach that corporeally compounded sensory contact is nonself, and teach that corporeally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that corporeally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.176 "They teach that mentally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, [F.44.a] teach that mentally compounded sensory contact is suffering, teach that mentally compounded sensory contact is nonself, and teach that mentally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that mentally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that mentally compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that mentally compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that mentally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that mentally compounded sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that mentally compounded sensory contact is suffering, imagine that mentally compounded sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that mentally compounded sensory contact is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.177 "They teach that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are impermanent, teach that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are suffering, teach that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are nonself, and teach that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are suffering, imagine that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact [F.44.b] are suffering, imagine that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.178 “They teach that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, teach that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are suffering, teach that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and teach that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are suffering, imagine that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are suffering, imagine that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.179 “They teach that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, teach that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are suffering, teach that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and teach that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those [F.45.a] to whom that is taught will also imagine that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are suffering, imagine that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are suffering, imagine that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.180 “They teach that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are impermanent, teach that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are suffering, teach that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are nonself, and teach that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are suffering, imagine that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are suffering, imagine that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection [F.45.b] of the perfection of wisdom.

23.181 “They teach that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, teach that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are suffering, teach that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and teach that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are suffering, imagine that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are suffering, imagine that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.182 “They teach that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, teach that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are suffering, teach that feelings conditioned

by mentally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and teach that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are suffering, imagine that feelings [F.46.a] conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are impermanent, imagine that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are suffering, imagine that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are nonself, and imagine that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom. [B4]

23.183 "They teach that the earth element is impermanent, teach that the earth element is suffering, teach that the earth element is nonself, and teach that the earth element is unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the earth element is impermanent, imagine that the earth element is suffering, imagine that the earth element is nonself, and imagine that the earth element is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the earth element is impermanent, imagine that the earth element is suffering, imagine that the earth element is nonself, and imagine that the earth element is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.184 "They teach that the water element is impermanent, teach that the water element is suffering, teach that the water element is nonself, and teach that the water element is unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing [F.46.b] the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the water element is impermanent, imagine that the water element is suffering, imagine that the water element is nonself, and imagine that the water element is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the water element is impermanent, imagine that the water element is suffering, imagine that the water element is nonself, and imagine that the water element is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.185 "They teach that the fire element is impermanent, teach that the fire element is suffering, teach that the fire element is nonself, and teach that the fire element is unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the fire element is impermanent, imagine that the fire element is suffering, imagine that the fire element is nonself, and imagine that the fire element is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the fire element is impermanent, imagine that the fire element is suffering, imagine that the fire element is nonself, and imagine that the fire element is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.186 "They teach that the wind element is impermanent, teach that the wind element is suffering, teach that the wind element is nonself, and teach that the wind element is unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the wind element is impermanent, imagine that [F.47.a] the wind element is suffering, imagine that the wind element is nonself, and imagine that the wind element is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the wind element is impermanent, imagine that the wind element is suffering, imagine that the wind element is nonself, and imagine that the wind element is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.187 "They teach that the space element is impermanent, teach that the space element is suffering, teach that the space element is nonself, and teach that the space element is unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the space element is impermanent, imagine that the space element is suffering, imagine that the space element is nonself, and imagine that the space element is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the space element is impermanent, imagine that the space element is suffering, imagine that the space element is nonself, and imagine that the space element is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.188 "They teach that the consciousness element is impermanent, teach that the consciousness element is suffering, teach that the consciousness element is nonself, and teach that the consciousness element is unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the consciousness element is impermanent, imagine that the consciousness element [F.47.b] is suffering, imagine that the consciousness element is nonself, and imagine that the consciousness element is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the consciousness element is impermanent, imagine that the consciousness element is suffering, imagine that the consciousness element is nonself, and imagine that the consciousness element is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.189 “They teach that ignorance is impermanent, teach that ignorance is suffering, teach that ignorance is nonself, and teach that ignorance is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that ignorance is impermanent, imagine that ignorance is suffering, imagine that ignorance is nonself, and imagine that ignorance is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that ignorance is impermanent, imagine that ignorance is suffering, imagine that ignorance is nonself, and imagine that ignorance is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.190 “They teach that formative predispositions are impermanent, teach that formative predispositions are suffering, teach that formative predispositions are nonself, and teach that formative predispositions are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that formative predispositions are impermanent, imagine that formative predispositions are suffering, imagine that formative predispositions are nonself, and imagine that formative predispositions are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that formative predispositions are impermanent, imagine that [F.48.a] formative predispositions are suffering, imagine that formative predispositions are nonself, and imagine that formative predispositions are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.191 “They teach that consciousness is impermanent, teach that consciousness is suffering, teach that consciousness is nonself, and teach that consciousness is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that consciousness is impermanent, imagine that consciousness is suffering, imagine that consciousness is nonself, and imagine that consciousness is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that consciousness is impermanent, imagine that consciousness is suffering, imagine that consciousness is nonself, and imagine that consciousness is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.192 “They teach that name and form are impermanent, teach that name and form are suffering, teach that name and form are nonself, and teach that name and form are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that name and form are impermanent, imagine that name and form are suffering, imagine that name and form are nonself, and imagine that name and form are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that name and form are impermanent, imagine that name and form are suffering, imagine that name and form are nonself, and [F.48.b] imagine that name and form are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.193 “They teach that the six sense fields are impermanent, teach that the six sense fields are suffering, teach that the six sense fields are nonself, and teach that the six sense fields are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the six sense fields are impermanent, imagine that the six sense fields are suffering, imagine that the six sense fields are nonself, and imagine that the six sense fields are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the six sense fields are impermanent, imagine that the six sense fields are suffering, imagine that the six sense fields are nonself, and imagine that the six sense fields are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.194 “They teach that sensory contact is impermanent, teach that sensory contact is suffering, teach that sensory contact is nonself, and teach that sensory contact is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that sensory contact is suffering, imagine that sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that sensory contact is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that sensory contact is impermanent, imagine that sensory contact is suffering, imagine that sensory contact is nonself, and imagine that sensory contact is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.195 “They teach that sensation is impermanent, teach that sensation is [F.49.a] suffering, teach that sensation is nonself, and teach that sensation is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that sensation is impermanent, imagine that sensation is suffering, imagine that sensation is nonself, and imagine that sensation is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that sensation is impermanent, imagine that sensation is suffering, imagine that sensation is nonself, and imagine that sensation is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.196 “They teach that craving is impermanent, teach that craving is suffering, teach that craving is nonself, and teach that craving is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that craving is impermanent, imagine that craving is suffering, imagine that craving is nonself, and imagine that craving is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that craving is impermanent, imagine that craving is suffering, imagine that craving is nonself, and imagine that craving is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.197 “They teach that grasping is impermanent, teach that grasping is suffering, teach that grasping is nonself, and teach that grasping is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that grasping is impermanent, imagine that grasping is suffering, imagine that grasping is nonself, and imagine that [F.49.b] grasping is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that grasping is impermanent, imagine that grasping is suffering, imagine that grasping is nonself, and imagine that grasping is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.198 “They teach that the rebirth process is impermanent, teach that the rebirth process is suffering, teach that the rebirth process is nonself, and teach that the rebirth process is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the rebirth process is impermanent, imagine that the rebirth process is suffering, imagine that the rebirth process is nonself, and imagine that the rebirth process is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the rebirth process is impermanent, imagine that the rebirth process is suffering, imagine that the rebirth process is nonself, and imagine that the rebirth process is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.199 “They teach that birth is impermanent, teach that birth is suffering, teach that birth is nonself, and teach that birth is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that birth is impermanent, imagine that birth is suffering, imagine that birth is nonself, and imagine that birth is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that birth is impermanent, imagine that birth is suffering, imagine that birth is nonself, and imagine that birth is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.200 “They teach that aging and death are impermanent, teach that aging and death are [F.50.a] suffering, teach that aging and death are nonself, and teach that aging and death are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that aging and death are impermanent, imagine that aging and death are suffering, imagine that aging and death are nonself, and imagine that aging and death are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that aging and death are impermanent, imagine that aging and death are suffering, imagine that aging and death are nonself, and imagine that aging and death are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.201 “They teach that the perfection of generosity is impermanent, teach that the perfection of generosity is suffering, teach that the perfection of generosity is nonself, and teach that the perfection of generosity is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the perfection of generosity is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of generosity is suffering, imagine that the perfection of generosity is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of generosity is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the perfection of generosity is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of generosity is suffering, imagine that the perfection of generosity is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of generosity is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.202 “They teach that the perfection of ethical discipline is impermanent, teach that the perfection of ethical discipline is suffering, [F.50.b] teach that the perfection of ethical discipline is nonself, and teach that the perfection of ethical discipline is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the perfection of ethical discipline is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of ethical discipline is suffering, imagine that the perfection of ethical discipline is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of ethical discipline is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the perfection of ethical discipline is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of ethical discipline is suffering, imagine that the perfection of ethical discipline is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of ethical discipline is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.203 “They teach that the perfection of tolerance is impermanent, teach that the perfection of tolerance is suffering, teach that the perfection of tolerance is nonself, and teach that the perfection of tolerance is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the perfection of tolerance is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of tolerance is suffering, imagine that the perfection of tolerance is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of tolerance is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the perfection of tolerance is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of tolerance is suffering, imagine that the perfection of tolerance is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of tolerance is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of [F.51.a] the perfection of wisdom.

23.204 “They teach that the perfection of perseverance is impermanent, teach that the perfection of perseverance is suffering, teach that the perfection of perseverance is nonself, and teach that the perfection of perseverance is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the perfection of perseverance is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of perseverance is suffering, imagine that the perfection of perseverance is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of perseverance is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the perfection of perseverance is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of perseverance is suffering, imagine that the perfection of perseverance is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of perseverance is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.205 “They teach that the perfection of meditative concentration is impermanent, teach that the perfection of meditative concentration is suffering, teach that the perfection of meditative concentration is nonself, and teach that the perfection of meditative concentration is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the perfection of meditative concentration is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of meditative concentration is suffering, imagine that the perfection of meditative concentration is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of meditative concentration is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that [F.51.b] the perfection of meditative concentration is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of meditative concentration is suffering, imagine that the perfection of meditative concentration is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of meditative concentration is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.206 “They teach that the perfection of wisdom is impermanent, teach that the perfection of wisdom is suffering, teach that the perfection of wisdom is nonself, and teach that the perfection of wisdom is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the perfection of wisdom is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of wisdom is suffering, imagine that the perfection of wisdom is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of wisdom is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the perfection of wisdom is impermanent, imagine that the perfection of wisdom is suffering, imagine that the perfection of wisdom is nonself, and imagine that the perfection of wisdom is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.207 “They teach that the emptiness of internal phenomena is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of internal phenomena is suffering, teach that the emptiness of internal phenomena is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of internal phenomena is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is suffering, imagine that [F.52.a] the emptiness of internal phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of internal phenomena is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.208 “They teach that the emptiness of external phenomena is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of external phenomena is suffering, teach that the emptiness of external phenomena is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of external phenomena is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of external phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of external phenomena is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of external phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of external phenomena is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of external phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of external phenomena is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of external phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of external phenomena is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.209 “They teach that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is suffering, teach that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena [F.52.b] is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.210 “They teach that the emptiness of emptiness is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of emptiness is suffering, teach that the emptiness of emptiness is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of emptiness is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of emptiness is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of emptiness is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of emptiness is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of emptiness is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of emptiness is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of emptiness is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of emptiness is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of emptiness is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.211 “They teach that the emptiness of great extent is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of great extent is suffering, teach that the emptiness of great extent is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of great extent is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of great extent is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of great extent is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of great extent is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of great extent is unpleasant. [F.53.a] Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of great extent is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of great extent is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of great extent is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of great extent is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.212 “They teach that the emptiness of ultimate reality is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of ultimate reality is suffering, teach that the emptiness of ultimate reality is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of ultimate reality is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of ultimate reality is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.213 “They teach that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is suffering, teach that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is unpleasant. [F.53.b] Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.214 “They teach that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is suffering, teach that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.215 “They teach that the emptiness of the unlimited is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of the unlimited is suffering, teach that the emptiness of the unlimited is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of the unlimited is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of the unlimited is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of the unlimited is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of the unlimited is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of the unlimited is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of the unlimited is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of the unlimited is suffering, imagine [F.54.a] that the emptiness of the unlimited is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of the unlimited is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.216 “They teach that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is suffering, teach that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.217 “They teach that the emptiness of nonexclusion is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of nonexclusion is suffering, teach that the emptiness of nonexclusion is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of nonexclusion is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ [F.54.b] Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of nonexclusion is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.218 “They teach that the emptiness of inherent nature is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of inherent nature is suffering, teach that the emptiness of inherent nature is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of inherent nature is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of inherent nature is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of inherent nature is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of inherent nature is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of inherent nature is unpleasant.

Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of inherent nature is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of inherent nature is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of inherent nature is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of inherent nature is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.219 “They teach that the emptiness of all phenomena is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of all phenomena is suffering, teach that the emptiness of all phenomena is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of all phenomena is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing [F.55.a] the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of all phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of all phenomena is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of all phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of all phenomena is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of all phenomena is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of all phenomena is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of all phenomena is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of all phenomena is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.220 “They teach that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is suffering, teach that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.221 “They teach that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is suffering, [F.55.b] teach that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.222 “They teach that the emptiness of nonentities is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of nonentities is suffering, teach that the emptiness of nonentities is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of nonentities is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of nonentities is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of nonentities is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of nonentities is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of nonentities is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of nonentities is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of nonentities is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of nonentities is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of nonentities is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.223 “They teach that the emptiness of essential nature is impermanent, teach that [F.56.a] the emptiness of essential nature is suffering, teach that the emptiness of essential nature is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of essential nature is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of essential nature is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of essential nature is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of essential nature is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of essential nature is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of essential nature is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of essential nature is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of essential nature is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of essential nature is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.224 “They teach that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is impermanent, teach that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is suffering, teach that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is nonself, and teach that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is impermanent, imagine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is suffering, imagine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is nonself, and imagine that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is unpleasant, [F.56.b] they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.225 "They teach that the applications of mindfulness are impermanent, teach that the applications of mindfulness are suffering, teach that the applications of mindfulness are nonself, and teach that the applications of mindfulness are unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the applications of mindfulness are impermanent, imagine that the applications of mindfulness are suffering, imagine that the applications of mindfulness are nonself, and imagine that the applications of mindfulness are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the applications of mindfulness are impermanent, imagine that the applications of mindfulness are suffering, imagine that the applications of mindfulness are nonself, and imagine that the applications of mindfulness are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.226 "They teach that the correct exertions are impermanent, teach that the correct exertions are suffering, teach that the correct exertions are nonself, and teach that the correct exertions are unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the correct exertions are impermanent, imagine that the correct exertions are suffering, imagine that the correct exertions are nonself, and imagine that the correct exertions are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine [F.57.a] that the correct exertions are impermanent, imagine that the correct exertions are suffering, imagine that the correct exertions are nonself, and imagine that the correct exertions are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.227 "They teach that the supports for miraculous ability are impermanent, teach that the supports for miraculous ability are suffering, teach that the supports for miraculous ability are nonself, and teach that the supports for miraculous ability are unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the supports for miraculous ability are impermanent, imagine that the supports for miraculous ability are suffering, imagine that the supports for miraculous ability are nonself, and imagine that the supports for miraculous ability are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the supports for miraculous ability are impermanent, imagine that the supports for miraculous ability are suffering, imagine that the supports for miraculous ability are nonself, and imagine that the supports for miraculous ability are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.228 “They teach that the faculties are impermanent, teach that the faculties are suffering, teach that the faculties are nonself, and teach that the faculties are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the faculties are impermanent, imagine that the faculties are suffering, imagine that the faculties are nonself, and imagine that the faculties [F.57.b] are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the faculties are impermanent, imagine that the faculties are suffering, imagine that the faculties are nonself, and imagine that the faculties are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.229 “They teach that the powers are impermanent, teach that the powers are suffering, teach that the powers are nonself, and teach that the powers are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the powers are impermanent, imagine that the powers are suffering, imagine that the powers are nonself, and imagine that the powers are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the powers are impermanent, imagine that the powers are suffering, imagine that the powers are nonself, and imagine that the powers are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.230 “They teach that the branches of enlightenment are impermanent, teach that the branches of enlightenment are suffering, teach that the branches of enlightenment are nonself, and teach that the branches of enlightenment are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the branches of enlightenment are impermanent, imagine that the branches of enlightenment are suffering, imagine that the branches of enlightenment are nonself, and imagine that the branches of enlightenment are unpleasant. Thus, because [F.58.a] they imagine that the branches of enlightenment are impermanent, imagine that the branches of enlightenment are suffering, imagine that the branches of enlightenment are nonself, and imagine that the branches of enlightenment are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

- 23.231 “They teach that the noble eightfold path is impermanent, teach that the noble eightfold path is suffering, teach that the noble eightfold path is nonself, and teach that the noble eightfold path is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the noble eightfold path is impermanent, imagine that the noble eightfold path is suffering, imagine that the noble eightfold path is nonself, and imagine that the noble eightfold path is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the noble eightfold path is impermanent, imagine that the noble eightfold path is suffering, imagine that the noble eightfold path is nonself, and imagine that the noble eightfold path is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.232 “They teach that the truths of the noble ones are impermanent, teach that the truths of the noble ones are suffering, teach that the truths of the noble ones are nonself, and teach that the truths of the noble ones are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ [F.58.b] Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the truths of the noble ones are impermanent, imagine that the truths of the noble ones are suffering, imagine that the truths of the noble ones are nonself, and imagine that the truths of the noble ones are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the truths of the noble ones are impermanent, imagine that the truths of the noble ones are suffering, imagine that the truths of the noble ones are nonself, and imagine that the truths of the noble ones are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.233 “They teach that the meditative concentrations are impermanent, teach that the meditative concentrations are suffering, teach that the meditative concentrations are nonself, and teach that the meditative concentrations are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the meditative concentrations are impermanent, imagine that the meditative concentrations are suffering, imagine that the meditative concentrations are nonself, and imagine that the meditative concentrations are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the meditative concentrations are impermanent, imagine that the meditative concentrations are suffering, imagine that the meditative concentrations are nonself, and imagine that the meditative concentrations are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.234 “They teach that the immeasurable attitudes are impermanent, teach that the immeasurable attitudes are suffering, teach that the immeasurable attitudes are nonself, and teach that the immeasurable attitudes are unpleasant, and [F.59.a] they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the immeasurable attitudes are impermanent, imagine that the immeasurable attitudes are suffering, imagine that the immeasurable attitudes are nonself, and imagine that the immeasurable attitudes are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the immeasurable attitudes are impermanent, imagine that the immeasurable attitudes are suffering, imagine that the immeasurable attitudes are nonself, and imagine that the immeasurable attitudes are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.235 "They teach that the formless absorptions are impermanent, teach that the formless absorptions are suffering, teach that the formless absorptions are nonself, and teach that the formless absorptions are unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the formless absorptions are impermanent, imagine that the formless absorptions are suffering, imagine that the formless absorptions are nonself, and imagine that the formless absorptions are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the formless absorptions are impermanent, imagine that the formless absorptions are suffering, imagine that the formless absorptions [F.59.b] are nonself, and imagine that the formless absorptions are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.236 "They teach that the liberations are impermanent, teach that the liberations are suffering, teach that the liberations are nonself, and teach that the liberations are unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the liberations are impermanent, imagine that the liberations are suffering, imagine that the liberations are nonself, and imagine that the liberations are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the liberations are impermanent, imagine that the liberations are suffering, imagine that the liberations are nonself, and imagine that the liberations are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.237 "They teach that the serial steps of meditative absorption are impermanent, teach that the serial steps of meditative absorption are suffering, teach that the serial steps of meditative absorption are nonself, and teach that the serial steps of meditative absorption are unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the serial steps of meditative absorption are impermanent, imagine that the serial steps of meditative absorption are suffering, imagine that the serial steps of meditative absorption are nonself, [F.60.a] and imagine that the serial steps of meditative absorption are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the serial steps of meditative absorption are impermanent, imagine that the serial steps of meditative absorption are suffering, imagine that the serial steps of meditative absorption are nonself, and imagine that the serial steps of meditative absorption are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.238 “They teach that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are impermanent, teach that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are suffering, teach that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are nonself, and teach that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are impermanent, imagine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are suffering, imagine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are nonself, and imagine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are impermanent, [F.60.b] imagine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are suffering, imagine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are nonself, and imagine that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.239 “They teach that the extrasensory powers are impermanent, teach that the extrasensory powers are suffering, teach that the extrasensory powers are nonself, and teach that the extrasensory powers are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the extrasensory powers are impermanent, imagine that the extrasensory powers are suffering, imagine that the extrasensory powers are nonself, and imagine that the extrasensory powers are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the extrasensory powers are impermanent, imagine that the extrasensory powers are suffering, imagine that the extrasensory powers are nonself, and imagine that the extrasensory powers are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.240 “They teach that the meditative stabilities are impermanent, teach that the meditative stabilities are suffering, teach that the meditative stabilities are nonself, and teach that the meditative stabilities are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the meditative stabilities are impermanent, imagine that [F.61.a] the meditative stabilities are suffering, imagine that the meditative stabilities are nonself, and imagine that the meditative stabilities are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the meditative stabilities are impermanent, imagine that the meditative stabilities are suffering, imagine that the meditative stabilities are nonself, and imagine that the meditative stabilities are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.241 “They teach that the dhāraṇī gateways are impermanent, teach that the dhāraṇī gateways are suffering, teach that the dhāraṇī gateways are nonself, and teach that the dhāraṇī gateways are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the dhāraṇī gateways are impermanent, imagine that the dhāraṇī gateways are suffering, imagine that the dhāraṇī gateways are nonself, and imagine that the dhāraṇī gateways are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the dhāraṇī gateways are impermanent, imagine that the dhāraṇī gateways are suffering, imagine that the dhāraṇī gateways are nonself, and imagine that the dhāraṇī gateways are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.242 “They teach that the powers of the tathāgatas are impermanent, teach that the powers of the tathāgatas are suffering, teach that the powers of the tathāgatas are nonself, and teach that the powers of the tathāgatas are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught [F.61.b] will also imagine that the powers of the tathāgatas are impermanent, imagine that the powers of the tathāgatas are suffering, imagine that the powers of the tathāgatas are nonself, and imagine that the powers of the tathāgatas are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the powers of the tathāgatas are impermanent, imagine that the powers of the tathāgatas are suffering, imagine that the powers of the tathāgatas are nonself, and imagine that the powers of the tathāgatas are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.243 “They teach that the fearlessnesses are impermanent, teach that the fearlessnesses are suffering, teach that the fearlessnesses are nonself, and teach that the fearlessnesses are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the fearlessnesses are impermanent, imagine that the fearlessnesses are suffering, imagine that the fearlessnesses are nonself, and imagine that the fearlessnesses are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the fearlessnesses are impermanent, imagine that the fearlessnesses are suffering, imagine that the fearlessnesses are nonself, and imagine that the fearlessnesses are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom. [B5]

23.244 “They [F.62.a] teach that the kinds of exact knowledge are impermanent, teach that the kinds of exact knowledge are suffering, teach that the kinds of exact knowledge are nonself, and teach that the kinds of exact knowledge are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the kinds of exact knowledge are impermanent, imagine that the kinds of exact knowledge are suffering, imagine that the kinds of exact knowledge are nonself, and imagine that the kinds of exact knowledge are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the kinds of exact knowledge are impermanent, imagine that the kinds of exact knowledge are suffering, imagine that the kinds of exact knowledge are nonself, and imagine that the kinds of exact knowledge are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.245 “They teach that great compassion is impermanent, teach that great compassion is suffering, teach that great compassion is nonself, and teach that great compassion is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that great compassion is impermanent, imagine that great compassion is suffering, imagine that great compassion is nonself, and imagine that great compassion is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that great compassion is impermanent, imagine that great compassion is suffering, imagine that great compassion is nonself, and imagine [F.62.b] that great compassion is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.246 “They teach that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are impermanent, teach that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are suffering, teach that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are nonself, and teach that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are impermanent, imagine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are suffering, imagine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are nonself, and imagine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are impermanent, imagine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are suffering, imagine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are nonself, and imagine that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.247 “They teach that the fruit of having entered the stream is impermanent, teach that the fruit of having entered the stream is suffering, teach that the fruit of having entered the stream is nonself, and teach that the fruit of having entered the stream is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the fruit of having entered the stream is impermanent, imagine that the fruit of having entered the stream is suffering, imagine that the fruit of having entered the stream is nonself, and imagine that the fruit of having entered the stream is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the fruit [F.63.a] of having entered the stream is impermanent, imagine that the fruit of having entered the stream is suffering, imagine that the fruit of having entered the stream is nonself, and imagine that the fruit of having entered the stream is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.248 “They teach that the fruit of once-returner is impermanent, teach that the fruit of once-returner is suffering, teach that the fruit of once-returner is nonself, and teach that the fruit of once-returner is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the fruit of once-returner is impermanent, imagine that the fruit of once-returner is suffering, imagine that the fruit of once-returner is nonself, and imagine that the fruit of once-returner is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the fruit of once-returner is impermanent, imagine that the fruit of once-returner is suffering, imagine that the fruit of once-returner is nonself, and imagine that the fruit of once-returner is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.249 “They teach that the fruit of non-returner is impermanent, teach that the fruit of non-returner is suffering, teach that the fruit of non-returner is nonself, and teach that the fruit of non-returner is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.’ Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the fruit of non-returner is impermanent, imagine that [F.63.b] the fruit of non-returner is suffering, imagine that the fruit of non-returner is nonself, and imagine that the fruit of non-returner is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the fruit of non-returner is impermanent, imagine that the fruit of non-returner is suffering, imagine that the fruit of non-returner is nonself, and imagine that the fruit of non-returner is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.250 “They teach that arhatship is impermanent, teach that arhatship is suffering, teach that arhatship is nonself, and teach that arhatship is unpleasant, and they say, ‘Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that arhatship is impermanent, imagine that arhatship is suffering, imagine that arhatship is nonself, and imagine that arhatship is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that arhatship is impermanent, imagine that arhatship is suffering, imagine that arhatship is nonself, and imagine that arhatship is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.251 "They teach that individual enlightenment is impermanent, teach that individual enlightenment is suffering, teach that individual enlightenment is nonself, and teach that individual enlightenment is unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that individual enlightenment is impermanent, imagine that individual enlightenment is suffering, [F.64.a] imagine that individual enlightenment is nonself, and imagine that individual enlightenment is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that individual enlightenment is impermanent, imagine that individual enlightenment is suffering, imagine that individual enlightenment is nonself, and imagine that individual enlightenment is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.252 "They teach that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is impermanent, teach that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is suffering, teach that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is nonself, and teach that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught will also imagine that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is impermanent, imagine that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is suffering, imagine that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is nonself, and imagine that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is impermanent, imagine that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is suffering, imagine that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is nonself, and imagine that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.253 "They teach that all-aspect omniscience is impermanent, teach that all-aspect omniscience is suffering, teach that all-aspect omniscience is nonself, and teach that all-aspect omniscience is unpleasant, and they say, 'Those who practice accordingly are practicing the perfection of wisdom.' Those to whom that is taught [F.64.b] will also imagine that all-aspect omniscience is impermanent, imagine that all-aspect omniscience is suffering, imagine that all-aspect omniscience is nonself, and imagine that all-aspect omniscience is unpleasant. Thus, because they imagine that all-aspect omniscience is impermanent, imagine that all-aspect omniscience is suffering, imagine that all-aspect omniscience is nonself, and imagine that all-aspect omniscience is unpleasant, they will practice a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.254 “That, Kauśika, is a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.255 “Moreover, Kauśika, when those sons or daughters of good families give instructions in the perfection of wisdom, they will give instructions like this: ‘Come here, son of good family, and cultivate the perfection of wisdom. While cultivating the perfection of wisdom you will dwell on the first bodhisattva level, and you will dwell on the second bodhisattva level, the third level, the fourth level, the fifth level, the sixth level, the seventh level, the eighth level, the ninth level, and the tenth level. Come here, son of good family, and cultivate the perfection of meditative concentration. While cultivating the perfection of meditative concentration you will dwell on the first bodhisattva level, and you will dwell on the second bodhisattva level, the third level, the fourth level, the fifth level, the sixth level, the seventh level, the eighth level, the ninth level, and the tenth level. Come here, son of good family, and cultivate the perfection of perseverance. While cultivating the perfection of perseverance you will dwell on the first bodhisattva level, and you will dwell on the second bodhisattva level, [F.65.a] the third level, the fourth level, the fifth level, the sixth level, the seventh level, the eighth level, the ninth level, and the tenth level. Come here, son of good family, and cultivate the perfection of tolerance. While cultivating the perfection of tolerance you will dwell on the first bodhisattva level, and you will dwell on the second bodhisattva level, the third level, the fourth level, the fifth level, the sixth level, the seventh level, the eighth level, the ninth level, and the tenth level. Come here, son of good family, and cultivate the perfection of ethical discipline. While cultivating the perfection of ethical discipline you will dwell on the first bodhisattva level, and you will dwell on the second bodhisattva level, the third level, the fourth level, the fifth level, the sixth level, the seventh level, the eighth level, the ninth level, and the tenth level. Come here, son of good family, and cultivate the perfection of generosity. While cultivating the perfection of generosity you will dwell on the first bodhisattva level, and you will dwell on the second bodhisattva level, the third level, the fourth level, the fifth level, the sixth level, the seventh level, the eighth level, the ninth level, and the tenth level.’ But still, they give instruction by way of a mental image and by way of apprehending something, so they will cultivate the perfection of wisdom with the perception of time. That, Kauśika, is a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.256 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instructions in the perfection of wisdom to sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas like this: ‘Come here, son of good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. [F.65.b] Son of good family, while cultivating⁷⁶⁸ the perfection of wisdom you will go beyond the level of the śrāvakas and go beyond the level of the pratyekabuddhas.’ That, Kauśika, is a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.257 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instructions in the perfection of wisdom to sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas like this: ‘Come here, son of good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Son of good family, while cultivating the perfection of wisdom you enter into a bodhisattva’s full maturity, and you attain the acceptance that phenomena are nonarising. While attaining the acceptance that phenomena are nonarising you will abide in the extrasensory powers of the bodhisattvas and will serve, respect, honor, and worship the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas, traveling from buddhafiield to buddhafiield.’

23.258 “When those sons or daughters of good families give instructions in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas, they teach like this: ‘Those sons or daughters of good families who take up, uphold, recite, master, and focus their attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom will acquire an immeasurable, incalculable, boundless mass of merit.’ But while giving instructions in that manner to those sons or daughters of good families, they will teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.259 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instructions in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas like this: ‘Come here, son of good family. You should gather together all the roots of virtuous action, as many as there are, of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present, [F.66.a] from the time when they first set their mind on enlightenment until their attainment of final nirvāṇa, in the expanse of nirvāṇa where no aggregates are left behind, and you should rejoice in them and dedicate them to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.’ But while giving instructions in that manner, those sons or daughters of good families will teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.”

23.260 Śakra then asked, “Blessed Lord, how do they teach, when those sons or daughters of good families do not teach a reflection of perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas?”

23.261 “In that case, Kauśika,” replied the Blessed One, “those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view physical forms as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because physical forms are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of physical forms is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that physical forms are permanent or are impermanent. If physical forms themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.262 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: [F.66.b] They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view feelings as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because feelings are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of feelings is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that feelings are permanent or are impermanent. If feelings themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.263 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view perceptions as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because perceptions are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of perceptions is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that perceptions are permanent or are impermanent. If perceptions themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.264 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view formative predispositions as impermanent. [F.67.a] If you ask why, it is because formative predispositions are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of formative predispositions is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that formative predispositions are permanent or are impermanent. If formative predispositions themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.265 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view consciousness as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because consciousness is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of consciousness is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that consciousness is permanent or is impermanent. If consciousness itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.266 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the eyes as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the eyes are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the eyes is a nonentity; that which is [F.67.b] a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the eyes are permanent or are impermanent. If the eyes themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.267 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the ears as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the ears are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the ears is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the ears are permanent or are impermanent. If the ears themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.268 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the nose as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the nose is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the nose is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the nose is permanent or is impermanent. [F.68.a] If the nose itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.269 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the tongue as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the tongue is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the tongue is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the tongue is permanent or is impermanent. If the tongue itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.270 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the body as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the body is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the body is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the body is permanent or is impermanent. If the body itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons of good families [F.68.b] or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

- 23.271 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the mental faculty as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the mental faculty is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the mental faculty is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the mental faculty is permanent or is impermanent. If the mental faculty itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.272 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view sights as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because sights are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of sights is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that sights are permanent or are impermanent. If sights themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.273 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families [F.69.a] give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view sounds as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because sounds are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of sounds is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that sounds are permanent or are impermanent. If sounds themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.274 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view odors as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because odors are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of odors is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that odors are permanent or are impermanent. If odors themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.275 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view tastes as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because tastes are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of tastes [F.69.b] is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that tastes are permanent or are impermanent. If tastes themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.276 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view tangibles as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because tangibles are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of tangibles is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that tangibles are permanent or are impermanent. If tangibles themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.277 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view mental phenomena as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because mental phenomena are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of mental phenomena is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended [F.70.a] that mental phenomena are permanent or are impermanent. If mental phenomena themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.278 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view visual consciousness as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because visual consciousness is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of visual consciousness is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that visual consciousness is permanent or is impermanent. If visual consciousness itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.279 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view auditory consciousness as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because auditory consciousness is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of auditory consciousness is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that auditory consciousness is permanent or is impermanent. If auditory consciousness itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.280 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view olfactory consciousness as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because olfactory consciousness is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of olfactory consciousness is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection [F.70.b] of wisdom, it is not apprehended that olfactory consciousness is permanent or is impermanent. If olfactory consciousness

itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.281 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view gustatory consciousness as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because gustatory consciousness is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of gustatory consciousness is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, [F.71.a] it is not apprehended that gustatory consciousness is permanent or is impermanent. If gustatory consciousness itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.282 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view tactile consciousness as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because tactile consciousness is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of tactile consciousness is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that tactile consciousness is permanent or is impermanent. If tactile consciousness itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.283 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view mental consciousness as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because mental consciousness is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of mental consciousness is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, [F.71.b] it is not apprehended that mental consciousness is permanent or is impermanent. If mental consciousness

itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.284 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view visually compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because visually compounded sensory contact is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of visually compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that visually compounded sensory contact is permanent or is impermanent. If visually compounded sensory contact itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.285 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view aurally compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because aurally compounded sensory contact is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of aurally compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that aurally compounded sensory contact is permanent or [F.72.a] is impermanent. If aurally compounded sensory contact itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.286 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view nasally compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because nasally compounded sensory contact is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of nasally compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that nasally compounded sensory contact is

permanent or is impermanent. If nasally compounded sensory contact itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.287 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view lingually compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because lingually compounded sensory contact is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of lingually compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that lingually compounded sensory contact is permanent or is impermanent. If lingually compounded sensory contact itself [F.72.b] does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.288 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view corporeally compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because corporeally compounded sensory contact is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of corporeally compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that corporeally compounded sensory contact is permanent or is impermanent. If corporeally compounded sensory contact itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.289 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view mentally compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because mentally compounded sensory contact is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of mentally compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that mentally compounded sensory contact is permanent or is impermanent. If mentally compounded sensory contact itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons of good families [F.73.a] or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.290 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are permanent or are impermanent. If feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.291 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are permanent or are impermanent. If feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact themselves do not [F.73.b] exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.292 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are permanent or are impermanent. If feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.293 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are permanent [F.74.a] or are impermanent. If feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.294 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are permanent or are impermanent. If feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.295 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact is a nonentity; [F.74.b] that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are permanent or are impermanent. If feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom. [B6]

23.296 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the earth element as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the earth element is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the earth element is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the earth element is permanent or is impermanent. If the earth element itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.297 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the water element as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the water element is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the water element is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; [F.75.a] and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the water element is permanent or is impermanent. If the water element does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.298 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the fire element as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the fire element is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the fire element is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the fire element is permanent or is impermanent. If the fire element itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.299 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the wind element as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the wind element is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the wind element is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the wind element is permanent or is impermanent. If the wind element itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' [F.75.b] Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.300 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the space element as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the space element is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the space element is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the space element is permanent or is impermanent. If the space element itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.301 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the consciousness element as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the consciousness element is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the consciousness element is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the consciousness element is permanent or is impermanent. If the consciousness element itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.302 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view ignorance as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because ignorance is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of ignorance is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that ignorance is permanent or is impermanent. If ignorance itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons of good families [F.76.a] or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.303 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view formative predispositions as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because formative predispositions are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of formative predispositions is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that formative predispositions are permanent or are impermanent. If formative predispositions themselves do not exist there, how could there be

permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.304 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families [F.76.b] give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view consciousness as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because consciousness is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of consciousness is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that consciousness is permanent or is impermanent. If consciousness itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.305 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view name and form as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because name and form are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of name and form is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that name and form are permanent or are impermanent. If name and form themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.306 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view [F.77.a] the six sense fields as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the six sense fields are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the six sense fields is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the six sense fields are permanent or are impermanent. If the six sense fields themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

- 23.307 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view sensory contact as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because sensory contact is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of sensory contact is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that sensory contact is permanent or is impermanent. If sensory contact itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.308 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view sensation as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because sensation is [F.77.b] empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of sensation is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that sensation is permanent or is impermanent. If sensation itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.309 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view craving as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because craving is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of craving is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that craving is permanent or is impermanent. If craving itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.310 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view grasping as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because grasping is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of grasping is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that grasping is permanent [F.78.a] or is impermanent. If grasping itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.311 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the rebirth process as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the rebirth process is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the rebirth process is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the rebirth process is permanent or is impermanent. If the rebirth process itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.312 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view birth as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because birth is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of birth is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that birth is permanent or is impermanent. If birth itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.313 “Moreover, Kauśika, [F.78.b] those sons of good families or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view aging and death as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because aging and death are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of aging and death is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that aging and death are permanent or are impermanent. If aging and death themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.314 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the perfection of generosity as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of generosity is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the perfection of generosity is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the perfection of generosity is permanent or is impermanent. If the perfection of generosity itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.315 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, [F.79.a] who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the perfection of ethical discipline as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of ethical discipline is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the perfection of ethical discipline is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the perfection of ethical discipline is permanent or is impermanent. If the perfection of ethical discipline itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.316 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the perfection of tolerance as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of tolerance is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the perfection of tolerance is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the perfection of tolerance is permanent or is impermanent. If the perfection of tolerance

itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.317 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, [F.79.b] who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the perfection of perseverance as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of perseverance is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the perfection of perseverance is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the perfection of perseverance is permanent or is impermanent. If the perfection of perseverance itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.318 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the perfection of meditative concentration as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of meditative concentration is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the perfection of meditative concentration is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the perfection of meditative concentration is permanent or is impermanent. If the perfection of meditative concentration itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.319 “Moreover, Kauśika, [F.80.a] those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the perfection of wisdom as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of wisdom is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the perfection of wisdom is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the perfection of wisdom is permanent or is impermanent. If the perfection of wisdom itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.320 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of internal phenomena as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of internal phenomena is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of internal phenomena is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of internal phenomena is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of internal phenomena itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.321 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction [F.80.b] in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of external phenomena as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of external phenomena is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of external phenomena is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of external phenomena is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of external phenomena itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.322 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of external and internal phenomena as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness

of external and internal phenomena is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of external and internal phenomena itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.323 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of emptiness [F.81.a] as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of emptiness is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of emptiness is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of emptiness is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of emptiness itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.324 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of great extent as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of great extent is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of great extent is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of great extent is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of great extent itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.325 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of ultimate reality [F.81.b] as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of ultimate reality is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of ultimate reality is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not

apprehended that the emptiness of ultimate reality is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of ultimate reality itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.326 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of conditioned phenomena as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of conditioned phenomena itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.327 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view [F.82.a] the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.328 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of the unlimited as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of the unlimited is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of the unlimited is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of the unlimited is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of the unlimited itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.329 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, [F.82.b] child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.330 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of nonexclusion as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of nonexclusion is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of nonexclusion is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of nonexclusion is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of nonexclusion itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.331 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, [F.83.a] child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of inherent nature as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of inherent nature is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of inherent nature is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of inherent nature is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of inherent nature itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.332 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of all phenomena as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of all phenomena is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of all phenomena is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of all phenomena is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of all phenomena itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.333 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate [F.83.b] the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.334 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.335 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate [F.84.a] the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of nonentities as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of nonentities is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of nonentities is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of nonentities is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of nonentities itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.336 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of essential nature as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of essential nature is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of essential nature is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of essential nature is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of essential nature itself does not exist there, how could there be

permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.337 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate [F.84.b] the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is permanent or is impermanent. If the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.338 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the applications of mindfulness as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the applications of mindfulness are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the applications of mindfulness is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the applications of mindfulness are permanent or are impermanent. If the applications of mindfulness themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.339 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, [F.85.a] who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the correct exertions as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the correct exertions are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the correct exertions is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the correct

exertions are permanent or are impermanent. If the correct exertions themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.340 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the supports for miraculous ability as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the supports for miraculous ability are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the supports for miraculous ability is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the supports for miraculous ability are permanent or are impermanent. If the supports for miraculous ability themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.341 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate [F.85.b] the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the faculties as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the faculties are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the faculties is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the faculties are permanent or are impermanent. If the faculties themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.342 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the powers as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the powers are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the powers is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the powers are permanent or are impermanent. If the powers themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.343 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the branches of enlightenment as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the branches of enlightenment [F.86.a] are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the branches of enlightenment is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the branches of enlightenment are permanent or are impermanent. If the branches of enlightenment themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.344 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the noble eightfold path as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the noble eightfold path is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the noble eightfold path is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the noble eightfold path is permanent or is impermanent. If the noble eightfold path itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.345 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view [F.86.b] the truths of the noble ones as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the truths of the noble ones are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the truths of the noble ones is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the truths of the noble ones are permanent or are impermanent. If the truths of the noble ones themselves do not exist there, how could there be

permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.346 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the meditative concentrations as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the meditative concentrations are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the meditative concentrations is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the meditative concentrations are permanent or are impermanent. If the meditative concentrations themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.347 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the immeasurable attitudes [F.87.a] as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the immeasurable attitudes are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the immeasurable attitudes is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the immeasurable attitudes are permanent or are impermanent. If the immeasurable attitudes themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.348 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the formless absorptions as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the formless absorptions are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the formless absorptions is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the formless absorptions are permanent or are impermanent. If the formless absorptions themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.349 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the liberations [F.87.b] as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the liberations are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the liberations is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the liberations are permanent or are impermanent. If the liberations themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.350 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the serial steps of meditative absorption as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the serial steps of meditative absorption are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the serial steps of meditative absorption is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the serial steps of meditative absorption are permanent or are impermanent. If the serial steps of meditative absorption themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom. [B7]

23.351 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom [F.88.a] to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are permanent or are impermanent. If the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.352 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the extrasensory powers as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the extrasensory powers are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the extrasensory powers is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the extrasensory powers are permanent or are impermanent. If the extrasensory powers themselves do not exist there, how could there be [F.88.b] permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.353 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the meditative stabilities as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the meditative stabilities are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the meditative stabilities is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the meditative stabilities are permanent or are impermanent. If the meditative stabilities themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.354 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the dhāraṇī gateways as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the dhāraṇī gateways are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the dhāraṇī gateways is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the dhāraṇī gateways

are permanent or are impermanent. If the dhāraṇī gateways themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.355 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the powers of the tathāgatas as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the powers of the tathāgatas are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the powers of the tathāgatas is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the powers of the tathāgatas are permanent [F.89.a] or are impermanent. If the powers of the tathāgatas themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.356 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the fearlessnesses as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the fearlessnesses are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the fearlessnesses is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the fearlessnesses are permanent or are impermanent. [F.89.b] If the fearlessnesses themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?' Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.357 "Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the kinds of exact knowledge as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the kinds of exact knowledge are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the kinds of exact knowledge is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the kinds of exact knowledge are permanent or are impermanent. If the kinds of exact

knowledge themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.358 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view great compassion as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because great compassion is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of great compassion is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that great compassion is permanent or is impermanent. If great compassion itself [F.90.a] does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.359 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the distinct qualities of the buddhas as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the distinct qualities of the buddhas are empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the distinct qualities of the buddhas is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are permanent or are impermanent. If the distinct qualities of the buddhas themselves do not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.360 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the fruit of having entered the stream as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the fruit of having entered the stream is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the fruit of having entered the stream is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the fruit of having entered the stream is permanent or is impermanent. If the fruit of having entered the stream itself

does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.361 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the fruit of once-returner as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the fruit of once-returner is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the fruit of once-returner is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the fruit of once-returner [F.90.b] is permanent or is impermanent. If the fruit of once-returner itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.362 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the fruit of non-returner as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the fruit of non-returner is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the fruit of non-returner is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the fruit of non-returner [F.91.a] is permanent or is impermanent. If the fruit of non-returner itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.363 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view arhatship as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because arhatship is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of arhatship is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that arhatship is permanent or is impermanent. If arhatship itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.364 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view individual enlightenment as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because individual enlightenment is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of individual enlightenment is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that individual enlightenment is permanent or is impermanent. If individual enlightenment itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach [F.91.b] a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.365 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view the knowledge of the aspects of the path as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because the knowledge of the aspects of the path is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of the knowledge of the aspects of the path is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is permanent or is impermanent. If the knowledge of the aspects of the path itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.366 “Moreover, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. Do not view all-aspect omniscience as impermanent. If you ask why, it is because all-aspect omniscience is empty of an essential nature. That which is the essential nature of all-aspect omniscience is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom, it is not apprehended that all-aspect omniscience is permanent or is impermanent. If all-aspect omniscience itself does not exist there, how could there be permanence or impermanence?’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom.

23.367 “Moreover, Kauśika, [F.92.a] those sons or daughters of good families give instruction in the perfection of wisdom to those sons or daughters of good families, who are followers of the vehicle of the bodhisattva, like this: They teach, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should cultivate the perfection of wisdom. You should not go beyond anything at all, and you should not dwell on anything at all. If you ask why, it is because in the perfection of wisdom there is nothing that should be gone beyond, and there is nothing that should be dwelled on. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because all phenomena are empty of an essential nature. That phenomenon which is empty of essential nature is a nonentity; that which is a nonentity is the perfection of wisdom; and in that which is the perfection of wisdom there are no phenomena that should be adopted, that should be rejected, that should be made to arise, or that should be made to cease.’ Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner do not teach a reflection of the perfection of wisdom. Therefore, Kauśika, those sons or daughters of good families should give instructions in the meaning of the perfection of wisdom in that manner. Kauśika, the masses of merit of those sons or daughters of good families who teach in that manner increase more greatly, but of those earlier sons or daughters of good families it does not.

23.368 “Moreover, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of Jambudvīpa, as many as there are, in the fruit of having entered the stream, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.369 “Kauśika, if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and [F.92.b] interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those who have entered the stream derive their existence⁷⁶⁹ from this perfection of wisdom.

23.370 “Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of Jambudvīpa, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world system with its four continents, as many as there are, in the fruit of having entered the stream, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.371 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those who have entered the stream derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.372 “Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the world system with its four continents in the fruit of having entered the stream, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families [F.93.a] were to have established the beings of the small thousandfold world system, as many as there are, in the fruit of having entered the stream, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

 “Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.373 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those who have entered the stream derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.374 “Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the small thousandfold world system in the fruit of having entered the stream, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the medium millionfold world system, as many as there are, in the fruit of having entered the stream, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

 “Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.375 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, [F.93.b] master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those who have entered the stream derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.376 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the medium millionfold world system in the fruit of having entered the stream, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the great billionfold world system, as many as there are, in the fruit of having entered the stream, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.377 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those who have entered the stream derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.378 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the great billionfold world system in the fruit of having entered the stream, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world systems in each of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, [F.94.a] as many as there are, in the fruit of having entered the stream, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.379 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because those who have entered the stream derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.380 “Moreover, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of Jambudvīpa, as many as there are, in the fruit of once-returner, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.381 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it [F.94.b] has been explained,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because once-returners derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.382 “Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of Jambudvīpa, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world system with its four continents, as many as there are, in the fruit of once-returner, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.383 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because once-returners derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.384 “Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the world system with its four continents in the fruit of once-returner, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the small thousandfold world system, as many as there are, in the fruit of once-returner, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.385 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons of good families [F.95.a] or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because once-returners derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.386 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the small thousandfold world system in the fruit of once-returner, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the medium millionfold world system, as many as there are, in the fruit of once-returner, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra. [F.96.a]

23.387 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because once-returners [F.95.b] derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.388 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the medium millionfold world system in the fruit of once-returner, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the great billionfold world system, as many as there are, in the fruit of once-returner, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.389 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because once-returners derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom. [F.96.b]

23.390 “Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the great billionfold world system in the fruit of once-returner, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world systems in each of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the fruit of once-returner, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.391 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because once-returners derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.392 “Moreover, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of Jambudvīpa, as many as there are, in the fruit of non-returner, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.393 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because non-returners derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.394 “Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of Jambudvīpa, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world system with its four continents, as many as there are, in the fruit of non-returner, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.395 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because non-returners derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.396 “Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the world system with its four continents in the fruit of non-returner, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the small thousandfold world system, as many as there are, in the fruit of non-returner, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.397 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, [F.97.a] explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because non-returners derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.398 “Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the small thousandfold world system in the fruit of non-returner, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the medium millionfold world system, as many as there are, in the fruit of non-returner, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.399 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom

just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because non-returners derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.400 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the medium millionfold world system in the fruit of non-returner, [F.97.b] Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the great billionfold world system, as many as there are, in the fruit of non-returner, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.401 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because non-returners derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.402 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the great billionfold world system in the fruit of non-returner, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world systems in each of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in the fruit of non-returner, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.403 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and [F.98.a] elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because non-returners derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.404 "Moreover, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of Jambudvīpa, as many as there are, in arhatship, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.405 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because arhats derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.406 "Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of Jambudvīpa, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world system with its four continents, as many as there are, in arhatship, [F.98.b] do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.407 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because arhats derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.408 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the world system with its four continents in arhatship, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the small thousandfold world system, as many as there are, in arhatship, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.409 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom [F.99.a] just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because arhats derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.410 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the small thousandfold world system in arhatship, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the medium millionfold world system, as many as there are, in arhatship, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.411 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because arhats derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.412 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the medium millionfold world system in arhatship, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the great billionfold world system, as many as there are, in arhatship, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.413 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, [F.99.b] who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because arhats derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.414 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the great billionfold world system in arhatship, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world systems in each of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in arhatship, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.415 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because arhats derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.416 "Moreover, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families [F.100.a] were to have established the beings of Jambudvīpa, as many as there are, in individual enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.417 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because pratyekabuddhas derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.418 "Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of Jambudvīpa, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world system with its four continents, as many as there are, in individual enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.419 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold,

[F.100.b] recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because pratyekabuddhas derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.420 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the world system with its four continents in individual enlightenment, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the small thousandfold world system, as many as there are, in individual enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.421 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because pratyekabuddhas derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.422 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the small thousandfold world system in individual enlightenment, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the medium millionfold world system, as many as there are, in individual enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! [F.101.a] Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.423 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because pratyekabuddhas derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom.

23.424 “Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the medium millionfold world system in individual enlightenment, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the great billionfold world system, as many as there are, in individual enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.425 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because pratyekabuddhas derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom. [F.101.b]

23.426 “Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the great billionfold world system in individual enlightenment, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world systems in each of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, in individual enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika, that for this reason those sons or daughters of good families would greatly increase their merit?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.427 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because pratyekabuddhas derive their existence from this perfection of wisdom. [B8]

23.428 “Moreover, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have encouraged the beings of Jambudvīpa, as many as there are, toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.429 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, [F.102.a] explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom becomes even more complete than that, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because bodhisattva great beings first setting their minds on enlightenment originate from her.

23.430 “Kauśika, leaving aside their having encouraged the beings of Jambudvīpa toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have encouraged the beings of the world system with its four continents, as many as there are, toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra. [F.102.b]

23.431 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom becomes even more complete than that, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because bodhisattva great beings first setting their minds on enlightenment originate from her.

23.432 “Kauśika, leaving aside their having encouraged the beings of the world system with its four continents toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have encouraged the beings of the small thousandfold world system, as many as there are, toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika [F.103.a], the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.433 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom becomes even more complete than that, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because bodhisattva great beings first setting their minds on enlightenment originate from her.

23.434 “Kauśika, leaving aside their having encouraged the beings of the small thousandfold world system toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, if any sons or daughters of good families [F.103.b] were to have encouraged the beings of the medium millionfold world system, as many as there are, toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.435 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom becomes even more complete than that, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because bodhisattva great beings first setting their minds on enlightenment originate from her.

23.436 “Kauśika, leaving aside their having encouraged [F.104.a] the beings of the medium millionfold world system toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have encouraged the beings of the great billionfold world system, as many as there are, toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.437 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom becomes even more complete than that, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. [F.104.b] If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because bodhisattva great beings first setting their minds on enlightenment originate from her.

23.438 “Kauśika, leaving aside their having encouraged the beings of the great billionfold world system toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have encouraged the beings of the world systems in each of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.439 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom [F.105.a] becomes even more complete than that, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because bodhisattva great beings first setting their minds on enlightenment originate from her.

23.440 “Moreover, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of Jambudvīpa, as many as there are, on the irreversible level, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.441 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom becomes [F.105.b] even more complete than that, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the irreversible level of bodhisattva great beings originates from her.

23.442 “Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of Jambudvīpa on the irreversible level, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world system with its four continents, as many as there are, on the irreversible level, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.443 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom becomes even more complete than that, [F.106.a] at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,' their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the irreversible level of bodhisattva great beings originates from her.

23.444 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the world system with its four continents on the irreversible level, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the small thousandfold world system, as many as there are, on the irreversible level, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.445 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom becomes even more complete than that, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,' their merit increases [F.106.b] even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the irreversible level of bodhisattva great beings originates from her.

23.446 "Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the small thousandfold world system on the irreversible level, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the medium millionfold world system, as many as there are, on the irreversible level, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?"

"Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!" replied Śakra.

23.447 "Kauśika," said the Blessed One, "if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, 'Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom becomes even more complete than that, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the irreversible level [F.107.a] of bodhisattva great beings originates from her.

23.448 “Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the medium millionfold world system on the irreversible level, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the great billionfold world system, as many as there are, on the irreversible level, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.449 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom becomes even more complete than that, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, [F.107.b] it is because the irreversible level of bodhisattva great beings originates from her.

23.450 “Kauśika, leaving aside having established the beings of the great billionfold world system on the irreversible level, Kauśika, if any sons or daughters of good families were to have established the beings of the world systems in each of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, on the irreversible level, do you think, Kauśika, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Śakra.

23.451 “Kauśika,” said the Blessed One, “if those sons or daughters of good families, who describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to others, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom will become even more complete than that. When your cultivation of the perfection of wisdom becomes even more complete than that, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,’ their merit increases even more greatly than theirs. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the irreversible level of bodhisattva great beings originates from her.

23.452 “Moreover, Kauśika, [F.108.a] were all the beings of Jambudvīpa, as many as there are, to have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to them, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,' the merit of those sons or daughters of good families would more greatly increase.

23.453 “Kauśika, leaving aside all the beings of Jambudvīpa who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, were all the beings of the world system with its four continents, as many as there are, to have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to them, [F.108.b] exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,’ the merit of those sons or daughters of good families would more greatly increase.

23.454 “Kauśika, leaving aside all the beings of the world system with its four continents who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, were all the beings of the small thousandfold world system, as many as there are, to have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to them, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, [F.109.a] when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,’ the merit of those sons or daughters of good families would more greatly increase.

23.455 “Kauśika, leaving aside all the beings of the small thousandfold world system who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, were all the beings of the medium millionfold world system, as many as there are, to have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to them, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. [F.109.b] When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,’ the merit of those sons or daughters of good families would more greatly increase.

23.456 “Kauśika, leaving aside all the beings of the medium millionfold world system who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, were all the beings of the great billionfold world system, as many as there are, to have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to them, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,’ the merit of those sons or daughters of good families would more greatly increase.

23.457 “Kauśika, leaving aside all the beings of the great billionfold world system who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, [F.110.a] were all the beings of the world systems in each of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, to have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and if any sons or daughters of good families were to describe and teach this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explain and interpret, analyze and elucidate, and completely disclose it to them, exhorting them, saying, ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should take up, master, uphold, recite, and focus your attention correctly on the profound perfection of wisdom. You should earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained. Child of a good family, when you earnestly apply yourself to the perfection of wisdom just as it has been explained, at that time, child of a good family, you will train in the perfection of wisdom. Child of a good family, when you train in the perfection of wisdom, at that time you will attain the attributes of omniscience. When you attain the attributes of omniscience, at that time you will fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment,’ the merit of those sons or daughters of good families would more greatly increase.

23.458 “Moreover, Kauśika, let all the beings of Jambudvīpa, as many as there are, become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. Some son or daughter of good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explains and interprets, analyzes and elucidates, and completely discloses it to those bodhisattva great beings. From among them, some bodhisattva great being says, [F.110.b] ‘I will swiftly⁷⁷⁰ fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.’ If any son or daughter of good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to that one, the merit of that son or daughter of good family would more greatly increase.

23.459 “Moreover, Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of Jambudvīpa who have become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, let all the beings of the world system with its four continents, as many as there are, become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. Some son or daughter of good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explains and interprets, analyzes and elucidates, and completely discloses it to those bodhisattva great beings. From among them, some bodhisattva great being says, ‘I will swiftly fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.’ If any son or daughter of good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to that one, the merit of that son or daughter of good family would more greatly increase.

23.460 “Moreover, Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of the world system with its four continents who have become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, let all the beings of the small thousandfold world system, as many as there are, become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. Some son or daughter of a good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explains and interprets, analyzes and elucidates, [F.111.a] and completely discloses it to those bodhisattva great beings. From among them, some bodhisattva great being says, ‘I will swiftly fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.’ If any son or daughter of good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to that one, the merit of that son or daughter of a good family would more greatly increase.

23.461 “Moreover, Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of the small thousandfold world system who have become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, let all the beings of the medium millionfold world system, as many as there are, become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. Some son or daughter of good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explains and interprets, analyzes and elucidates, and completely discloses it to those bodhisattva great beings. From among them, some bodhisattva great being says, ‘I will swiftly fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.’ If some son or daughter of good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to that one, the merit of that son or daughter of good family would more greatly increase.

23.462 “Moreover, Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of the medium millionfold world system who have become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, let all the beings of the great billionfold world system, as many as there are, [F.111.b] become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. Some son or daughter of good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explains and interprets, analyzes and elucidates, and completely discloses it to those bodhisattva great beings. From among them, some bodhisattva great being says, ‘I will swiftly fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.’ If some son or daughter of good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter to that one, the merit of that son or daughter of good family would more greatly increase.

- 23.463 “Moreover, Kauśika, leaving aside the beings of the great billionfold world system who have become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, let all the beings of the world systems in each of the ten directions, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, as many as there are, become irreversible from unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. Some son or daughter of good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail according to the meaning and the letter, and explains and interprets, analyzes and elucidates, and completely discloses it to those bodhisattva great beings. From among them, some bodhisattva great being says, ‘I will swiftly fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.’ If any son or daughter of good family describes and teaches this perfection of wisdom in detail [F.112.a] according to the meaning and the letter to that one, the merit of that son or daughter of good family would more greatly increase.
- 23.464 “If you ask why, it is because those irreversible bodhisattva great beings are certain—they are fixed on perfect enlightenment and will not become irreversible from unsurpassed, complete enlightenment. There is no need from now on to still give additional instructions to them. These [later ones] want to emerge from saṃsāra and are pained by great compassion.”⁷⁷¹
- 23.465 Śakra then said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, the more that bodhisattva great beings approach unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the more that those bodhisattva great beings should be advised and instructed in the perfection of generosity, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the perfection of ethical discipline, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the perfection of tolerance, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the perfection of perseverance, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the perfection of meditative concentration, and the more that they should be advised and instructed in the perfection of wisdom.
- 23.466 “The more that bodhisattva great beings approach unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of internal phenomena, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of external phenomena, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of emptiness, [F.112.b] the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of great extent, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of ultimate reality, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of the unlimited, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of nonexclusion, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of inherent nature, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of all phenomena, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of nonentities, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of essential nature, and the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the more that bodhisattva great beings should be advised and instructed in the applications of mindfulness, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the correct exertions, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the supports for miraculous ability, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the faculties, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the powers, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the branches of enlightenment, and the more that they should be advised and instructed in the noble eightfold path; and the more that they should be advised and instructed in the truths of the noble ones, the more that they should be advised [F.113.a] and instructed in the meditative concentrations, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the immeasurable attitudes, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the formless absorptions, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the eight liberations, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the extrasensory powers, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the meditative stabilities, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the dhāraṇī gateways, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the powers of the tathāgatas, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the fearlessnesses, the more that they should be advised and instructed in the kinds of exact knowledge, the more that they should be advised and instructed in great loving kindness, the more that they should be advised and instructed in great compassion, and the more that they should be advised and instructed in the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.

23.467 “They should also be assisted with the basic necessities: robes, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health.⁷⁷² The merit of sons or daughters of good families who assist those bodhisattva great beings, attracting them with the Dharma and attracting them with material things, increases more greatly, but of those earlier sons or daughters of good families it does not. If you ask why, Blessed Lord, it is because this happens because of that. Those bodhisattva great beings are advised and instructed in the perfection of generosity, are advised and instructed [F.113.b] in the perfection of ethical discipline, are advised and instructed in the perfection of tolerance, are advised and instructed in the perfection of perseverance, are advised and instructed in the perfection of meditative concentration, and are advised and instructed in the perfection of wisdom; they are advised and instructed in the emptiness of internal phenomena, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of external phenomena, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of emptiness, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of great extent, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of ultimate reality, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of the unlimited, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of nonexclusion, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of inherent nature, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of all phenomena, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of nonentities, are advised and instructed in the emptiness of essential nature, and are advised and instructed in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; they are advised and instructed in the applications of mindfulness, are advised and instructed in the correct exertions, are advised and instructed in the supports for miraculous ability, are advised and [F.114.a] instructed in the faculties, are advised and instructed in the powers, are advised and instructed in the branches of enlightenment, and are advised and instructed in the noble eightfold path; and they are advised and instructed in the truths of the noble ones, are advised and instructed in the meditative concentrations, are advised and instructed in the immeasurable attitudes, are advised and instructed in the formless absorptions, are advised and instructed in the eight liberations, are advised and instructed in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, are advised and instructed in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, are advised and instructed in the extrasensory powers, are advised and instructed in the meditative stabilities, are advised and instructed in the dhāraṇī gateways, are advised and instructed in the ten powers of the tathāgatas, are advised and instructed in the four fearlessnesses, are advised and instructed in the four kinds of exact knowledge, are advised and instructed in great loving kindness, are advised and instructed in great compassion, and are advised and instructed in the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.”

23.468 Then the venerable Subhūti said to Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, “Excellent, excellent, Kauśika, that you thus generate resolve in bodhisattva great beings, that you benefit bodhisattva great beings, and that you protect them. Kauśika, [F.114.b] you should act in that manner. Those noble śrāvakas who wish to benefit beings should also generate in the bodhisattva great beings a resolve toward unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. They should benefit and protect bodhisattvas by benefiting them with the Dharma and material things. If you ask why, Kauśika, it is because the source⁷⁷³ of the saṅgha of the śrāvakas of the Blessed One is the bodhisattva great beings.

23.469 “If bodhisattva great beings were not to set their minds on unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, then bodhisattva great beings would not train in those six perfections—the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom. They would not train in the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, or the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; or the applications of mindfulness, the correct exertions, the supports for miraculous ability, the faculties, the powers, the branches of enlightenment, or the noble eightfold path; [F.115.a] or the truths of the noble ones, the meditative concentrations, the immeasurable attitudes, the formless absorptions, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the extrasensory powers, the meditative stabilities, the dhāraṇī gateways, the powers of the tathāgatas, the fearlessnesses, the kinds of exact knowledge, or the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. They would not fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

23.470 “Were they not to fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, pratyekabuddhas and śrāvakas would also not exist. But, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings do indeed train in those six perfections—the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom. They do indeed train in the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; [F.115.b] in the applications of mindfulness, the correct exertions, the supports for miraculous ability, the faculties, the powers, the branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; and in the truths of the noble ones, the meditative concentrations, the immeasurable attitudes, the formless absorptions, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the extrasensory powers, the meditative stabilities, the dhāraṇī gateways, the powers of the tathāgatas, the fearlessnesses, the kinds of exact knowledge, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.

23.471 “So, those bodhisattva great beings do fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and having fully awakened to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, in all world systems the continuum of the hells is cut, the continuum of the animal realm is cut, and the continuum of the world of Yama is cut; the ranks of the asuras decline and the ranks of gods flourish; great and lofty royal families appear in the world, great and lofty priestly families appear in the world, and great and lofty householder families appear in the world; the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm appear in the world, the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm appear in the world, the gods of the Yāma realm appear in the world, the gods of the Tuṣita realm appear in the world, [F.116.a] the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm appear in the world, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm appear in the world; the gods of the

Brahmakāyika realm appear in the world, the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm appear in the world, the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm appear in the world, and the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm appear in the world; the gods of the Ābha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Parīttābha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm appear in the world, and the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm appear in the world; the gods of the Śubha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm appear in the world, and the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm appear in the world; the gods of the Vṛha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm appear in the world, and the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm appear in the world; the gods of the Avṛha realm appear in the world, the gods of the Atapa realm appear in the world, the gods of the Sudṛśa realm appear in the world, the gods of the Sudarśana realm appear in the world, and the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm appear in the world; the gods of the sphere of infinite space appear in the world, the gods of the sphere of infinite consciousness appear in the world, the gods of the sphere of nothing-at-all appear in the world, and the gods of the sphere of neither perception nor nonperception appear in [F.116.b] the world; the perfection of generosity appears in the world, the perfection of ethical discipline appears in the world, the perfection of tolerance appears in the world, the perfection of perseverance appears in the world, the perfection of meditative concentration appears in the world, and perfection of wisdom appears in the world; the emptiness of internal phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of external phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of emptiness appears in the world, the emptiness of great extent appears in the world, the emptiness of ultimate reality appears in the world, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of the unlimited appears in the world, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end appears in the world, the emptiness of nonexclusion appears in the world, the emptiness of inherent nature appears in the world, the emptiness of all phenomena appears in the world, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics appears in the world, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended appears in the world, the emptiness of nonentities appears in the world, the emptiness of essential nature appears in the world, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities appears in the world; the applications of mindfulness appear in the world, the correct exertions appear in the world, the supports for miraculous ability appear in the world, the faculties appear in [F.117.a] the world, the powers appear in the world, the branches of enlightenment appear in the world, and the noble eightfold path appears in the world; the truths of the noble ones appear in the world, the meditative concentrations appear in the world, the immeasurable attitudes appear in the world, the formless absorptions appear in the world, the eight liberations appear in the world, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption appear in the world, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation appear in the world, the meditative stabilities appear in the world, the dhāraṇī gateways appear in the world, the ten powers of the tathāgatas appear in the world, the four fearlessnesses appear in the world, the four kinds of exact knowledge appear in the world, great compassion appears in the world, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas appear in the world; and the vehicle of the śrāvakas appears in the world, the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas appears in the world, and the Great Vehicle appears in the world.”

23.472 This completes the twenty-third chapter, “Śakra,” from The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Lines. [B9]

CHAPTER 24: DEDICATION

- 24.1 Then the bodhisattva great being Maitreya said to the elder Subhūti, [F.117.b] “Venerable monk Subhūti, that which is the basis of meritorious action associated with the rejoicing of a bodhisattva great being;⁷⁷⁴ that which is the basis of meritorious action associated with a bodhisattva great being’s rejoicing, which is dedicated, having made common cause with all beings, to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by way of not apprehending anything; that which is the foundation of meritorious action associated with the rejoicing of all beings; and that which is the basis of meritorious action arisen from the generosity, and the basis of meritorious action arisen from the ethical discipline and arisen from the meditation of the followers of the vehicle of the śrāvakas and the followers of the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas—from among these, just that basis of meritorious action associated with a bodhisattva great being’s rejoicing, which is dedicated, having made common cause with all beings, to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment is said to be supreme, is said to be the best, is said to be the foremost, is said to be excellent, is said to be perfect, is said to be the greatest, is said to be unsurpassed, is said to be unexcelled, is said to be unequaled, and is said to be equal to the unequaled.
- 24.2 “If you ask why, it is because the basis of meritorious action arisen from the generosity, and the basis of meritorious action arisen from the ethical discipline and arisen from the meditation of the followers of the vehicle of the śrāvakas and the followers of the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas are simply established for their personal discipline, for their personal peace, and for their personal attainment of complete nirvāṇa. The applications of mindfulness, the correct exertions, the supports for miraculous ability, the faculties, the powers, the branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path, [F.118.a] and the four truths of the noble ones, the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the four kinds of exact knowledge, and the six extrasensory powers, are also simply established for their personal discipline, for their personal peace, and for their personal attainment of complete nirvāṇa. On the other hand, when it comes to the bodhisattva, the basis of meritorious action associated with rejoicing has been dedicated, having made common cause with all beings, to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by way of not apprehending anything, in order that all beings might be disciplined, brought to peace, and attain final nirvāṇa.”

- 24.3 Then the venerable Subhūti said to the bodhisattva great being Maitreya, “There are the roots of virtue, whatever they are, as many as there are, associated with the six perfections of those immeasurable, countless lord buddhas who have passed into complete nirvāṇa in each world system of the countless, immeasurable, and boundless world systems of the eastern direction; those immeasurable, countless lord buddhas who have passed into complete nirvāṇa in each world system of the countless, immeasurable, and boundless world systems of the southern direction; those immeasurable, countless lord buddhas who have passed into complete nirvāṇa in each world system of the countless, immeasurable, and boundless world systems of the western direction; those immeasurable, countless lord buddhas who have passed into complete nirvāṇa in each world system of [F.118.b] the countless, immeasurable, and boundless world systems of the northern direction; those immeasurable, countless lord buddhas who have passed into complete nirvāṇa in each world system of the countless, immeasurable, and boundless world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction; those immeasurable, countless lord buddhas who have passed into complete nirvāṇa in each world system of the countless, immeasurable, and boundless world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction; those immeasurable, countless lord buddhas who have passed into complete nirvāṇa in each world system of the countless, immeasurable, and boundless world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction; those immeasurable, countless lord buddhas who have passed into complete nirvāṇa in each world system of the countless, immeasurable, and boundless world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction; those immeasurable, countless lord buddhas who have passed into complete nirvāṇa in each world system of the countless, immeasurable, and boundless world systems of the direction below; and those immeasurable, countless lord buddhas who have passed into complete nirvāṇa in each world system of the countless, immeasurable, and boundless world systems of the direction above, from the time they first set their mind on enlightenment, up to fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, up to when they passed into final nirvāṇa [F.119.a] in the expanse of nirvāṇa where no aggregates are left behind, and up until the disappearance of their Dharma. There are the basis of meritorious action arisen from generosity, the basis of meritorious action arisen from ethical discipline, the basis of meritorious action arisen from meditation, those uncontaminated roots of virtue of those learning, and those uncontaminated roots of virtue of those not learning, who are followers of the vehicle of the śrāvakas. And there is the aggregate of ethical discipline, the aggregate of meditative stability, the aggregate of wisdom, the aggregate of liberation, and the aggregate of knowledge and seeing of liberation of those tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas; altruism and great compassion; the countless and immeasurable attributes of the buddhas; and those roots of virtue, as many as there are, of those who, having trained in that Dharma, attained the fruit of having entered the stream, attained the fruit of once-returner, attained the fruit of non-returner, attained arhatship, attained individual enlightenment, and entered into the maturity of the bodhisattvas. Bodhisattva great beings gather together all of those roots of virtue, as many as there are, generated on account of those tathāgatas, whether they are present, or whether they have passed into complete nirvāṇa; rejoice with the rejoicing that is excellent, foremost, best, supreme, perfect, greatest, unsurpassed, unexcelled, unequaled, and equal to the unequaled; and, having rejoiced in that manner, having made common cause with all beings, dedicate that basis of meritorious action associated with rejoicing to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment with, [F.119.b] ‘May it bring about unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.’ And when those who have set out in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas in that manner have dedicated in those words and with that sort of thought, are those bases and those objective referents—the bases and objective referents on account of which that sort of thought has arisen—apprehended in the way they are when they have been made into mental images by those children of good families?”

24.4 Maitreya replied, “Just like the dedication, having made a mental image, to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by those children of good families who are followers of the bodhisattvas’ Great Vehicle, similarly, those bases and those objective referents are not apprehended.”

24.5 Subhūti then said, “If the lord buddhas are present in the world systems of the ten directions on account of such nonexistent bases and nonexistent objective referents, and if their roots of virtue, as many as there are, from the time they first set their mind on enlightenment to as long as their Dharma remains; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, of those sons and daughters of good families who are the followers of the vehicle of the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, of those learning; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, of those not learning were all to have been gathered and compressed together and to have been dedicated to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by way of mental images, well then, it would be like the mistaken perception, mistaken thought, and mistaken view of the impermanent as 'permanent'; the mistaken perception, mistaken thought, and mistaken view of suffering as 'happiness'; the mistaken perception, mistaken thought, and mistaken view of nonself as 'a self'; and the mistaken perception, [F.120.a] mistaken thought, and mistaken view of the impure as 'pure.' Would the perception of those not be mistaken like that?

24.6 "Everything would also be just like the bases and just like the objective referents, so enlightenment would also be similar; the mind also similar; the perfection of generosity also similar, and the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom also similar; physical forms, feelings, perceptions, formative predispositions, and consciousness also similar; the eyes, ears, nose, tongue, body, and mental faculty also similar; sights, sounds, odors, tastes, tangibles, and mental phenomena also similar; the sensory elements, the sense fields, and the links of dependent origination also similar; the emptiness of internal phenomena also similar, the emptiness of external phenomena also similar, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena also similar, the emptiness of emptiness also similar, the emptiness of great extent also similar, the emptiness of ultimate reality also similar, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena also similar, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena also similar, the emptiness of the unlimited also similar, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end also similar, the emptiness of nonexclusion also similar, the emptiness of inherent nature also similar, the emptiness of all phenomena also similar, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics also similar, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended also similar, the emptiness of nonentities also similar, the emptiness of essential nature also similar, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities also similar; the applications of mindfulness also similar, the correct exertions also similar, the supports for miraculous ability also similar, the faculties also similar, the powers also similar, the branches of enlightenment also similar, and the noble eightfold path also similar; [F.120.b] and the truths of the noble ones also similar, the meditative concentrations also similar, the immeasurable attitudes also similar, the formless absorptions also similar, the eight liberations also similar, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption also similar, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation also similar, the extrasensory powers also similar, the meditative stabilities also similar, the dhāraṇī gateways also similar, the ten powers of the tathāgatas also similar, the four fearlessnesses also similar, the four kinds of exact knowledge also similar, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas also similar.

24.7 “In that case, if enlightenment is also just like the bases and just like the objective referents, and the mind also similar; the perfection of generosity also similar, and the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom also similar; physical forms, feelings, perceptions, formative predispositions, and consciousness also similar; the eyes, ears, nose, tongue, body, and mental faculty also similar; sights, sounds, odors, tastes, tangibles, and mental phenomena also similar; the sensory elements, the sense fields, and the links of dependent origination also similar; the emptiness of internal phenomena also similar, the emptiness of external phenomena also similar, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena also similar, the emptiness of emptiness also similar, the emptiness of great extent also similar, the emptiness of ultimate reality also similar, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena also similar, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena also similar, the emptiness of the unlimited also similar, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end also similar, the emptiness of nonexclusion also similar, the emptiness of inherent nature also similar, the emptiness of all phenomena also similar, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics also similar, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended also similar, the emptiness of nonentities also similar, the emptiness of essential nature also similar, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities also similar; the applications of mindfulness also similar, the correct exertions also similar, [F.121.a] the supports for miraculous ability also similar, the faculties also similar, the powers also similar, the branches of enlightenment also similar, and the noble eightfold path also similar; and the truths of the noble ones also similar, the meditative concentrations also similar, the immeasurable attitudes also similar, the formless absorptions also similar, the eight liberations also similar, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption also similar, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation also similar, the extrasensory powers also similar, the meditative stabilities also similar, the dhāraṇī gateways also similar, the ten powers of the tathāgatas also similar, the four fearlessnesses also similar, the four kinds of exact knowledge also similar, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas also similar, then, when there is a dedication to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, what are the bases, what are the objective referents, what is the enlightenment, what is the mind, what are those roots of virtue, and what is the basis of meritorious action associated with rejoicing?”

24.8 Maitreya replied, “If bodhisattva great beings practice the practice of the six perfections, wait on many buddhas, generate the roots of virtue, have been assisted by spiritual mentors, and have trained in all phenomena being empty of their own defining characteristics, they do not dedicate to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment having made a mental image of those bases, those objective referents, those buddhas, those roots of virtue, [F.121.b] and those bases of meritorious action associated with rejoicing. Rather, they dedicate like this: not by way of duality and not by way of nonduality, not by way of signs⁷⁷⁵ and not by way of signlessness, not by way of apprehending and not by way of not apprehending, not by way of defilement and not by way of purification, and not by way of arising and not by way of cessation.

24.9 “If, however, those bodhisattva great beings do not practice the practice of the six perfections, do not wait on many buddhas, have not generated the roots of virtue, have not been assisted by spiritual mentors, and have not trained in all phenomena being empty of their own defining characteristics, they dedicate to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment having made a mental image of those bases, those objective referents, those buddhas, those roots of virtue, and those bases of meritorious action associated with rejoicing.

24.10 “Venerable monk Subhūti, the perfection of wisdom that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The perfection of meditative concentration that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The perfection of perseverance that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The perfection of tolerance that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The perfection of ethical discipline that is taught in this way should not be explained [F.122.a] in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The perfection of generosity that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of internal phenomena that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of external phenomena that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of external and internal phenomena that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of emptiness that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of great extent that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of ultimate reality that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of conditioned phenomena that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of unconditioned phenomena that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of the unlimited that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of nonexclusion that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of inherent nature that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of all phenomena that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics that is taught in this way [F.122.b] should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of nonentities that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of essential nature that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The applications of mindfulness that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The correct exertions that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The supports for miraculous ability that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The faculties that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The powers that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The branches of enlightenment that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The noble eightfold path that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The truths of the noble ones that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The meditative concentrations that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The immeasurable attitudes that are taught in this way [F.123.a] should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The formless absorptions that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The eight liberations that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The nine serial steps of meditative absorption that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The extrasensory powers that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The meditative stabilities that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The dhāraṇī gateways that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The ten powers of the tathāgatas that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The four fearlessnesses that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The four kinds of exact knowledge that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas that are taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. knowledge of all the dharmas that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. The knowledge of the aspects of the path that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. All-aspect omniscience that is taught in this way should not be explained in the presence of [F.123.b] a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle.

24.11 “All phenomena being empty of their own defining characteristics, which is taught in this way, should not be explained in the presence of a bodhisattva who has newly set out in the vehicle. If you ask why, it is because the mere faith that they have, the mere joy, the mere resolve, and the mere devotion that they have for her would be rendered nonexistent. It should, however, be explained and taught in the presence of bodhisattva great beings who are irreversible.

24.12 “The perfection of wisdom that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in the presence of those who have been assisted by spiritual mentors, have performed deeds of service for the earlier victors, have generated roots of virtue, and have waited on many buddhas. The perfection of meditative concentration that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the perfection of perseverance that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the perfection of tolerance that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the perfection of ethical discipline that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, and the perfection of generosity that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence. The emptiness of internal phenomena that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of external phenomena that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of emptiness that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of great extent that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of ultimate reality that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught [F.124.a] in their presence, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of the unlimited that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of nonexclusion that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of inherent nature that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of all phenomena that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of nonentities that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness of essential nature that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence. The applications of mindfulness that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the correct exertions that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the supports for miraculous ability that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the faculties that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the powers that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the branches of enlightenment that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, and the noble eightfold path that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence. The truths of the noble ones that are taught [F.124.b] in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the meditative concentrations that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the immeasurable attitudes that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the formless absorptions that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the eight liberations that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the extrasensory powers that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the meditative stabilities that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the dhāraṇī gateways that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the ten powers of the tathāgatas that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the four fearlessnesses that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the four kinds of exact knowledge that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, great compassion that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas that are taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence. knowledge of all the dharms that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, the knowledge of the aspects of the path that is taught in this way should be explained and should be taught in their presence, and all-aspect omniscience that is taught in this way should not be explained in their presence. [F.125.a] All phenomena being empty of their own defining characteristics, which is taught in this way, should be explained and should be taught in their presence. When they hear this, they will not be afraid, they will not be frightened, and they will not be terrified.

24.13 “It is in that manner, Subhūti, that bodhisattva great beings should dedicate the basis of meritorious action associated with rejoicing to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.”

24.14 “Maitreya,” said Subhūti, “if the mind with which they rejoice—that mind dedicating the roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment—is extinct, has ceased, is nonexistent, and is transformed,⁷⁷⁶ and if these bases, these objective referents, and these roots of virtue are also extinct, have ceased, are nonexistent, and are transformed, what is that mind associated with rejoicing, what are those bases, what are those objective referents, and what are those roots of virtue that should be dedicated to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment? Does the mind dedicate the mind? Does a mind dedicate a mind in that manner, or, when a mind dedicates a mind, is there no meeting together of the two minds? That which is the essential nature of mind also cannot dedicate.

24.15 “When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, if they know that the perfection of wisdom is a nonentity, the perfection of meditative concentration is a nonentity, the perfection of perseverance is a nonentity, the perfection of tolerance is a nonentity, the perfection of ethical discipline is a nonentity, and the perfection of generosity is a nonentity; the emptiness of internal phenomena is a nonentity, the emptiness of external phenomena is a nonentity, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is a nonentity, the emptiness of emptiness is a nonentity, the emptiness of great extent is a nonentity, [F.125.b] the emptiness of ultimate reality is a nonentity, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is a nonentity, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is a nonentity, the emptiness of the unlimited is a nonentity, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is a nonentity, the emptiness of nonexclusion is a nonentity, the emptiness of inherent nature is a nonentity, the emptiness of all phenomena is a nonentity, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is a nonentity, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is a nonentity, the emptiness of nonentities is a nonentity, the emptiness of essential nature is a nonentity, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is a nonentity; the applications of mindfulness are nonentities, the correct exertions are nonentities, the supports for miraculous ability are nonentities, the faculties are nonentities, the powers are nonentities, the branches of enlightenment are nonentities, and the noble eightfold path is a nonentity; the truths of the noble ones are nonentities, the meditative concentrations are nonentities, the immeasurable attitudes are nonentities, the formless absorptions are nonentities, the liberations are nonentities, the serial steps of meditative absorption are nonentities, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are nonentities, the extrasensory powers are nonentities, the meditative stabilities are nonentities, the dhāraṇī gateways are nonentities, the ten powers of the tathāgatas are nonentities, the four fearlessnesses are nonentities, the four kinds of exact knowledge are nonentities, great compassion is a nonentity, [F.126.a] and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are nonentities; and the fruit of having entered the stream is a nonentity, the fruit of once-returner is a nonentity, the fruit of non-returner is a nonentity, arhatship is a nonentity, individual enlightenment is a nonentity, the knowledge of the aspects of the path is a nonentity, and all-aspect omniscience is a nonentity, bodhisattva great beings should dedicate in that manner the basis of meritorious action associated with rejoicing to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. If they make the dedication in that manner, they will have made the dedication to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.”

24.16 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, said to the elder Subhūti, “Venerable monk Subhūti, if bodhisattva great beings who have newly set out in the vehicle were to hear this teaching, they would be afraid and frightened—they would be terrified, would they not? Venerable monk Subhūti, how should bodhisattva great beings who have newly set out in the vehicle dedicate these roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment? How, having taken hold of the basis of meritorious action associated with rejoicing, do they dedicate it to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment?”

24.17 Then the venerable Subhūti, focused on the bodhisattva great being Maitreya, said to Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, “Kauśika, if those bodhisattva great beings who have newly set out in the vehicle practice the perfection of wisdom and grasp this perfection of wisdom, without apprehending it [F.126.b] and by way of signlessness; practice the perfection of meditative concentration and grasp this perfection of meditative concentration, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the perfection of perseverance and grasp this perfection of perseverance, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the perfection of tolerance and grasp this perfection of tolerance, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the perfection of ethical discipline and grasp this perfection of ethical discipline, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; and practice the perfection of generosity and grasp this perfection of generosity, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; if they practice the emptiness of internal phenomena and grasp this emptiness of internal phenomena, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of external phenomena and grasp this emptiness of external phenomena, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of external and internal phenomena and grasp this emptiness of external and internal phenomena, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of emptiness and grasp this emptiness of emptiness, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of great extent and grasp this emptiness of great extent, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of ultimate reality and grasp this emptiness of ultimate reality, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of conditioned phenomena and grasp this emptiness of conditioned phenomena, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; [F.127.a] practice the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena and grasp this emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of the unlimited and grasp this emptiness of the unlimited, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end and grasp this emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of nonexclusion and grasp this emptiness of nonexclusion, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of inherent nature and grasp this emptiness of inherent nature, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of all phenomena and grasp this emptiness of all phenomena, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics and grasp this emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended and grasp this emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of nonentities and grasp this emptiness of nonentities, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness of essential nature and grasp this emptiness of essential nature, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; and practice the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities and grasp this emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; if they practice the applications of mindfulness and grasp these applications of mindfulness, without apprehending them [F.127.b] and by way of signlessness; practice the correct exertions and grasp these correct exertions, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the supports for miraculous ability and grasp these supports for miraculous ability, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the faculties and grasp these faculties, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the powers and grasp these powers, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the branches of enlightenment and grasp these branches of enlightenment, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; and practice the noble eightfold path and grasp this noble eightfold path, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; if they practice the truths of the noble ones and grasp these truths of the noble ones, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the meditative concentrations and grasp these meditative concentrations, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the immeasurable attitudes and grasp these immeasurable attitudes, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the formless absorptions and grasp these formless absorptions, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the liberations and grasp these liberations, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the nine serial steps of meditative absorption and grasp these [F.128.a] nine serial steps of meditative absorption, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation and grasp these emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the extrasensory powers and grasp these extrasensory powers, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the meditative stabilities and grasp these meditative stabilities, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the dhāraṇī gateways and grasp these dhāraṇī gateways, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the ten powers of the tathāgatas and grasp these ten powers of the tathāgatas, without apprehending them and

by way of signlessness; practice the four fearlessnesses and grasp these four fearlessnesses, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice the four kinds of exact knowledge and grasp these four kinds of exact knowledge, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; practice great compassion and grasp this great compassion, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; and practice the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas and grasp these eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, without apprehending them and by way of signlessness; if they practice knowledge of all the dharmas and grasp this knowledge of all the dharmas, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; practice [F.128.b] the knowledge of the aspects of the path and grasp this knowledge of the aspects of the path, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness; and practice all-aspect omniscience and grasp this all-aspect omniscience, without apprehending it and by way of signlessness, then they will have more belief⁷⁷⁷ in the perfection of wisdom, will have more belief in the perfection of meditative concentration, will have more belief in the perfection of perseverance, will have more belief in the perfection of tolerance, will have more belief in the perfection of ethical discipline, and will have more belief in the perfection of generosity; they will have more belief in the emptiness of internal phenomena, will have more belief in the emptiness of external phenomena, will have more belief in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, will have more belief in the emptiness of emptiness, will have more belief in the emptiness of great extent, will have more belief in the emptiness of ultimate reality, will have more belief in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, will have more belief in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, will have more belief in the emptiness of the unlimited, will have more belief in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, will have more belief in the emptiness of nonexclusion, will have more belief in the emptiness of inherent nature, will have more belief in the emptiness of all phenomena, will have more belief in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, will have more belief in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, will have more belief in the emptiness of nonentities, will have more belief in the emptiness of essential nature, and will have more belief in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; they will have more belief in the applications of mindfulness, will have more belief in the correct exertions, will have more belief in the supports for miraculous ability, will have more belief in the faculties, [F.129.a] will have more belief in the powers, will have more belief in the branches of enlightenment, and will have more belief in the noble eightfold path; and they will have more belief the truths of the noble ones, will have more belief in the meditative concentrations, will have more belief in the immeasurable attitudes, will have more belief in the formless absorptions, will have more belief in the eight liberations, will have more belief in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, will have more belief in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, will have more belief in the extrasensory powers, will have more belief in the meditative stabilities, will have more belief in the dhāraṇī gateways, will have more belief in the ten powers of the tathāgatas, will have more belief in the four fearlessnesses, will have more belief in the four kinds of exact knowledge, will have more belief in the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, will have more belief in knowledge of all the dharmas, will have more belief in the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and will have more belief in all-aspect omniscience.

- 24.18 “They will be assisted by spiritual mentors, and those spiritual mentors will also instruct them in the six perfections in accordance with the meaning and the letter, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the perfection of wisdom until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the perfection of meditative concentration until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the perfection of perseverance [F.129.b] until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the perfection of tolerance until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the perfection of ethical discipline until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity, and instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the perfection of generosity until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity; instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of internal phenomena until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of external phenomena until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of external and internal phenomena until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of emptiness until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of great extent until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of ultimate reality until they have entered a bodhisattva’s full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of conditioned phenomena until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of the unlimited until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, [F.130.a] instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of nonexclusion until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of inherent nature until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of all phenomena until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of nonentities until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of essential nature until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, and instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity; instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the four applications of mindfulness until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the four correct exertions until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the four supports for miraculous ability until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the five faculties until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the five powers until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be [F.130.b] separated in any way from the seven branches of enlightenment until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, and instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the noble eightfold path until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity; instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the four truths of the noble ones until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the four meditative concentrations until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the four immeasurable attitudes until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the four formless absorptions until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the eight liberations until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the nine serial steps of meditative absorption until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the five extrasensory powers until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the meditative stabilities until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the dhāraṇī gateways until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the ten powers of the tathāgatas until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way [F.131.a] from the four fearlessnesses until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the four kinds of exact knowledge until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from great compassion until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity, and instructing them in such a way that they will not be separated in any way from the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas until they have entered a bodhisattva's full maturity.

24.19 "They will also teach them about the deeds of Māra, and, once they have heard about those deeds of Māra, how there will be no decrease or increase. If you ask why, it is because those deeds of Māra are without an essential nature. Until they enter a bodhisattva's full maturity, they will not be separated from the lord buddhas, they will generate roots of virtue in relation to them, by these roots of virtue they will become secure in the family of bodhisattvas, and until they fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, they will never be separated from the family of bodhisattvas. [B10]

24.20 “Moreover, Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings who have newly set out in the vehicle should gather together, compress into one, and take the measure⁷⁷⁸ of those merits accrued by the immeasurable, countless [F.131.b] tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas who are presently residing and maintaining themselves, and teaching the Dharma, along with their communities of śrāvakas, in the countless, immeasurable world systems in each of the eastern direction, southern direction, western direction, northern direction, intermediate northeastern direction, intermediate southeastern direction, intermediate southwestern direction, intermediate northwestern direction, and in the directions below and above—those lord buddhas who have cut off the modes of thought construction, whose use of words is unimpeded, whose burden has been relinquished, who have trodden down the thorns of the town, who have completely severed the fetters binding them to the rebirth process, and whose minds are thoroughly liberated by perfect understanding—and of those roots of virtue, as many as there are, generated in relation to them by those in great and lofty royal families, or those in great and lofty priestly families, or those in great and lofty householder families, or by the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, or the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm, or the gods of the Yāma realm, or the gods of the Tuṣita realm, or the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm, or the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm, or the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm, or the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm, or the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm, or the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm, or the gods of the Ābha realm, or the gods of the Parīttābha realm, or the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm, or the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm, or the gods of the Śubha realm, or the gods of the Parīttaśubha realm, or the gods of the Apramāṇaśubha realm, or the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm, or the gods of the Vṛha realm, or the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm, or the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm, or the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm, or the gods of the Avṛha realm, or the gods of the Atapa realm, or the gods of the Sudṛśa realm, or the gods of the Sudarśana realm, or the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm—or by anyone, whoever they are—and, having done so, should rejoice in them with the rejoicing that is excellent, foremost, best, supreme, perfect, greatest, unsurpassed, unexcelled, unequaled, and equal to the unequaled. And having rejoiced, making common cause with all beings, they should dedicate those to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.”

- 24.21 Then the bodhisattva great being Maitreya asked the venerable Subhūti, “If bodhisattva great beings who [F.132.a] have newly set out in the vehicle focus their thoughts, as is their habit,⁷⁷⁹ on all those roots of virtue of the lord buddhas and the communities of śrāvakas of the lord buddhas, and rejoice in them with the rejoicing that is excellent, foremost, best, supreme, perfect, greatest, unsurpassed, unexcelled, unequaled, and equal to the unequaled, how will those bodhisattva great beings not have a mistaken perception, how will they not have a mistaken thought, and how will they not have a mistaken view?”
- 24.22 “Maitreya,” replied Subhūti, “if those bodhisattva great beings focus their thoughts, as is their habit, on those lord buddhas and their communities of śrāvakas, and do not have a perception of a buddha, do not have a perception of a śrāvaka, do not have a perception of a root of virtue, and do not have a perception of a mind, even of that mind that makes the dedication, then the bodhisattva great beings who make the dedication in that manner will not have a mistaken perception, will not have a mistaken thought, and will not have a mistaken view. If those bodhisattva great beings take hold of a mental image and focus their thoughts, as is their habit, on those lord buddhas and their communities of śrāvakas and those roots of virtue, and, having taken hold of a mental image, dedicate them to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, that would be the mistaken perception, the mistaken thought, and the mistaken view of bodhisattva great beings.
- 24.23 “If those bodhisattva great beings know, ‘The mind, when we focus our thoughts, as is our habit, [F.132.b] on those lord buddhas and their communities of śrāvakas and those roots of virtue, is extinct just as those are extinct,’ and if they make the dedication thinking, ‘That which is extinct cannot dedicate. This is the reality of the mind—that very mind by which the dedication is made—and this is the reality of that phenomenon [enlightenment], the phenomenon to which the dedication is made,’ they make the dedication perfectly and it will not be erroneous. So that is the way bodhisattva great beings should dedicate the roots of virtue.
- 24.24 “There are bodhisattva great beings who gather together, compress into one, and take the measure of the roots of virtue, as many as there are, of the lord buddhas of the past, future, and present, from the time they first set their mind on enlightenment to as long as their Dharma remains; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, of the śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, generated by many ordinary persons in relation to them; and the teachings of the Dharma that have been heard, as much as there are; and, in relation to that, the roots of virtue, as many as there are, generated by gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, generated by those in great and lofty royal families, or those in great and lofty priestly families, or those in great and lofty householder families, or by the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, or the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm, or the gods of the Yāma realm, or the gods of the Tuṣita realm, or the gods of the Nirmāṇarati realm, or the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm, or the gods of the Brahmakāyika realm, or the gods of the Brahmapurohita realm, or the gods of the Brahmapārṣadya realm, or the gods of the Mahābrahmā realm, or the gods of the Ābha realm, or the gods of the Parīttābha realm, or the gods of the Apramāṇābha realm, or the gods of the Ābhāsvara realm, [F.133.a] or the gods of the Śubha realm, or the gods of the Parīttāśubha realm, or the gods of the Apramāṇāśubha realm, or the gods of the Śubhakṛtsna realm, or the gods of the Vṛha realm, or the gods of the Parīttavṛha realm, or the gods of the Apramāṇavṛha realm, or the gods of the Vṛhatphala realm, or the gods of the Avṛha realm, or the gods of the Atapa realm, or the gods of the Sudṛśa realm, or the gods of the Sudarśana realm, or the gods of the Akaniṣṭha realm; and the good Dharma that they have heard, as much as there is. If, having done so, they were to rejoice with the rejoicing that is excellent, foremost, best, supreme, perfect, greatest, unsurpassed, unexcelled, unequaled, and equal to the unequaled, and dedicate all of that to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and if they were to make this dedication knowing, ‘Those phenomena are extinct, have ceased, are nonexistent, and are transformed, and that mind where the dedication is made is also empty of essential nature,’ then they will have made a dedication to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

- 24.25 “ ‘Phenomena do not dedicate phenomena. If you ask why, it is because all phenomena are empty of an essential nature.’ If they know this and if they make the dedication accordingly, they will have made a dedication to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. So it is that when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, practice the perfection of meditative concentration, practice the perfection of perseverance, practice the perfection of tolerance, practice the perfection of ethical discipline, and practice the perfection of generosity, they will not have a mistaken perception, they will not have [F.133.b] a mistaken thought, and they will not have a mistaken view. If you ask why, it is because these bodhisattva great beings are not attached to the dedication, are not attached to those roots of virtue, do not observe even enlightenment, and do not observe the mind set on enlightenment to which they could be attached. This is the unsurpassed dedication of bodhisattva great beings.

“If bodhisattva great beings know that their accumulation of the basis of meritorious action is devoid of the aggregates, sensory elements, and sense fields; if they know that it is devoid of the perfection of wisdom, know that it is devoid of the perfection of meditative concentration, know that it is devoid of the perfection of perseverance, know that it is devoid of the perfection of tolerance, know that it is devoid of the perfection of ethical discipline, and know that it is devoid of the perfection of generosity; know that it is devoid of the emptiness of internal phenomena, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of external phenomena, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of emptiness, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of great extent, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of ultimate reality, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of the unlimited, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of nonexclusion, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of inherent nature, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of all phenomena, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of nonentities, know that it is devoid of the emptiness of essential nature, and know that it is devoid of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; know that it is devoid of [F.134.a] the applications of mindfulness, know that it is devoid of the correct exertions, know that it is devoid of the supports for miraculous ability, know that it is devoid of the faculties, know that it is devoid of the powers, know that it is devoid of the branches of enlightenment, and know that it is devoid of the noble eightfold path; and know that it is devoid of the truths of the noble ones, know that it is devoid of the meditative concentrations, know that it is devoid of the immeasurable attitudes, know that it is devoid of the formless absorptions, know that it is devoid of the eight liberations, know that it is devoid of the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, know that it is devoid of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, know that it is devoid of the extrasensory powers, know that it is devoid of the meditative stabilities, know that it is devoid of the dhāraṇī gateways, know that it is devoid of the ten powers of the tathāgatas, know that it is devoid of the four fearlessnesses, know that it is devoid of the four kinds of exact knowledge, know that it is devoid of great loving kindness, know that it is devoid of great compassion, and know that it is devoid of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, in that way, Subhūti, the accumulation of the basis of meritorious action is dedicated by bodhisattva great beings to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

24.27 “If bodhisattva great beings know that that accumulation of the basis of meritorious action associated with rejoicing is devoid of the essential nature of an accumulation of the basis of meritorious action associated with rejoicing, and if they know that those buddhas are devoid of the essential nature of a buddha, those roots of virtue are devoid of the essential nature of a root of virtue, those accumulations are devoid of the essential nature of an accumulation, [F.134.b] that mind of enlightenment is devoid of the essential nature of a mind set on enlightenment, that dedication is devoid of the essential nature of a dedication, and that enlightenment is devoid of the essential nature of an enlightenment; the perfection of wisdom is devoid of the essential nature of a perfection of wisdom; that the perfection of meditative concentration is devoid of the essential nature of a perfection of meditative concentration, the perfection of perseverance is devoid of an essential nature of a perfection of perseverance, the perfection of tolerance is devoid of the essential nature of a perfection of tolerance, the perfection of ethical discipline is devoid of the essential nature of a perfection of ethical discipline, and the perfection of generosity is devoid of the essential nature of a perfection of generosity; that the emptiness of internal phenomena is devoid of an emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is devoid of the essential nature of an

emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, [F.135.a] the emptiness of nonentities is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature is devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is devoid of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; that the applications of mindfulness are devoid of the essential nature of an application of mindfulness, the correct exertions are devoid of the essential nature of a correct exertion, the supports for miraculous ability are devoid of the essential nature of a support for miraculous ability, the faculties are devoid of the essential nature of a faculty, the powers are devoid of the essential nature of a power, the branches of enlightenment are devoid of the essential nature of a branch of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path is devoid of a noble eightfold path; that the truths of the noble ones are devoid of a truth of the noble ones, the meditative concentrations are devoid of the essential nature of a meditative concentration, the immeasurable attitudes are devoid of the essential nature of an immeasurable attitude, the formless absorptions are devoid of the essential nature of a formless absorption, the eight liberations are devoid of the essential nature of a liberation, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are devoid of the essential nature of a serial step of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are devoid of the essential nature of an emptiness, signlessness, or wishlessness gateway to liberation, the extrasensory powers are devoid of the essential nature of an extrasensory power, the meditative stabilities are devoid of the essential nature of a meditative stability, and the dhāraṇī gateways are devoid of the essential nature of a dhāraṇī gateway; and that the ten powers of the tathāgatas are devoid [F.135.b] of the essential nature of a power of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses are devoid of the essential nature of a fearlessness, the four kinds of exact knowledge are devoid of the essential nature of a kind of exact knowledge, great compassion is devoid of a great compassion, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are devoid of a distinct quality of the buddhas, then those bodhisattva great beings should practice the perfection of wisdom that is void accordingly, because this is the perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings.

24.28 “Moreover, when bodhisattva great beings dedicate the roots of virtue of those lord buddhas and their communities of śrāvakas who have passed into final nirvāṇa, they should make the dedication like this: Just as those lord buddhas have passed into final nirvāṇa, these roots of virtue, too, have passed into final nirvāṇa. Just like those roots of virtue, as they really are,

this dedication too has passed into final nirvāṇa. And that mind that is the mind by which the dedication is made is of a similar type, which is to say, has that as its essential nature. When they understand like that, the dedication has been made to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and when the dedication has been made in that manner, they will not have a mistaken perception, they will not have a mistaken thought, and they will not have a mistaken view.

24.29 “When bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, if they perceive those roots of virtue of those lord buddhas by way of a mental image, they do not make a dedication to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. ‘All the lord buddhas of the past, as many as there are, are not mental images—they are not within the scope of mental images.’⁷⁸⁰ Even if they focus their thoughts, as they habitually do, like that, they still make them into mental images [F.136.a] and do not dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. In that way they will have a mistaken perception, they will have a mistaken thought, and they will have a mistaken view.

24.30 “If bodhisattva great beings do not perceive those lord buddhas, those roots of virtue, those accumulations, and those settings of the mind on enlightenment, and do not make them into mental images, they dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. In that way they will not have a mistaken perception, they will not have a mistaken thought, and they will not have a mistaken view.”

24.31 “Venerable monk Subhūti,” asked Maitreya, “how do bodhisattva great beings not make a mental image of those roots of virtue and dedicate them to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment?”

24.32 “Bodhisattva great beings should train in those skillful means in this perfection of wisdom,” replied Subhūti. “They should know about the skillful means of bodhisattva great beings from the perfection of wisdom. Without relying on the perfection of wisdom, it is not possible to dedicate the basis of meritorious action.”

24.33 Maitreya then said, “Should one think, ‘Would there not be the fault that in the perfection of wisdom those lord buddhas do not exist and are not apprehended, those roots of virtue do not exist and are not apprehended, those accumulations do not exist and are not apprehended, and those settings of the mind by which the dedication is made to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment do not exist and are not apprehended?’ [F.136.b] in regard to that, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom they should make an investigation as follows: ‘If those bodies of theirs⁷⁸¹ have ceased, those roots of virtue have ceased, those accumulations have ceased, and those settings of the mind on enlightenment have ceased, how, having made them mental images, could there be any conception of those lord buddhas, those roots of virtue, those accumulations, and those settings of the mind on enlightenment?’

24.34 “The tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas do not rejoice in and praise dedication by way of mental images in that manner. If you ask why, it is because making a mental image of the lord buddhas who have passed into final nirvāṇa, and conceiving of them and apprehending them, is their major act of apprehending. So it is that bodhisattva great beings who wish to dedicate those roots of virtue should make the dedication without apprehending and without making mental images. The tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas do not say that a dedication of someone with the perception of an objective referent and with the perception of a mental image is of great value. If you ask why, it is because that dedication would be poisonous and painful.

24.35 “To illustrate, it would be just like perfect⁷⁸² food of excellent color and excellent aroma, mixed with poison—even though the color, aroma, and taste may well be pleasant, it nonetheless would end up being poisonous. Persons of a childish disposition or disposed to intellectual confusion think it is edible, but if they do indeed eat it, even though they experience the color, aroma, and good taste, it transforms⁷⁸³ into suffering and the ripening of suffering. [F.137.a]

24.36 “Similarly, here some with wrong awareness, wrong cognition, and wrong training, who do not realize and do not understand the meaning, will teach as follows: ‘Come here, child of a good family. You should gather together, compress into one, and take the measure of all those roots of virtue, as many as there are, that the lord buddhas of the past, future, and present, from the time they first set their mind on enlightenment, up to fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, up to when they passed into final nirvāṇa in the expanse of nirvāṇa where no aggregates are left behind, and up until the disappearance of the good Dharma have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of wisdom; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of meditative concentration; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of perseverance; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of tolerance; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of ethical discipline; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of generosity; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four meditative concentrations;[F.137.b] the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four immeasurable attitudes; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four formless absorptions; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the five extrasensory powers; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four applications of mindfulness; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four correct exertions; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four supports for miraculous ability; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the five faculties; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the five powers; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the seven branches of enlightenment; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the noble eightfold path; [F.138.a] the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four truths of the noble ones; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the eight liberations; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the nine serial steps of meditative absorption; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the meditative stabilities; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the dhāraṇī gateways; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the ten powers of the tathāgatas; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four fearlessnesses; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four kinds of exact knowledge; [F.138.b] the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated great compassion; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they accumulate, through which they have refined, are refining, and will refine many buddhafi elds and through which they have brought to maturity, are bringing to maturity, and will bring to maturity many beings; the lord buddhas' aggregate of ethical discipline, aggregate of meditative stability, aggregate of wisdom, aggregate of liberation, aggregate of the knowledge and seeing of liberation, knowledge of an all-aspect omniscient one, state where the attributes do not decline, and abiding in perpetual equanimity; the uncontaminated roots of virtue of those śrāvakas; those roots of virtue on account of which one⁷⁸⁴ has rejoiced, is rejoicing, and will rejoice in them, and on account of which the pratyekabuddhas have been, are being, and will be prophesied by those lord buddhas; and the roots of virtue that have been generated, are being generated, and will be generated by gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas, and you should dedicate these to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.'

24.37 "When a dedication is made with a dedication by way of a mental image and an apprehended object in that manner, it becomes poisonous. It is like that poisonous food [F.139.a] in the illustration. For those who have a perception of an apprehended object there is no dedication. And why? Because that apprehending is poisonous, has a causal sign, has causes, and has conditions. If they dedicate in such a manner, they will deprecate the tathāgatas, will not speak as the tathāgatas have spoken, and will also not speak in accord with the Dharma."

24.38 "So how, then, should sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas rejoice in and dedicate the roots of virtue of the lord buddhas of the past, future, and present? How, when they rejoice in all those roots of virtue, as many as there are, that the lord buddhas of the past, future, and present, from the time they first set their mind on enlightenment, up to fully awakening to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, up to when they passed into final nirvāṇa in the expanse of nirvāṇa where no aggregates are left behind, and up until the disappearance of the good

Dharma have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of wisdom; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of meditative concentration; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of perseverance; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of tolerance; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, [F.139.b] are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of ethical discipline; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having practiced the perfection of generosity; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four meditative concentrations; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four immeasurable attitudes; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four formless absorptions; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the five extrasensory powers; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four applications of mindfulness; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four correct exertions; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four supports for miraculous ability; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the five faculties; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, [F.140.a] that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the five powers; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the seven branches of enlightenment; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the noble eightfold path; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four truths of the noble ones; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the eight liberations; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the nine serial steps of meditative absorption; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the meditative stabilities; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, [F.140.b] are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the dhāraṇī gateways; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the ten powers of the tathāgatas; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four fearlessnesses; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated the four kinds of exact knowledge; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated great compassion; and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they have accumulated, are accumulating, and will accumulate from having cultivated and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; the roots of virtue, as many as there are, that they accumulate, through which they have refined, are refining, and will refine many buddhafi elds and through which they have brought to maturity, are bringing to maturity, and will bring to maturity many beings; the lord buddhas' aggregate of ethical discipline, aggregate of meditative stability, aggregate of wisdom, aggregate of liberation, aggregate of the knowledge and seeing of liberation, knowledge of an all-aspect omniscient one, state where the attributes do not decline, and abiding in perpetual equanimity; the uncontaminated roots of virtue of those śrāvakas; those roots of virtue [F.141.a] on account of which one has rejoiced, is rejoicing, and will rejoice in them, and on account of which the pratyekabuddhas have been, are being, and will be prophesied by those lord buddhas; and the roots of virtue that have been generated, are being generated, and will be generated by gods, nāgas, yakṣas, gandharvas, asuras, garuḍas, kinnaras, and mahoragas, and when they dedicate them, should they not train, thinking that they will dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment?"

24.39 "Maitreya," said Subhūti, "here sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas practicing the perfection of wisdom with the wish not to deprecate the tathāgatas should dedicate in the following manner: 'I should rejoice in those roots of virtue just as those tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas comprehend, know, and understand, with the unsurpassed transcendental knowledge of the buddhas, their natural conditions,⁷⁸⁵ essential natures, and defining characteristics, on account of which reality of phenomena they exist. Just as those lord buddhas comprehend them, I will dedicate them to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.' It is in this manner that the sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas should dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. If they dedicate in such a manner, they will not deprecate the tathāgatas, will speak as the tathāgatas have spoken, and will also speak in accord with the Dharma. Practicing in that manner, that dedication [F.141.b] of bodhisattva great beings will not be poisonous and will be a perfect nectar of immortality.

24.40 "Moreover, when sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas practice the perfection of wisdom, they should dedicate the roots of virtue in the following manner: Just as physical forms are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; feelings are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; perceptions are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; formative predispositions are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and consciousness is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; just as the eyes are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the ears are not included within the realm of desire, [F.142.a] the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the nose is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the tongue is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the body is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and the mental faculty is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; just as sights are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; sounds are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; odors are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, [F.142.b] and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; tastes are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; tangibles are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and mental phenomena are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; just as visual consciousness is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; auditory consciousness is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; olfactory consciousness is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; gustatory consciousness is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, [F.143.a] or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; tactile consciousness is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and mental consciousness is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; just as visually compounded sensory contact is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; aurally compounded sensory contact is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; nasally compounded sensory contact is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; lingually compounded sensory contact is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; [F.143.b] corporeally compounded sensory contact is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and mentally compounded sensory contact is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; just as feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, [F.144.a] nor future, nor present; and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; just as the earth element is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the water element is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the fire element is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the wind element is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the space element is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and the consciousness element is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, [F.144.b] nor present; just as ignorance is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; formative predispositions are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; consciousness is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; name and form are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the six sense fields are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; sensory contact is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; sensation is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; [F.145.a] craving is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; grasping is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the rebirth process is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; birth is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and aging and death are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; just as the perfection of wisdom is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the perfection of meditative concentration is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; [F.145.b] the perfection of perseverance is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the perfection of tolerance is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the perfection of ethical discipline is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and the perfection of generosity is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; [B11] just as the emptiness of internal phenomena is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of external phenomena is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or [F.146.a] the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of emptiness is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of great extent is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of ultimate reality is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of the unlimited is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or [F.146.b] the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of nonexclusion is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of inherent nature is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of all phenomena is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of nonentities is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness of essential nature is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, [F.147.a] and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; just as the applications of mindfulness are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the correct exertions are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the supports for miraculous ability are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the faculties are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the powers are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the branches of enlightenment are not included within the realm of desire, [F.147.b] the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and the noble eightfold path is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; just as the truths of the noble ones are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the meditative concentrations are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the immeasurable attitudes are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the formless absorptions are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the eight liberations are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, [F.148.a] nor future, nor present; the nine serial steps of meditative absorption are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the extrasensory powers are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the meditative stabilities are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the dhāraṇī gateways are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the ten powers of the tathāgatas are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the four fearlessnesses are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, [F.148.b] and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the four kinds of exact knowledge are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; great compassion is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; just as the real nature is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the unmistaken real nature is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the inalienable real nature is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the reality of phenomena is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the realm of phenomena is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, [F.149.a] and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the abiding nature of reality is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the maturity of phenomena is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the very limit of reality is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and the realm of the inconceivable is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and just as ethical discipline is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; meditative stability is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, [F.149.b] and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; wisdom is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; liberation is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; seeing the wisdom of liberation is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; all-aspect omniscience is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; the state where the attributes do not decline is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present; and abiding in perpetual equanimity is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, and that which is not included in them is neither past, nor future, nor present.

24.41 “If you ask why, it is because those are not included, [F.150.a] so the dedication also is not included, and that which is not included is neither past, nor future, nor present; the phenomenon to which the dedication is made, that phenomenon also is not included, and that which is not included is neither past, nor future, nor present; the phenomenon that is dedicating is also not included, and that which is not included is neither past, nor future, nor present; those lord buddhas are also not included, and that which is not included is neither past, nor future, nor present; and those roots of virtue of those lord buddhas are also not included, and that which is not included is neither past, nor future, nor present; those śrāvakas are also not included, so their roots of virtue are not included; and those pratyekabuddhas are also not included, so their roots of virtue are not included, and that which is not included is neither past, nor future, nor present.

24.42 “If, when bodhisattva great beings are practicing the perfection of wisdom, they know that those physical forms, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image [F.150.b] or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those feelings, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those perceptions, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those formative predispositions, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that consciousness, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it [F.151.a] cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those eyes, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those ears, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that nose, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that tongue, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, [F.151.b] nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that body, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that mental faculty, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those sights, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those sounds, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, [F.152.a] nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those odors, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those tastes, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those tangibles, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those mental phenomena, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither [F.152.b] past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that visual consciousness, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that auditory consciousness, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that olfactory consciousness, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no

essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that gustatory consciousness, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, [F.153.a] or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that tactile consciousness, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that mental consciousness, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that visually compounded sensory contact, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that aurally compounded sensory contact, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, [F.153.b] and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that nasally compounded sensory contact, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that lingually compounded sensory contact, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that corporeally compounded sensory contact, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or [F.154.a] by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that mentally compounded sensory contact, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, [F.154.b] are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that earth element, [F.155.a] which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that water element, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that fire element, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that wind element, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, [F.155.b] and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that space element, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that consciousness element, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no

essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that ignorance, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those formative predispositions, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you [F.156.a] ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that consciousness, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that name and form, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those six sense fields, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that sensory contact, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, [F.156.b] nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that sensation, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that craving, which is not included within the realm of

desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that grasping, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that rebirth process, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, [F.157.a] or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that birth, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that aging and death, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that perfection of generosity, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that perfection of ethical discipline, [F.157.b] which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that perfection of tolerance, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that perfection of perseverance, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that perfection of meditative concentration, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; [F.158.a] that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that perfection of wisdom, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that [B12] that emptiness of internal phenomena, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of external phenomena, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of external and internal phenomena, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, [F.158.b] or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of emptiness, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no

essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of great extent, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of ultimate reality, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity [F.159.a] cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of conditioned phenomena, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of the unlimited, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if [F.159.b] you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of nonexclusion, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a

nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of inherent nature, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of all phenomena, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or [F.160.a] by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of nonentities, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of essential nature, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, [F.160.b] is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those applications of mindfulness, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those correct exertions, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those supports for miraculous ability, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that [F.161.a] those faculties, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those powers, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those branches of enlightenment, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that noble eightfold path, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image [F.161.b] or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those truths of the noble ones, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those meditative concentrations, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those immeasurable attitudes, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those formless absorptions, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, [F.162.a] are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those eight liberations, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those nine serial steps of meditative absorption, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that [F.162.b] those extrasensory powers, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those meditative stabilities, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those dhāraṇī gateways, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those ten powers of the tathāgatas, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; [F.163.a] that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those four fearlessnesses, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those four kinds of exact knowledge, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that great compassion, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that those eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, which are not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, are neither past, [F.163.b] nor future, nor present, and they cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because they have no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that fruit of having entered the stream, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that fruit of once-returner, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that fruit of non-returner, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that arhatship, which [F.164.a] is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that individual enlightenment, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that knowledge of the aspects of the path, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that all-aspect omniscience, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no

essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—that that state where the attributes do not decline, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, [F.164.b] or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—and that that abiding in perpetual equanimity, which is not included within the realm of desire, the realm of form, or the realm of formlessness, is neither past, nor future, nor present, and it cannot be dedicated by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending—if you ask why, it is because it has no essential nature; that which is without an essential nature is a nonentity, and a nonentity cannot dedicate a nonentity—in this way the dedication of the bodhisattva great beings will not be poisonous and will be a perfect nectar of immortality.

24.43 “If the sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas dedicate those roots of virtuous action by way of a mental image or by way of apprehending, that is a dedication made in the wrong way, not a dedication that is perfect. A dedication made in the wrong way is not praised by the lord buddhas.

24.44 “Through that dedication that is not praised by the lord buddhas they do not complete the perfection of generosity, do not complete the perfection of ethical discipline, do not complete the perfection of tolerance, do not complete the perfection of perseverance, do not complete the perfection of meditative concentration, and do not complete the perfection of wisdom; they do not complete the emptiness of internal phenomena, [F.165.a] do not complete the emptiness of external phenomena, do not complete the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, do not complete the emptiness of emptiness, do not complete the emptiness of great extent, do not complete the emptiness of ultimate reality, do not complete the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, do not complete the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, do not complete the emptiness of the unlimited, do not complete the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, do not complete the emptiness of nonexclusion, do not complete the emptiness of inherent nature, do not complete the emptiness of all phenomena, do not complete the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, do not complete the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, do not complete the emptiness of nonentities, do not complete the emptiness of essential nature, and do not complete the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; they do not complete the applications of mindfulness, do not complete the correct exertions, do not complete the supports for miraculous ability, do not complete the faculties, do not complete the powers, do not complete the branches of enlightenment, and do not complete the noble eightfold path; and they do not complete the truths of the noble ones, do not complete the meditative concentrations, do not complete the immeasurable attitudes, do not complete the formless absorptions, [F.165.b] do not complete the eight liberations, do not complete the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, do not complete the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, do not complete the extrasensory powers, do not complete the meditative stabilities, do not complete the dhāraṇī gateways, do not complete the ten powers of the tathāgatas, do not complete the four fearlessnesses, do not complete the four kinds of exact knowledge, do not complete great compassion, and do not complete the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas.

24.45 “Those who do not complete the perfection of generosity, do not complete the perfection of ethical discipline, do not complete the perfection of tolerance, do not complete the perfection of perseverance, do not complete the perfection of meditative concentration, and do not complete the perfection of wisdom; who do not complete the emptiness of internal phenomena, do not complete the emptiness of external phenomena, do not complete the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, do not complete the emptiness of emptiness, do not complete the emptiness of great extent, do not complete the emptiness of ultimate reality, do not complete the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, do not complete the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, do not complete the emptiness of the unlimited, do not complete the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, do not complete the emptiness of nonexclusion, [F.166.a] do not complete the emptiness of inherent nature, do not complete the emptiness of all phenomena, do not complete the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, do not complete the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, do not complete the emptiness of nonentities, do not complete the emptiness of essential nature, and do not complete the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; who do not complete the applications of mindfulness, do not complete the correct exertions, do not complete the supports for miraculous ability, do not complete the faculties, do not complete the powers, do not complete the branches of enlightenment, and do not complete the noble eightfold path; and who do not complete the truths of the noble ones, do not complete the meditative concentrations, do not complete the immeasurable attitudes, do not complete the formless absorptions, do not complete the eight liberations, do not complete the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, do not complete the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, do not complete the extrasensory powers, do not complete the meditative stabilities, do not complete the dhāraṇī gateways, do not complete the ten powers of the tathāgatas, do not complete the four fearlessnesses, do not complete the four kinds of exact knowledge, do not complete [F.166.b] great compassion, and do not complete the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas will not refine a buddhafiield, and they will not bring beings to maturity. Those who have not refined a buddhafiield and brought beings to maturity will not fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment. If you ask why, it is because that dedication is poisonous.

24.46 “Moreover, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom they should make an investigation as follows: ‘Just as the lord buddhas comprehended that those roots of virtue should be dedicated based on this reality of phenomena, and that when the dedication has been made in that manner it will become the best of dedications, similarly I too should dedicate them, based on this reality of phenomena, to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.’ ”

24.47 Then the Blessed One said to the venerable Subhūti, “Excellent, excellent, Subhūti! Subhūti, you, as you thus teach the aggregate of dedication of bodhisattva great beings by way of signlessness, by way of not apprehending anything, by way of nonarising, by way of nonceasing, by way of nondefilement, by way of nonpurification, by way of the essential nature of nonentities, by way of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, by way of the emptiness of essential nature, by way of the realm of phenomena, by way of the real nature, and by way of the one and only real nature, you, Subhūti, do the work of the Teacher.

24.48 “Subhūti, if all those beings of this great billionfold world system were to obtain the paths of the ten virtuous actions, [F.167.a] were to obtain the four meditative concentrations, were to obtain the four immeasurable attitudes, were to obtain the four formless absorptions, and were to obtain the five extrasensory powers, do you think, Subhūti, the merit of those beings for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Subhūti.

24.49 “Subhūti,” continued the Blessed One, “the merit of those sons or daughters of good families who dedicate the roots of virtue with a dedication free from attachment increase even more greatly than theirs. So it is, Subhūti, that this dedication of the roots of virtue of those sons or daughters of good families is said to be supreme, is said to be the best, is said to be excellent, is said to be the foremost, is said to be the greatest, is said to be perfect, is said to be unsurpassed, and is said to be unexcelled.

24.50 “Moreover, Subhūti, if all those beings of this great billionfold world system, as many as there are, were to have become those who have entered the stream, were to have become once-returners, were to have become non-returners, or were to have become arhats, and if some sons or daughters of good families for the duration of their lives were to serve, respect, honor, and worship all of those who had entered the stream, had become once-returners, had become non-returners, and had become arhats with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health—do you think, Subhūti, that the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Subhūti.

24.51 “Subhūti,” continued the Blessed One, “the merit of those sons or daughters of good families who dedicate the roots of virtue with a dedication [F.167.b] free from attachment increase even more greatly than theirs. So it is, Subhūti, that this dedication of the roots of virtue of those sons or daughters of good families is said to be supreme, is said to be the best, is said to be excellent, is said to be the foremost, is said to be the greatest, is said to be perfect, is said to be unsurpassed, and is said to be unexcelled.

24.52 “Moreover, Subhūti, if all those beings of this great billionfold world system, as many as there are, were to have become pratyekabuddhas, and if some sons or daughters of good families were to serve, respect, honor, and worship them with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health—do you think, Subhūti, that the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

“Greatly, Blessed Lord! Greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Subhūti.

24.53 “Subhūti,” continued the Blessed One, “the merit of those sons or daughters of good families who dedicate the roots of virtue with a dedication free from attachment increases even more greatly than theirs. So it is, Subhūti, that this dedication of the roots of virtue of those sons or daughters of good families is said to be supreme, is said to be the best, is said to be excellent, is said to be the foremost, is said to be the greatest, is said to be perfect, is said to be unsurpassed, and is said to be unexcelled.

24.54 “Moreover, Subhūti, if all those beings of this great billionfold world system, as many as there are, were to have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and if all those beings, as many as there are, in the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, were, for eons as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to serve, respect, honor, and worship each of those bodhisattva great beings with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, [F.168.a] bedding, and medications owing to ill health—and were to serve them with all the

everyday necessities for happiness; and all those beings, as many as there are, in the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, were, for eons as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to serve, respect, honor, and worship each of those bodhisattva great beings with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health—and were to serve them with all the everyday necessities for happiness; and all those beings, as many as there are, in the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, were, for eons as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to serve, respect, honor, and worship each of those bodhisattva great beings with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health—and were to serve them with all the everyday necessities for happiness; and all those beings, as many as there are, in the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, were, for eons as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to serve, respect, honor, and worship each of those bodhisattva great beings with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications owing to ill health—and were to serve them with all the everyday necessities for happiness; and all those beings, as many as there are, in the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, were, for eons as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to serve, respect, honor, and worship each of those bodhisattva great beings [F.168.b] with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health—and were to serve them with all the everyday necessities for happiness; and all those beings, as many as there are, in the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, were, for eons as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to serve, respect, honor, and worship each of those bodhisattva great beings with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications owing to ill health—and were to serve them with all the everyday necessities for happiness; and all those beings, as many as there are, in the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, were, for eons as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to serve, respect, honor, and worship each of those bodhisattva great beings with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health—and were to serve them with all the everyday necessities for happiness; and all those beings, as many as there are, in the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, were, for eons as numerous as the grains of sand of the river

Gaṅgā, to serve, respect, honor, and worship each of those bodhisattva great beings with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health—and were to serve them with all the everyday necessities for happiness; and all those beings, as many as there are, in the world systems of the direction below, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, were, for eons as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to serve, respect, honor, and worship each of those bodhisattva great beings with many [F.169.a] of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health—and were to serve them with all the everyday necessities for happiness; and all those beings, as many as there are, in the world systems of the direction above, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, were, for eons as numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā, to serve, respect, honor, and worship each of those bodhisattva great beings with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health—and were to serve them with all the everyday necessities for happiness, do you think, Subhūti, that the merit of those sons or daughters of good families for that reason would have increased greatly?”

24.55 “Greatly, Blessed Lord, greatly, Well-Gone One!” replied Subhūti. “Blessed Lord, it would be immeasurable, incalculable, and boundless. Blessed Lord, it would be hard to exemplify that basis of meritorious action. Blessed Lord, if that basis of meritorious action were material, it could not be accommodated even in all the world systems, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā.”

24.56 The Blessed One then said, “Excellent, Subhūti, excellent! It is so, it is as you have said. Subhūti, the merit of those sons or daughters of good families who dedicate the roots of virtue with a dedication free from attachment increases even more greatly than theirs. So it is, Subhūti, that this dedication of the roots of virtue of those sons or daughters of good families is said to be supreme, is said to be the best, is said to be excellent, is said to be the foremost, is said to be the greatest, is said to be perfect, is said to be unsurpassed, and is said to be unexcelled.

24.57 “Subhūti, that earlier root of virtue would come nowhere near [F.169.b] even a hundredth part, would come nowhere near even a thousandth part, would come nowhere near even a hundred thousandth part, would come nowhere near even a hundred ten millionth part, would come nowhere near even a thousand ten millionth part, would come nowhere near even a hundred thousand ten millionth part, would come nowhere near even a hundred thousand ten million billionth part, and would not stand up to any other number, fraction, calculation, example, or comparison of this dedication that is free from attachment.

24.58 “If you ask why, it is because those sons or daughters of good families who have come into possession of the path of the ten virtuous actions, and who have come into possession of the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers, have a perception that apprehends something. Similarly, those sons or daughters of good families who serve, respect, honor, and worship all the beings who have entered the stream, all the beings who have become once-returners, all the beings who have become non-returners, all the beings who have become arhats, and all the beings who have become pratyekabuddhas with many of the basic necessities—robes, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health—have a perception that apprehends something.”

24.59 Then the Four Great Kings, along with twenty thousand gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm, with their palms together, joyously paid homage to the Blessed One, and said, “O Blessed Lord, bodhisattva great beings who are skilled in means in that manner dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by way of not apprehending anything, by way of nonattachment, by way of signlessness, and by way of nonaction. That dedication that thus, by whatever means, avoids becoming dual and avoids [F.170.a] becoming nondual is the extremely great dedication of bodhisattva great beings.”

24.60 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, along with many thousands of gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm, held up divine flowers, divine perfumes, divine garlands, divine incenses, divine unguents, divine powders, divine robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, and divine flags, and while playing various divine musical instruments, sprinkled, scattered, and showered over the Blessed One those divine flowers, divine perfumes, divine garlands, divine incenses, divine unguents, divine powders, divine robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, and divine flags, and spoke these words: “Blessed Lord, bodhisattva great beings who are skilled in means in that manner dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by way of not apprehending anything, by way of signlessness, and by way of nonaction. That dedication that thus, by whatever means, avoids becoming dual and avoids becoming nondual is the extremely great dedication of bodhisattva great beings.” [B13]

24.61 Then the god Suyāma, along with many thousands of gods of the Yāma realm, held up divine flowers, divine perfumes, divine garlands, divine incenses, divine unguents, divine powders, divine robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, and divine flags, [F.170.b] and while playing various divine musical instruments, sprinkled, scattered, and showered over the Blessed One those divine flowers, divine perfumes, divine garlands, divine incenses, divine unguents, divine powders, divine robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, and divine flags, and spoke these words: “Blessed Lord, bodhisattva great beings who are skilled in means in that manner dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by way of not apprehending anything, by way of signlessness, and by way of nonaction. That dedication that thus, by whatever means, avoids becoming dual and avoids becoming nondual is the extremely great dedication of bodhisattva great beings.”

24.62 Then the god Saṃtuṣita, along with many thousands of gods of the Tuṣita realm, held up divine flowers, divine perfumes, divine garlands, divine incenses, divine unguents, divine powders, divine robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, and divine flags, and while playing various divine musical instruments, sprinkled, scattered, and showered over the Blessed One those divine flowers, divine perfumes, divine garlands, divine incenses, divine unguents, divine powders, divine robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, and divine flags, and spoke these words: “Blessed Lord, bodhisattva great beings who are skilled in means in that manner dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, complete enlightenment [F.171.a] by way of not apprehending anything, by way of signlessness, and by way of nonaction. That dedication that thus, by whatever means, avoids becoming dual and avoids becoming nondual is the extremely great dedication of bodhisattva great beings.”

24.63 Then the god Sunirmānarati, along with many thousands of gods of the Nirmānarati realm, held up divine flowers, divine perfumes, divine garlands, divine incenses, divine unguents, divine powders, divine robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, and divine flags, and while playing various divine musical instruments, sprinkled, scattered, and showered over the Blessed One those divine flowers, divine perfumes, divine garlands, divine incenses, divine unguents, divine powders, divine robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, and divine flags, and spoke these words: “Blessed Lord, bodhisattva great beings who are skilled in means in that manner dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by way of not apprehending anything, by way of signlessness, and by way of nonaction. That dedication that thus, by whatever means, avoids becoming dual and avoids becoming nondual is the extremely great dedication of bodhisattva great beings.”

24.64 Then the god Vaśavartin, along with many thousands of gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realm, held up divine flowers, divine perfumes, divine garlands, divine incenses, divine unguents, divine powders, divine robes, [F.171.b] divine parasols, divine victory banners, and divine flags, and while playing various divine musical instruments, sprinkled, scattered, and showered over the Blessed One those divine flowers, divine perfumes, divine garlands, divine incenses, divine unguents, divine powders, divine robes, divine parasols, divine victory banners, and divine flags, and spoke these words: “Blessed Lord, bodhisattva great beings who are skilled in means in that manner dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by way of not apprehending anything, by way of signlessness, and by way of nonaction. That dedication that thus, by whatever means, avoids becoming dual and avoids becoming nondual is the extremely great dedication of bodhisattva great beings.”

24.65 Then many ten million billion gods of the Brahmakāyika realm arrived at that place where the Blessed One was, prostrated with the crowns of their heads at the feet of the Blessed One, and giving voice to the following words, loudly proclaimed: “Blessed Lord, how wonderful it is that those bodhisattva great beings who are assisted by the perfection of wisdom and skill in means outshine the roots of virtue of the aforementioned sons and daughters of good families who are without skillful means and who are engaged in apprehending.”

24.66 Then many hundred thousand ten million billion gods of the Brahmāpurohita realm arrived at that place where the Blessed One was, prostrated with the crowns of their heads at the feet of the Blessed One, and giving voice to the following words, loudly proclaimed: “Blessed Lord, how wonderful it is that those bodhisattva great beings who are assisted by the perfection of wisdom and skill in means [F.172.a] outshine the roots of virtue of the aforementioned sons and daughters of good families who are without skillful means and who are engaged in apprehending.”

24.67 Then many hundred thousand ten million billion gods of the Śubhakarṣṇa realm arrived at that place where the Blessed One was, prostrated with the crowns of their heads at the feet of the Blessed One, and giving voice to the following words, loudly proclaimed: “Blessed Lord, how wonderful it is that those bodhisattva great beings who are assisted by the perfection of wisdom and skill in means outshine the roots of virtue of the aforementioned sons and daughters of good families who are without skillful means and who are engaged in apprehending.”

24.68 Then many hundred thousand ten million billion gods of the Vṛhatphala realm arrived at that place where the Blessed One was, prostrated with the crowns of their heads at the feet of the Blessed One, and giving voice to the following words, loudly proclaimed: “Blessed Lord, how wonderful it is that those bodhisattva great beings who are assisted by the perfection of wisdom and skill in means outshine the roots of virtue of the aforementioned sons and daughters of good families who are without skillful means and who are engaged in apprehending.”

24.69 Then many hundred thousand ten million billion gods of the Śuddhāvāsa realms arrived at that place where the Blessed One was, prostrated with the crowns of their heads at the feet of the Blessed One, and giving voice to the following words, loudly proclaimed: “Blessed Lord, how wonderful it is that those bodhisattva great beings who are assisted by the perfection of wisdom and skill in means outshine the roots of virtue of the aforementioned sons of good families and [F.172.b] daughters of good families who are without skillful means and who are engaged in apprehending.”

24.70 Then the Blessed One said to the gods of the Cāturmahārājika realm; to the gods of the Trayastriṃśa realm, the gods of the Yāma, the gods of the Tuṣita, the gods of the Nirmāṇarati, and the gods of the Paranirmitavaśavartin realms; and the gods of the Brahmakāyika, the gods of the Brahmāpurohita, the gods of the Śubhakarṣna, the gods of the Vṛhatphala realms, and to the gods of the Śuddhāvāsa realms, “Gods, if all those beings of this great billionfold world system, as many as there are, were to have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, and if they were to have gathered together into one, and rejoiced in, the perfection of generosity, or perfection of ethical discipline, or perfection of tolerance, or perfection of perseverance, or perfection of meditative concentration, or perfection of wisdom; or the generosity, or ethical discipline, or tolerance, or perseverance, or meditative concentration, or wisdom; or the aggregate of ethical discipline, or aggregate of meditative stability, or aggregate of wisdom, or aggregate of liberation, or aggregate of knowledge and seeing of liberation of those past, future, and present tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the ten directions, along with their śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas—of all those lord buddhas from the time they first set their mind on enlightenment, up to for as long as their Dharma remains, of those śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, and of beings—or in any of the other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas, whatever they might be, and having rejoiced in that manner, were to dedicate these to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by way of apprehending anything; and were a son or daughter of a good family [F.173.a] who has set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete awakening, who has gathered together into one, and rejoiced with the rejoicing that is excellent, with the rejoicing that is foremost, best, supreme, perfect, greatest, unsurpassed, unexcelled, unequaled, and equal to the unequaled in the perfection of generosity, or perfection of ethical discipline, or perfection of tolerance, or perfection of perseverance, or perfection of meditative concentration, or perfection of wisdom; or the emptiness of internal phenomena, or the emptiness of external phenomena, or the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, or the emptiness of emptiness, or the emptiness of great extent, or the emptiness of ultimate reality, or the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, or the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, or the emptiness of the unlimited, or the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, or the emptiness of nonexclusion, or the emptiness of inherent nature, or the emptiness of all phenomena, or the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, or the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, or the emptiness of nonentities, or the emptiness of essential nature, or the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; or the applications of mindfulness, or the correct exertions, or the supports for miraculous ability, or the faculties, or the powers, or the branches of enlightenment, or the noble eightfold path; or the truths of the noble ones, or the meditative concentrations, or the immeasurable attitudes, or the formless absorptions, or the liberations, or the serial steps of meditative absorption, or the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, or the extrasensory powers, or the meditative stabilities, or the dhāraṇī gateways, or the ten powers of the tathāgatas, or the four fearlessnesses, or the four kinds of exact knowledge, or great loving kindness, or great compassion, [F.173.b] or the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; or the fruit of having entered the stream, or the fruit of once-returner, or the fruit of non-returner, or arhatship, or individual enlightenment, or the knowledge of the aspects of the path, or all-aspect omniscience of those past, future, and present those lord buddhas along with their śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, or in any of the other immeasurable attributes of the buddhas, whatever they might be, and having rejoiced in them were to dedicate those roots of virtuous action associated with rejoicing to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment by way of not apprehending anything, by way of nonduality, by way of signlessness, by way of nonattachment, and by way of nonaction, that son or daughter of good family would increase the merit even more.

24.71 “That earlier root of virtue would come nowhere near even a hundredth part; would come nowhere near even a thousandth part, a hundred thousandth part, a ten millionth part, a hundred ten millionth part, a thousand ten millionth part, a hundred thousand ten millionth part, or even a hundred thousand ten million billionth part; and would not stand up to any other number, fraction, calculation, example, or comparison of this dedication of the roots of virtue. This dedication of bodhisattva great beings that is made without apprehending anything is said to be excellent, is said to be the foremost, is said to be the best, is said to be supreme, is said to be perfect, is said to be the greatest, is said to be unsurpassed, is said to be unexcelled, is said to be unequaled, and is said to be equal to the unequaled.”

- 24.72 Then the venerable Subhūti [F.174.a] asked the Blessed One, “When the Blessed Lord says that the sons or daughters of good families, having gathered together, compressed into one, and taken the measure of all those roots of virtue, rejoice in them with the rejoicing that is supreme, rejoice in them with the rejoicing that is foremost, best, perfect, greatest, unsurpassed, unexcelled, unequaled, and equal to the unequaled, Blessed Lord, why is it the best rejoicing? Why is it the rejoicing that is foremost, best, perfect, greatest, unsurpassed, unexcelled, unequaled, and equal to the unequaled?”
- 24.73 The Blessed One replied, “When sons or daughters of good families neither accept nor reject, neither give rise to conceit about nor feel humbled by,⁷⁸⁶ and neither apprehend nor do not apprehend those roots of virtue of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas along with their communities of śrāvakas, those pratyekabuddhas, and those beings of the past, future, and present, and think that in them a phenomenon does not arise, does not cease, is not defiled, is not purified, does not decrease, does not increase, does not come, does not go, and does not become an aggregate, they therefore say, for this reason, ‘I will rejoice just like the real nature of past, future, and present phenomena is, and just as the unmistakable real nature, the one and only real nature, the reality of phenomena, the abiding nature of phenomena, and the maturity of phenomena is. [F.174.b] I will rejoice like that, and having rejoiced, I will dedicate to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.’ That rejoicing of bodhisattva great beings when they dedicate in that manner is the best. Those rejoicings are the foremost, the best, excellent, perfect, the greatest, unsurpassed, unexcelled, unequaled, and equal to the unequaled.
- 24.74 “Subhūti, all other rejoicings other than this one come nowhere near even a hundredth part, come nowhere near even a thousandth part, a hundred thousandth part, a ten millionth part, a hundred ten millionth part, a thousand ten millionth part, a hundred thousand ten millionth part, or even a hundred thousand ten million billionth part of this rejoicing, so this rejoicing is said to be supreme in comparison to the rejoicings other than that, and is said to be the foremost, is said to be the best, is said to be excellent, is said to be perfect, is said to be the greatest, is said to be unsurpassed, is said to be unexcelled, is said to be unequaled, and is said to be equal to the unequaled.
- 24.75 “Moreover, Subhūti, when sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas wish to rejoice in the roots of virtue associated with the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom, and the aggregates of ethical discipline, meditative stability, wisdom, liberation, and knowledge and seeing of liberation, as many as there are, of the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas of the past, future, and present, along with their śrāvakas and pratyekabuddhas, from the time they first set their mind on enlightenment, up to for as long as their Dharma remains, as well as any of the other [F.175.a] immeasurable attributes of the buddhas, whatever they might be, and the roots of virtue, as many as there are, of beings—in all of those—then they should rejoice as follows: ‘Just like liberation are physical forms. Just like liberation are feelings. Just like liberation are perceptions. Just like liberation are formative predispositions. Just like liberation is consciousness. Just like liberation are the sensory elements. Just like liberation are the sense fields. Just like liberation are the links of dependent origination. Just like liberation is the perfection of generosity. Just like liberation is the perfection of ethical discipline. Just like liberation is the perfection of tolerance. Just like liberation is the perfection of perseverance. Just like liberation is the perfection of meditative concentration. Just like liberation is the perfection of wisdom. Just like liberation is the emptiness of internal phenomena. Just like liberation is the emptiness of external phenomena. Just like liberation is the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. Just like liberation is the emptiness of emptiness. Just like liberation is the emptiness of great extent. Just like liberation is the emptiness of ultimate reality. Just like liberation is the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. Just like liberation is the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. Just like liberation is the emptiness of the unlimited. Just like liberation is the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. Just like liberation is the emptiness of nonexclusion. Just like liberation is the emptiness of inherent nature. Just like [F.175.b] liberation is the emptiness of all phenomena. Just like liberation is the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. Just like liberation is the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. Just like liberation is the emptiness of nonentities. Just like liberation is the emptiness of essential nature. Just like liberation is the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. Just like liberation are the applications of mindfulness. Just like liberation are the correct exertions. Just like liberation are the supports for miraculous ability. Just like liberation are the faculties. Just like liberation are the powers. Just like liberation are the branches of enlightenment. Just like liberation is the noble eightfold path. Just like liberation are the four truths of the noble ones. Just like liberation are the four meditative concentrations. Just like liberation are the four immeasurable attitudes. Just like liberation are the four formless absorptions. Just like liberation are the eight liberations. Just like liberation are the nine serial steps of meditative absorption. Just like liberation are the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. Just like liberation are the extrasensory powers. Just like liberation are the meditative stabilities. Just like liberation are the dhāraṇī gateways. Just like liberation are the ten powers of the tathāgatas. Just like liberation are the four fearlessnesses. Just like liberation are the four kinds of exact knowledge. [F.176.a] Just like liberation is great compassion. Just like liberation are the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas. Just like liberation is the knowledge and seeing of liberation. Just like liberation is the aggregate of the knowledge and seeing of liberation. Just like liberation is belief.⁷⁸⁷ Just like liberation is rejoicing. Just like liberation are the attributes of the past, future, and present. Just like liberation are the lord buddhas. Just like liberation is the final nirvāṇa of those lord buddhas. Just like liberation are the śrāvakas of those lord buddhas. Just like liberation is the final nirvāṇa of those śrāvakas. Just like liberation are the pratyekabuddhas. Just like liberation is the final nirvāṇa of those pratyekabuddhas. Just like liberation is the reality of phenomena as it pertains to those lord buddhas. Just like liberation is the reality of phenomena as it pertains to those śrāvakas. Just like liberation is the reality of phenomena as it pertains to pratyekabuddhas. And just like liberation is the reality of phenomena as it pertains to all phenomena.’ Thus, just like the reality of phenomena as it pertains to phenomena that are not attached, are not bound, are not liberated, are not fixated, are not defiled, and are not purified, and the reality of phenomena as it pertains to phenomena that are have not arisen, have not completely arisen, have not originated, and are unceasing, they dedicate to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, based on a state that does not change places and is not destroyed.

24.76 “Subhūti, this is the rejoicing of bodhisattva great beings [F.176.b] that is supreme. This is the rejoicing that is foremost, the best, excellent, perfect, the greatest, unsurpassed, unexcelled, unequaled, and equal to the unequaled. Subhūti, bodhisattva great beings who possess this rejoicing will swiftly fully awaken to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

24.77 “Moreover, Subhūti, there are the lord buddhas with their communities of śrāvakas who are presently residing and maintaining themselves, as many as there are, teaching the Dharma in the world systems of the eastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; the lord buddhas with their communities of śrāvakas who are presently residing and maintaining themselves, as many as there are, teaching the Dharma in the world systems of the southern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; the lord buddhas with their communities of śrāvakas who are presently residing and maintaining themselves, as many as there are, teaching the Dharma in the world systems of the western direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; the lord buddhas with their communities of śrāvakas who are presently residing and maintaining themselves, as many as there are, teaching the Dharma in the world systems of the northern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; the lord buddhas with their communities of śrāvakas who are presently residing and maintaining themselves, as many as there are, teaching the Dharma in the world systems of the intermediate northeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; the lord buddhas with their communities of śrāvakas who are presently residing and maintaining themselves, as many as there are, teaching the Dharma in the world systems of the intermediate southeastern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; the lord buddhas with their communities of śrāvakas who are presently residing and maintaining themselves, as many as there are, teaching the Dharma in the world systems of the intermediate southwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; the lord buddhas with their communities of śrāvakas [F.177.a] who are presently residing and maintaining themselves, as many as there are, teaching the Dharma in the world systems of the intermediate northwestern direction, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; the lord buddhas with their communities of śrāvakas who are presently residing and maintaining themselves, as many as there are, teaching the Dharma in the world systems of the direction below, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā; and the lord buddhas with their communities of śrāvakas who are presently residing and maintaining themselves, as many as there are, teaching the Dharma in the world systems of the direction above, numerous as the grains of sand of the river Gaṅgā. If any sons or daughters of good families in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas were, for the duration of their lives, to serve, respect, honor, and worship those tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas with their communities of śrāvakas with many of the basic necessities—food, alms, bedding, and medications used to treat ill health—and many comforts, and if, even after those lord buddhas had passed into final nirvāṇa, feeling an enthusiasm for⁷⁸⁸ serving, respecting, honoring, and worshiping their relics, day and night, with many flowers, garlands, incense, unguents, perfumes, powders, robes, parasols, victory banners, and flags, they were to undertake acts of generosity by way of apprehending it, maintain ethical discipline by way of apprehending it, cultivate tolerance by way of apprehending it, undertake perseverance by way of apprehending it, become absorbed in meditative concentration by way of apprehending it, and cultivate wisdom by way of apprehending it, [F.177.b] in comparison to them, when sons or daughters of good families who have set out for unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment practice the perfection of generosity without apprehending it, practice the perfection of ethical discipline without apprehending it, practice the perfection of tolerance without apprehending it, practice the perfection of perseverance without apprehending it, practice the perfection of meditative concentration without apprehending it, and practice the perfection of wisdom without apprehending it, if they dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment with skill in means, the accumulation of that earlier merit would come nowhere near even a hundredth part, would come nowhere near even a thousandth part, a hundred thousandth part, a hundred ten millionth part, a thousand ten millionth part, a hundred thousand ten millionth part, or a hundred thousand ten million billionth part, and would not stand up to any other number, fraction, calculation, example, or comparison of this accumulation of merit, this accumulation of roots of virtue. Just this dedication is said to be supreme, is said to be the foremost, is said to be the best, is said to be excellent, is said to be perfect, is said to be the greatest, is said to be unsurpassed, and is said to be unexcelled.

24.78 “Subhūti, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of generosity, practice the perfection of ethical discipline, practice the perfection of tolerance, practice the perfection of perseverance, practice the perfection of meditative concentration, and practice the perfection of wisdom without apprehending them, they should dedicate those roots of virtue to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment, with skill in means.”

24.79 This completes the twenty-fourth chapter, “Dedication,” from The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred [F.178.a] Thousand Lines.

CHAPTER 25

- 25.1 Then the venerable Śāradvatīputra said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom sheds light owing to its utter purity. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom is worthy of homage. Blessed Lord, I pay homage to the perfection of wisdom. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom is unsullied by all the three realms. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom dispels all the blindness of afflictive mental states and views, rendering visual distortion nonexistent.⁷⁸⁹ Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom, among the factors conducive to enlightenment, is supreme.⁷⁹⁰ Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom secures happiness so that all fears, enmity, and harms may be purified. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom brings light to all beings so that they might acquire the five eyes. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom teaches the path to those who are going astray so that they might turn back from the extremes. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom establishes all-aspect omniscience, so that all the afflicted mental states and their connecting propensities⁷⁹¹ might be abandoned. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom generates the attributes of the buddhas so it is the mother of bodhisattva great beings. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom, because of the emptiness of its intrinsic defining characteristics, has neither arisen nor ceased. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom is the antidote to saṃsāra because it is neither permanent, nor has it perished. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom is the protector⁷⁹² of beings without a protector [F.178.b] because it bestows the entirety of the precious doctrine. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom works as the ten powers⁷⁹³ because it cannot be crushed. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom turns the wheel of the Dharma, that turns three times in twelve ways,⁷⁹⁴ because it is subject to neither promulgation nor reversal. Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom displays the essential nature of all phenomena because of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

- 25.2 “Blessed Lord, how can bodhisattvas or those in the vehicle of the bodhisattvas, śrāvakas or those in the vehicle of the śrāvakas, pratyekabuddhas or those in the vehicle of the pratyekabuddhas dwell in the perfection of wisdom?”
- 25.3 “Śāradvatīputra,” replied the Blessed One, “they should dwell in the perfection of wisdom, just as they dwell with the Teacher. They should pay homage to the perfection of wisdom, just as they pay homage to the Teacher. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of wisdom is itself the Teacher. The Teacher is not one thing, and the perfection of wisdom another. The Teacher himself is the perfection of wisdom and the perfection of wisdom itself is the Teacher.
- 25.4 “This is why the tathāgatas, arhats, perfectly complete buddhas emerge,⁷⁹⁵ the bodhisattva great beings emerge, the pratyekabuddhas emerge, the arhats emerge, non-returners emerge, once-returners emerge, and those who have entered the stream emerge from the perfection of wisdom; and why the path of the ten virtuous actions, the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, and the five extrasensory powers; [F.179.a] the perfection of generosity, the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena, the emptiness of external phenomena, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, the emptiness of emptiness, the emptiness of great extent, the emptiness of ultimate reality, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, the emptiness of the unlimited, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, the emptiness of nonexclusion, the emptiness of inherent nature, the emptiness of all phenomena, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, the emptiness of nonentities, the emptiness of essential nature, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the four applications of mindfulness, the four correct exertions, the four supports for miraculous ability, the five faculties, the five powers, the seven branches of enlightenment, and the noble eightfold path; the four truths of the noble ones, the four meditative concentrations, the four immeasurable attitudes, the four formless absorptions, the eight liberations, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, the extrasensory powers, the meditative stabilities, the dhāraṇī gateways, the ten powers of the tathāgatas, the four fearlessnesses, the four kinds of exact knowledge, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and the fruit of having entered the stream, the fruit of once-returner, the fruit of non-returner, arhatship, individual enlightenment, the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and all-aspect omniscience emerge.” [F.179.b]

25.5 Thereupon, Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, thought, “From what has this question of the venerable monk Śāradvatīputra arisen? What is the reason?”

25.6 Venerable Śāradvatīputra then said to Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, “Kauśika, my question has arisen because bodhisattva great beings, assisted by the perfection of wisdom, with skillful means, having gathered together into one all those roots of virtue of those lord buddhas, from the time the lord buddhas of the past, future, and present first set their mind on enlightenment, up to for as long as their Dharma remains, along with their communities of śrāvakas, and of the pratyekabuddhas, and of all those beings, have dedicated them to unsurpassed, perfect, complete enlightenment.

25.7 “Kauśika, this perfection of wisdom of bodhisattva great beings outshines the perfection of generosity, and outshines the perfection of ethical discipline, the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, and the perfection of meditative concentration. To illustrate, Kauśika, it is just as those who are born blind, whether they number a hundred, a thousand, or a hundred thousand, cannot set out on the road without a guide. How could they ever travel to a city? In the same way, Kauśika, those five other perfections are like those who are born blind. If there is no perfection of wisdom, they will have no guide, so if they cannot even generate the path of enlightenment, how could they ever set out for the city of all-aspect omniscience? Kauśika, when the five perfections have been assisted by the perfection of wisdom, then they have eyes. When those five perfections are assisted by the perfection of wisdom they get the name perfection.”

25.8 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, said [F.180.a] to the venerable Śāradvatīputra, “Venerable monk Śāradvatīputra, you say, ‘When those five perfections are assisted by the perfection of wisdom they get the name perfection.’ Venerable monk Śāradvatīputra, in addition to that, the five perfections, when they are assisted by the perfection of generosity, also get the name perfection. The five perfections, when they are assisted by the perfection of ethical discipline, also get the name perfection. The five perfections, when they are assisted by the perfection of tolerance, also get the name perfection. The five perfections, when they are assisted by the perfection of perseverance, also get the name perfection. The five perfections, when they are assisted by the perfection of meditative concentration, also get the name perfection.”

- 25.9 “Kauśika,” he replied, “that is not so. That is not so. The five perfections do not get the name perfection because they are assisted by perfection of generosity. The five perfections do not get the name perfection because they are assisted by perfection of ethical discipline. The five perfections do not get the name perfection because they are assisted by perfection of tolerance. The five perfections do not get the name perfection because they are assisted by perfection of perseverance. The five perfections do not get the name perfection because they are assisted by perfection of meditative concentration. But the five perfections assisted by the perfection of wisdom do get the name perfection.
- 25.10 “Kauśika, bodhisattva great beings who dwell in the perfection of wisdom fully perfect the perfection of generosity, and fully perfect the perfection of ethical discipline, [F.180.b] the perfection of tolerance, the perfection of perseverance, the perfection of meditative concentration, and the perfection of wisdom. So it is, Kauśika, that the perfection of wisdom is said to be supreme, and is said to be the foremost, the best, excellent, perfect, the greatest, unsurpassed, and unexcelled.”
- 25.11 Then the venerable Śāradvatīputra asked the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, how should that perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved?”⁷⁹⁶
- 25.12 The Blessed One replied, “Śāradvatīputra, the perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that physical forms are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that feelings are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that perceptions are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that formative predispositions are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that consciousness is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the eyes are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the ears are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the nose is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the tongue is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the body is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the mental faculty is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved [F.181.a] in order that sights are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that sounds are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that odors are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that tastes are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that tangibles are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that mental phenomena are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that visual consciousness is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that auditory consciousness is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that olfactory consciousness is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that gustatory consciousness is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that tactile consciousness is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that mental consciousness is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that visually compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that aurally compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that nasally compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that lingually compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved. [F.181.b] The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that corporeally compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that mentally compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved.

25.13 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the earth element is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the water element is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the fire element is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the wind element is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the space element is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the consciousness element is not clearly achieved.

25.14 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that ignorance is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that formative predispositions [F.182.a] are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that consciousness is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that name and form are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the six sense fields are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that sensory contact is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that sensation is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that craving is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that grasping is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the rebirth process is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that birth is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that aging and death are not clearly achieved.

25.15 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the perfection of generosity is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the perfection of ethical discipline is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the perfection of tolerance is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the perfection of perseverance is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the perfection of meditative concentration is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the perfection of wisdom is not clearly achieved. [B14]

25.16 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved [F.182.b] in order that the emptiness of internal phenomena is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of external phenomena is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of emptiness is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of great extent is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of ultimate reality is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of the unlimited is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of nonexclusion is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of inherent nature is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of all phenomena is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics [F.183.a] is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of nonentities is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of essential nature is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not clearly achieved.

25.17 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the applications of mindfulness are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the correct exertions are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the supports for miraculous ability are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the faculties are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the powers are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the branches of enlightenment are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the path is not clearly achieved.

25.18 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the truths of the noble ones are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the meditative concentrations are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the immeasurable attitudes are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the formless absorptions [F.183.b] are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the liberations are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the serial steps of meditative absorption are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the extrasensory powers are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the meditative stabilities are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the dhāraṇī gateways are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the powers of the tathāgatas are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the fearlessnesses are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the kinds of exact knowledge are not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that great compassion is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the distinct qualities of the buddhas are not clearly achieved.

25.19 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that knowledge of all the dharma is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is not clearly achieved. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved in order [F.184.a] that all-aspect omniscience is not clearly achieved.

25.20 “In this way, the perfection of wisdom is clearly achieved in order that all phenomena are not clearly achieved.”

25.21 Śāriputra then asked, “Blessed Lord, how should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that physical forms are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that feelings are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that perceptions are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that formative predispositions are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that consciousness is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the eyes are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the ears are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the nose is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the tongue is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the body is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the mental faculty is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that sights are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that sounds are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that odors are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom [F.184.b] be clearly achieved in order that tastes are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that tangibles are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that mental phenomena are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that visual consciousness is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that auditory consciousness is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that olfactory consciousness is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that gustatory consciousness is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that tactile consciousness is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that mental consciousness is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that visually compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that aurally compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that nasally compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that lingually compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that corporeally compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom [F.185.a] be clearly achieved in order that mentally compounded sensory contact is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are not clearly achieved?

25.22 “How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the earth element is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the water element is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the fire element is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the wind element is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the space element is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the consciousness element is not clearly achieved?

25.23 “How should the perfection of wisdom [F.185.b] be clearly achieved in order that ignorance is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that formative predispositions are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that consciousness is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that name and form are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the six sense fields are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that sensory contact is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that sensation is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that craving is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that grasping is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the rebirth process is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that birth is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that aging and death are not clearly achieved?

25.24 “How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the perfection of generosity is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the perfection of ethical discipline is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the perfection of tolerance is not clearly achieved? [F.186.a] How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the perfection of perseverance is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the perfection of meditative concentration is not clearly achieved?

25.25 “How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of internal phenomena is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of external phenomena is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of emptiness is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of great extent is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of ultimate reality is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of the unlimited is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of nonexclusion is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly [F.186.b] achieved in order that the emptiness of inherent nature is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of all phenomena is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of nonentities is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of essential nature is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is not clearly achieved.

25.26 “How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the applications of mindfulness are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the correct exertions are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the supports for miraculous ability are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the faculties are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the powers are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the branches of enlightenment are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly [F.187.a] achieved in order that the path is not clearly achieved?

25.27 “How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the truths of the noble ones are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the meditative concentrations are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the immeasurable attitudes are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the formless absorptions are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the liberations are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the serial steps of meditative absorption are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the extrasensory powers are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the meditative stabilities are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the dhāraṇī gateways are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the ten powers of the tathāgatas are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the four fearlessnesses are not clearly achieved? How should [F.187.b] the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the four kinds of exact knowledge are not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that great compassion is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas are not clearly achieved?

25.28 “How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the fruit of having entered the stream is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the fruit of once-returner is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the fruit of non-returner is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that arhatship is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that individual enlightenment is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that the knowledge of the aspects of the path is not clearly achieved? How should the perfection of wisdom be clearly achieved in order that all-aspect omniscience is not clearly achieved?"

25.29 The Blessed One replied, "The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of physical forms. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of physical forms. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of physical forms. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of physical forms. [F.188.a] The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of physical forms.

25.30 "The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of feelings. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of feelings. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of feelings. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of feelings. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of feelings.

25.31 "The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of perceptions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of perceptions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of perceptions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of perceptions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of perceptions.

25.32 "The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of formative predispositions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of formative predispositions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of formative predispositions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of formative predispositions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of formative predispositions.

25.33 "The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of consciousness. [F.188.b] The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of consciousness.

- 25.34 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the eyes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the eyes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the eyes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the eyes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the eyes.
- 25.35 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the ears. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the ears. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the ears. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the ears. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the ears.
- 25.36 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the nose. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the nose. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the nose. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the nose. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the nose.
- 25.37 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the tongue. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the tongue. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the tongue. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the tongue. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the tongue.
- 25.38 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as [F.189.a] the nonconditioning of the body. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the body. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the body. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the body. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the body.
- 25.39 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the mental faculty. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the mental faculty. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the mental faculty.

The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the mental faculty. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the mental faculty.

25.40 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of sights. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of sights. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of sights. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of sights. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of sights.

25.41 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of sounds. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of sounds. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of sounds. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of sounds. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of sounds.

25.42 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of odors. The perfection of wisdom [F.189.b] should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of odors. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of odors. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of odors. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of odors.

25.43 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of tastes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of tastes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of tastes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of tastes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of tastes.

25.44 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of tangibles. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of tangibles. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of tangibles. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of tangibles. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of tangibles.

25.45 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of mental phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of mental phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of mental phenomena.

The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of mental phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of mental phenomena.

25.46 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of visual consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as [F.190.a] the nonarising of visual consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of visual consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of visual consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of visual consciousness.

25.47 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of auditory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of auditory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of auditory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of auditory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of auditory consciousness.

25.48 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of olfactory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of olfactory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of olfactory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of olfactory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of olfactory consciousness.

25.49 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of gustatory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of gustatory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of gustatory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom [F.190.b] should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of gustatory consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of gustatory consciousness.

25.50 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of tactile consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of tactile consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of tactile consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of tactile consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of tactile consciousness.

- 25.51 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of mental consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of mental consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of mental consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of mental consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of mental consciousness.
- 25.52 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of visually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of visually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of visually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of visually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of visually compounded sensory contact.
- 25.53 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as [F.191.a] the nonconditioning of aurally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of aurally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of aurally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of aurally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of aurally compounded sensory contact.
- 25.54 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of nasally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of nasally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of nasally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of nasally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of nasally compounded sensory contact.
- 25.55 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of lingually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of lingually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of lingually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of lingually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of lingually compounded sensory contact.

25.56 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of corporeally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of corporeally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of [F.191.b] corporeally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of corporeally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of corporeally compounded sensory contact.

25.57 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of mentally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of mentally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of mentally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of mentally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of mentally compounded sensory contact.

25.58 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact.

25.59 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved [F.192.a] as the nonapprehension of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact.

- 25.60 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact.
- 25.61 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact.
- 25.62 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. [F.192.b] The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact.
- 25.63 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact.

25.64 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the earth element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the earth element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the earth element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the earth element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the earth element.

25.65 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the water element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the water element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the water element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the water element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of [F.193.a] the water element.

25.66 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the fire element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the fire element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the fire element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the fire element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the fire element.

25.67 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the wind element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the wind element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the wind element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the wind element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the wind element.

25.68 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the space element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the space element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the space element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the space element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the space element.

25.69 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the consciousness element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the consciousness element.

The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the consciousness element. The perfection of wisdom [F.193.b] should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the consciousness element. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the consciousness element.

25.70 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of ignorance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of ignorance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of ignorance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of ignorance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of ignorance.

25.71 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of formative predispositions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of formative predispositions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of formative predispositions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of formative predispositions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of formative predispositions.

25.72 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of consciousness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of consciousness.

25.73 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of name and form. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of name and form. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly [F.194.a] achieved as the nonceasing of name and form. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of name and form. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of name and form.

25.74 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the six sense fields. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the six sense fields. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the six sense fields. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the six sense fields. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the six sense fields.

- 25.75 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of sensory contact. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of sensory contact.
- 25.76 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of sensation. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of sensation. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of sensation. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of sensation. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of sensation.
- 25.77 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of craving. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved [F.194.b] as the nonarising of craving. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of craving. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of craving. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of craving.
- 25.78 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of grasping. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of grasping. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of grasping. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of grasping. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of grasping.
- 25.79 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the rebirth process. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the rebirth process. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the rebirth process. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the rebirth process. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the rebirth process.
- 25.80 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of birth. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of birth. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of birth. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of birth. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of birth.

- 25.81 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of aging and death. The perfection of wisdom [F.195.a] should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of aging and death. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of aging and death. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of aging and death. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of aging and death.
- 25.82 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the perfection of generosity. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the perfection of generosity. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the perfection of generosity. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the perfection of generosity. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the perfection of generosity.
- 25.83 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the perfection of ethical discipline. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the perfection of ethical discipline. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the perfection of ethical discipline. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the perfection of ethical discipline. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the perfection of ethical discipline.
- 25.84 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the perfection of tolerance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the perfection of tolerance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as [F.195.b] the nonceasing of the perfection of tolerance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the perfection of tolerance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the perfection of tolerance.
- 25.85 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the perfection of perseverance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the perfection of perseverance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the perfection of perseverance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the perfection of perseverance. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the perfection of perseverance.

- 25.86 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the perfection of meditative concentration. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the perfection of meditative concentration. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the perfection of meditative concentration. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the perfection of meditative concentration. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the perfection of meditative concentration. [B15]
- 25.87 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of internal phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of internal phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of internal phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of internal phenomena. [F.196.a] The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of internal phenomena.
- 25.88 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of external phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of external phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of external phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of external phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of external phenomena.
- 25.89 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of external and internal phenomena.
- 25.90 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of emptiness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of emptiness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of emptiness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of emptiness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of emptiness.

25.91 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of great extent. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of [F.196.b] the emptiness of great extent. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of great extent. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of great extent. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of great extent.

25.92 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of ultimate reality. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of ultimate reality. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of ultimate reality. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of ultimate reality. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of ultimate reality.

25.93 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of conditioned phenomena.

25.94 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. The perfection of wisdom [F.197.a] should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena.

25.95 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of the unlimited. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of the unlimited. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the

nonceasing of the emptiness of the unlimited. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of the unlimited. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of the unlimited.

25.96 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end.

25.97 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of nonexclusion. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of nonexclusion. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of nonexclusion. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of nonexclusion. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of nonexclusion.

25.98 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as [F.197.b] the nonconditioning of the emptiness of inherent nature. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of inherent nature. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of inherent nature. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of inherent nature. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of inherent nature.

25.99 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of all phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of all phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of all phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of all phenomena. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of all phenomena.

25.100 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the

emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics.

25.101 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. [F.198.a] The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended.

25.102 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of nonentities. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of nonentities. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of nonentities. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of nonentities. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of nonentities.

25.103 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of essential nature. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of essential nature. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of essential nature. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of essential nature. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of essential nature.

25.104 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

- 25.105 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the applications of mindfulness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the applications of mindfulness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the applications of mindfulness. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the applications of mindfulness. [F.198.b] The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the applications of mindfulness.
- 25.106 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the correct exertions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the correct exertions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the correct exertions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the correct exertions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the correct exertions.
- 25.107 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the supports for miraculous ability. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the supports for miraculous ability. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the supports for miraculous ability. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the supports for miraculous ability. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing [F.199.a] of the supports for miraculous ability.
- 25.108 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the faculties. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the faculties. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the faculties. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the faculties. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the faculties.
- 25.109 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the powers. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the powers. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the powers. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the powers. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the powers.
- 25.110 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the branches of enlightenment. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the branches of enlightenment. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the branches of enlightenment. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the branches of enlightenment. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the branches of enlightenment.

25.111 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the noble eightfold path. [F.199.b] The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the noble eightfold path. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the noble eightfold path. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the noble eightfold path. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the noble eightfold path.

25.112 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the truths of the noble ones. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the truths of the noble ones. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the truths of the noble ones. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the truths of the noble ones. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the truths of the noble ones.

25.113 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the meditative concentrations. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the meditative concentrations. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the meditative concentrations. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the meditative concentrations. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the meditative concentrations.

25.114 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the immeasurable attitudes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as [F.200.a] the nonarising of the immeasurable attitudes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the immeasurable attitudes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the immeasurable attitudes. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the immeasurable attitudes.

25.115 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the formless absorptions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the formless absorptions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the formless absorptions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the formless absorptions. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the formless absorptions.

25.116 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the liberations. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the liberations. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the liberations. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the liberations. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the liberations.

25.117 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the serial steps of meditative absorption. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the serial steps of meditative absorption. [F.200.b] The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the serial steps of meditative absorption. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the serial steps of meditative absorption. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the serial steps of meditative absorption.

25.118 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation.

25.119 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the extrasensory powers. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the extrasensory powers. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the extrasensory powers. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the extrasensory powers. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the extrasensory powers.

25.120 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the meditative stabilities. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the meditative stabilities. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the meditative stabilities. [F.201.a] The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the meditative stabilities. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the meditative stabilities.

25.121 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the dhāraṇī gateways. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the dhāraṇī gateways. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the dhāraṇī gateways. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the dhāraṇī gateways. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the dhāraṇī gateways.

25.122 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the powers of the tathāgatas. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the powers of the tathāgatas. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the powers of the tathāgatas. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the powers of the tathāgatas. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the powers of the tathāgatas.

25.123 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the fearlessnesses. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the fearlessnesses. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the fearlessnesses. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the fearlessnesses. [F.201.b] The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the fearlessnesses.

25.124 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the kinds of exact knowledge. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the kinds of exact knowledge. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the kinds of exact knowledge. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the kinds of exact knowledge. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the kinds of exact knowledge.

25.125 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of great compassion. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of great compassion. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of great compassion.

The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of great compassion. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of great compassion.

25.126 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the distinct qualities of the buddhas. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the distinct qualities of the buddhas. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the distinct qualities of the buddhas. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the distinct qualities of the buddhas. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the distinct qualities of the buddhas. [F.202.a]

25.127 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the fruit of having entered the stream. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the fruit of having entered the stream. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the fruit of having entered the stream. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the fruit of having entered the stream. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the fruit of having entered the stream.

25.128 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the fruit of once-returner. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the fruit of once-returner. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the fruit of once-returner. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the fruit of once-returner. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the fruit of once-returner.

25.129 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the fruit of non-returner. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the fruit of non-returner. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the fruit of non-returner. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the fruit of non-returner. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the fruit of non-returner.

25.130 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as [F.202.b] the nonconditioning of arhatship. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of arhatship. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of arhatship. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of arhatship. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of arhatship.

25.131 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of individual enlightenment. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of individual enlightenment. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of individual enlightenment. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of individual enlightenment. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of individual enlightenment.

25.132 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of the knowledge of the aspects of the path. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of the knowledge of the aspects of the path. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonceasing of the knowledge of the aspects of the path. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of the knowledge of the aspects of the path. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of the knowledge of the aspects of the path.

25.133 “The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonconditioning of all-aspect omniscience. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonarising of all-aspect omniscience. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as [F.203.a] the nonceasing of all-aspect omniscience. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonapprehension of all-aspect omniscience. The perfection of wisdom should be clearly achieved as the nonperishing of all-aspect omniscience.”

25.134 “Blessed Lord, what phenomenon does the perfection of wisdom that has been clearly achieved in that manner cause to be attained?” asked Śāradvatīputra.

“Śāradvatīputra,” replied the Blessed One, “the perfection of wisdom that has been clearly achieved in that manner causes no phenomenon at all to be attained, and when it does not cause any phenomenon at all to be attained, at that time it comes to be styled the perfection of wisdom.”

25.135 “Blessed Lord, what are all those phenomena that it does not cause to be attained?” asked Śāradvatīputra.

The Blessed One replied, “It does not cause nonvirtuous phenomena to be attained and does not cause virtuous phenomena to be attained; it does not cause mundane phenomena to be attained and does not cause supramundane phenomena to be attained; it does not cause contaminated phenomena to be attained and does not cause uncontaminated phenomena to be attained; it does not cause phenomena that are basic transgressions to be attained and does not cause phenomena that are not basic transgressions to be attained; and it does not cause conditioned phenomena to be attained and does not cause unconditioned phenomena to be attained. If you ask why, it is because the perfection of wisdom has not been established for the sake of any phenomenon at all by way of apprehending it. For this reason, it does not cause any phenomenon at all to be attained.”

25.136 Then Śakra, mighty lord of the gods, asked the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, does this perfection of wisdom not even cause all-aspect omniscience to be attained?”

“Kauśika,” replied the Blessed One, “you have asked, [F.203.b] ‘Does this perfection of wisdom not even cause all-aspect omniscience to be attained?’ Kauśika, it is so, it is so! This perfection of wisdom does not cause even all-aspect omniscience to be attained and does not apprehend it.”

25.137 “Blessed Lord, in what way does the perfection of wisdom not cause even all-aspect omniscience to be attained and does not apprehend it?” asked Śakra.

“Kauśika,” replied the Blessed One, “just like a name, just like a mental image, and just like a conditioning, the perfection of wisdom does not cause it to be attained.”

25.138 “Blessed Lord, how then does it cause attainment?” asked Śakra.

The Blessed One replied, “It causes it to be attained insofar as it does not apprehend, does not accept, does not dwell, does not abandon, and is not attached, but it does not cause anything to be attained. Kauśika, so it is that the perfection of wisdom does not cause any phenomenon to be attained. It does not cause the attainment of anything at all.”

25.139 Śakra said, “Blessed Lord, how wonderful that this perfection of wisdom is thus established for the nonarising, the nonceasing, the nonconditioning, the nonapprehending, and the nondeterioration of all phenomena.”

25.140 Thereupon, the venerable Subhūti said to the Blessed One, “Blessed Lord, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, if they were to have such perceptions as ‘the perfection of wisdom causes the attainment of all phenomena’ or ‘the perfection of wisdom does not cause the attainment of all phenomena,’ in that case, [F.204.a] Blessed Lord, those bodhisattva great beings would abandon the perfection of wisdom. Blessed Lord, those bodhisattva great beings would distance themselves from the perfection of wisdom.”

25.141 “Subhūti,” said the Blessed One, “there is a specific way in which bodhisattva great beings abandon the perfection of wisdom and distance themselves from the perfection of wisdom, and such a way is if, when bodhisattva great beings practice the perfection of wisdom, they perceive, 'Alas! This perfection of wisdom is hollow. Alas! This perfection of wisdom is in vain.'⁷⁹⁷ Alas! This perfection of wisdom is pointless.' In that case, those bodhisattva great beings abandon the perfection of wisdom, and those bodhisattva great beings distance themselves from the perfection of wisdom. Subhūti, that is the specific way in which bodhisattva great beings abandon the perfection of wisdom, and the way in which bodhisattva great beings distance themselves from the perfection of wisdom."

25.142 "Blessed Lord, what are the phenomena in which those who have conviction⁷⁹⁸ in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction?"⁷⁹⁹

25.143 "Subhūti," replied the Blessed One, "those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in physical forms, do not have conviction in feelings, do not have conviction in perceptions, do not have conviction in formative predispositions, and do not have conviction in consciousness; do not have conviction in the eyes, do not have conviction in the ears, do not have [F.204.b] conviction in the nose, do not have conviction in the tongue, do not have conviction in the body, and do not have conviction in the mental faculty; do not have conviction in sights, do not have conviction in sounds, do not have conviction in odors, do not have conviction in tastes, do not have conviction in tangibles, and do not have conviction in mental phenomena; do not have conviction in visual consciousness, do not have conviction in auditory consciousness, do not have conviction in olfactory consciousness, do not have conviction in gustatory consciousness, do not have conviction in tactile consciousness, and do not have conviction in mental consciousness; do not have conviction in visually compounded sensory contact, do not have conviction in aurally compounded sensory contact, do not have conviction in nasally compounded sensory contact, do not have conviction in lingually compounded sensory contact, do not have conviction in corporeally compounded sensory contact, and do not have conviction in mentally compounded sensory contact; do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; do not have conviction in the earth element, do not have conviction in the water element, do not have conviction in the fire element, do not have conviction in the wind element, do not have conviction in the space element, and do not have [F.205.a] conviction in the consciousness element; do not have conviction in ignorance, do not have conviction in formative predispositions, do not have conviction in consciousness, do not have conviction in name and form, do not have conviction in the six sense fields, do not have conviction in sensory contact, do not have conviction in sensation, do not have conviction in craving, do not have conviction in grasping, do not have conviction in the rebirth process, do not have conviction in birth, and do not have conviction in aging and death; do not have conviction in the perfection of generosity, do not have conviction in the perfection of ethical discipline, do not have conviction in the perfection of tolerance, do not have conviction in the perfection of perseverance, do not have conviction in the perfection of meditative concentration, and do not have conviction in the perfection of wisdom; do not have conviction in the emptiness of internal phenomena, do not have conviction in the emptiness of external phenomena, do not have conviction in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, do not have conviction in the emptiness of emptiness, do not have conviction in the emptiness of great extent, do not have conviction in the emptiness of ultimate reality, do not have conviction in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, do not have conviction in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, do not have conviction in the emptiness of the unlimited, do not have conviction in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, do not have conviction in the emptiness of nonexclusion, do not have conviction in the emptiness of an inherent nature, [F.205.b] do not have conviction in the emptiness of all phenomena, do not have conviction in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, do not have conviction in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, do not have conviction in the emptiness of nonentities, do not have conviction in the emptiness of essential nature, and do not have conviction in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; do not have conviction in the four applications of mindfulness, do not have conviction in the four correct exertions, do not have conviction in the four supports for miraculous ability, do not have conviction in the five faculties, do not have conviction in the five powers, do not have conviction in the seven branches of enlightenment, and do not have conviction in the noble eightfold path; do not have conviction in the four truths of the noble ones, do not have conviction in the four meditative concentrations, do not have conviction in the four immeasurable attitudes, do not have conviction in the four formless absorptions, do not have conviction in the eight liberations, do not have conviction in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, do not have conviction in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, do not have conviction in the extrasensory powers, do not have conviction in the meditative stabilities, do not have conviction in the dhāraṇī gateways, do not have conviction in the ten powers of the tathāgatas, do not have conviction in the four fearlessnesses, do not have conviction in the four kinds of exact knowledge, do not have conviction in great compassion, and do not have conviction in the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and do not have conviction in the fruit of having entered the stream, do not have conviction in [F.206.a] the fruit of once-returner, do not have conviction in the fruit of non-returner, do not have conviction in arhatship, do not have conviction in individual enlightenment, do not have conviction in the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and do not have conviction in all-aspect omniscience.”

25.144 Subhūti asked, “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in physical forms? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in perceptions? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in formative predispositions? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in consciousness?

25.145 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the eyes? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the ears? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the nose? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the tongue? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the body? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the mental faculty?

25.146 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in sights? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not [F.206.b] have conviction in sounds? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in odors? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in tastes? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in tangibles? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in mental phenomena?

25.147 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in visual consciousness? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in auditory consciousness? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in olfactory consciousness? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in gustatory consciousness? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in tactile consciousness? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in mental consciousness?

25.148 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in visually compounded sensory contact? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in aurally compounded sensory contact? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in nasally compounded sensory contact? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom [F.207.a] do not have conviction in lingually compounded sensory contact? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in corporeally compounded sensory contact? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in mentally compounded sensory contact?

25.149 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact?

25.150 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the earth element? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the water element? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the fire element? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom [F.207.b] do not have conviction in the wind element? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the space element? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the consciousness element?

25.151 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in ignorance? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in formative predispositions? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in consciousness? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in name and form? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the six sense fields? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in sensory contact? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in sensation? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in craving? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in grasping? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the rebirth process? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in birth? Blessed Lord, why is it that [F.208.a] those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in aging and death?

25.152 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of generosity? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of ethical discipline? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of tolerance? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of perseverance? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of meditative concentration? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of wisdom?

25.153 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of internal phenomena? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of external phenomena? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of emptiness? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of great extent? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in [F.208.b] the emptiness of ultimate reality? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of the unlimited? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of nonexclusion? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of inherent nature? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of all phenomena? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of nonentities? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of essential nature? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities? [B16] [F.209.a]

25.154 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the four applications of mindfulness? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the four correct exertions? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the four supports for miraculous ability? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the five faculties? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the five powers? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the seven branches of enlightenment? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the noble eightfold path?

25.155 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the four truths of the noble ones? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the four meditative concentrations? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the four immeasurable attitudes? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the four formless absorptions? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the eight liberations? Blessed Lord, [F.209.b] why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the nine serial steps of meditative absorption? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness gateway to liberation? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the signlessness gateway to liberation? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the wishlessness gateway to liberation? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the extrasensory powers? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the meditative stabilities? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the dhāraṇī gateways? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the ten powers of the tathāgatas? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the four fearlessnesses? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the four kinds of exact knowledge? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in great compassion? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas?

25.156 “Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the fruit of having entered the stream? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom [F.210.a] do not have conviction in the fruit of once-returner? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the fruit of non-returner? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in arhatship? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in individual enlightenment? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the knowledge of the aspects of the path? Blessed Lord, why is it that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in all-aspect omniscience?”

25.157 “Subhūti,” replied the Blessed One, “it is because physical forms cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in physical forms. Subhūti, it is because feelings cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings. Subhūti, it is because perceptions cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in perceptions. Subhūti, it is because formative predispositions cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in formative predispositions. Subhūti, it is because consciousness cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, [F.210.b] that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in consciousness.

25.158 “Subhūti, it is because the eyes cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the eyes. Subhūti, it is because the ears cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the ears. Subhūti, it is because the nose cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the nose. Subhūti, it is because the tongue cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the tongue. Subhūti, it is because the body cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the body. Subhūti, it is because the mental faculty cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the mental faculty.

25.159 “Subhūti, it is because sights cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in sights. Subhūti, it is because sounds cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in sounds. Subhūti, it is because odors cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom [F.211.a] do not have conviction in odors. Subhūti, it is because tastes cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in tastes. Subhūti, it is because tangibles cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in tangibles. Subhūti, it is because mental phenomena cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in mental phenomena.

25.160 “Subhūti, it is because visual consciousness cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in visual consciousness. Subhūti, it is because auditory consciousness cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in auditory consciousness. Subhūti, it is because olfactory consciousness cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in olfactory consciousness.

Subhūti, it is because gustatory consciousness cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in gustatory consciousness. Subhūti, it is because tactile consciousness cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in tactile consciousness. Subhūti, it is because mental consciousness cannot [F.211.b] be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in mental consciousness.

25.161 “Subhūti, it is because visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in visually compounded sensory contact. Subhūti, it is because aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in aurally compounded sensory contact. Subhūti, it is because nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in nasally compounded sensory contact. Subhūti, it is because lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in lingually compounded sensory contact. Subhūti, it is because corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in corporeally compounded sensory contact. Subhūti, it is because mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in mentally compounded sensory contact.

25.162 “Subhūti, it is because feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact. [F.212.a] Subhūti, it is because feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact. Subhūti, it is because feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact. Subhūti, it is because feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact. Subhūti, it is because feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact. Subhūti, it is because feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact.

25.163 “Subhūti, it is because the earth element cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the earth element. Subhūti, it is because the water element cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the water element. [F.212.b] Subhūti, it is because the fire element cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the fire element. Subhūti, it is because the wind element cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the wind element. Subhūti, it is because the space element cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the space element. Subhūti, it is because the consciousness element cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the consciousness element.

25.164 “Subhūti, it is because ignorance cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in ignorance.

Subhūti, it is because formative predispositions cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in formative predispositions. Subhūti, it is because consciousness cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in consciousness. Subhūti, it is because name and form cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in name and form. Subhūti, it is because the six sense fields cannot be apprehended that they have conviction [F.213.a] in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the six sense fields. Subhūti, it is because sensory contact cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in sensory contact. Subhūti, it is because sensation cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in sensation. Subhūti, it is because craving cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in craving. Subhūti, it is because grasping cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in grasping. Subhūti, it is because the rebirth process cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the rebirth process. Subhūti, it is because birth cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in birth. Subhūti, it is because aging and death cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in aging and death.

25.165 “Subhūti, it is because the perfection of generosity cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of generosity. Subhūti, it is because the perfection of ethical discipline cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. [F.213.b] So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of ethical discipline. Subhūti, it is because the perfection of tolerance cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of tolerance. Subhūti, it is because the perfection of perseverance cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of perseverance. Subhūti, it is because the perfection of meditative concentration cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of meditative concentration. Subhūti, it is because the perfection of wisdom cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the perfection of wisdom.

25.166 “Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of internal phenomena cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of internal phenomena. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of external phenomena cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of external phenomena. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of external and internal phenomena. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of emptiness [F.214.a] cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of emptiness. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of great extent cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of great extent. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of ultimate reality cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of ultimate reality. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of conditioned phenomena. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of the unlimited cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of the unlimited. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of nonexclusion cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of nonexclusion. Subhūti, [F.214.b] it is because the emptiness of inherent nature cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of inherent nature. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of all phenomena cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of all phenomena. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of nonentities cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of nonentities. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of essential nature cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of essential nature. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities.

25.167 “Subhūti, it is because the applications of mindfulness cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. [F.215.a] So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the applications of mindfulness. Subhūti, it is because the correct exertions cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the correct exertions. Subhūti, it is because the supports for miraculous ability cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the supports for miraculous ability. Subhūti, it is because the faculties cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the faculties. Subhūti, it is because the powers cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the powers. Subhūti, it is because the branches of enlightenment cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the branches of enlightenment. Subhūti, it is because the noble eightfold path cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the noble eightfold path.

25.168 “Subhūti, it is because the truths of the noble ones cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the truths of the noble ones. Subhūti, [F.215.b] it is because the meditative concentrations cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the meditative concentrations. Subhūti, it is because the immeasurable attitudes cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the immeasurable attitudes. Subhūti, it is because the formless absorptions cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the formless absorptions.

Subhūti, it is because the liberations cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the liberations. Subhūti, it is because the serial steps of meditative absorption cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the serial steps of meditative absorption. Subhūti, it is because the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation. Subhūti, it is because the extrasensory powers cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the extrasensory powers. Subhūti, [F.216.a] it is because the meditative stabilities cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the meditative stabilities. Subhūti, it is because the dhāraṇī gateways cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the dhāraṇī gateways. Subhūti, it is because the powers of the tathāgatas cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the powers of the tathāgatas. Subhūti, it is because the fearlessnesses cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the fearlessnesses. Subhūti, it is because the kinds of exact knowledge cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the kinds of exact knowledge. Subhūti, it is because great compassion cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in great compassion. Subhūti, it is because the distinct qualities of the buddhas cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the distinct qualities of the buddhas.

25.169 “Subhūti, it is because the fruit of having entered the stream cannot be apprehended [F.216.b] that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the fruit of having entered the stream. Subhūti, it is because the fruit of once-returner cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the fruit of once-returner. Subhūti, it is because the fruit of non-returner cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the fruit of non-returner. Subhūti, it is because arhatship cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in arhatship. Subhūti, it is because individual enlightenment cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in individual enlightenment. Subhūti, it is because the knowledge of the aspects of the path cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in the knowledge of the aspects of the path. Subhūti, it is because all-aspect omniscience cannot be apprehended that they have conviction in the perfection of wisdom. So it is, that those who have conviction in the perfection of wisdom do not have conviction in all-aspect omniscience.”

“So it is, Blessed Lord, that this perfection of wisdom is the great perfection.”

25.170 “Subhūti, for what reason [F.217.a] do you think this perfection of wisdom is the great perfection?” asked the Blessed One.

25.171 Subhūti replied, “Blessed Lord, the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish⁸⁰⁰ physical forms, does not enhance or diminish feelings, does not enhance or diminish perceptions, does not enhance or diminish formative predispositions, and does not enhance or diminish consciousness; it does not enhance or diminish the eyes, does not enhance or diminish the ears, does not enhance or diminish the nose, does not enhance or diminish the tongue, does not enhance or diminish the body, and does not enhance or diminish the mental faculty; it does not enhance or diminish sights, does not enhance or diminish sounds, does not enhance or diminish odors, does not enhance or diminish tastes, does not enhance or diminish tangibles, and does not enhance or diminish mental phenomena; it does not enhance or diminish visual consciousness, does not enhance or diminish auditory consciousness, does not enhance or diminish olfactory consciousness, does not enhance or diminish gustatory consciousness, does not enhance or diminish tactile consciousness, and does not enhance or diminish mental consciousness; it does not enhance or diminish visually compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish aurally compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish nasally compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish lingually compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not enhance or diminish mentally compounded sensory contact; it does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, [F.217.b] does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; it does not enhance or diminish the earth element, does not enhance or diminish the water element, does not enhance or diminish the fire element, does not enhance or diminish the wind element, does not enhance or diminish the space element, and does not enhance or diminish the consciousness element; it does not enhance or diminish ignorance, does not enhance or diminish formative predispositions, does not enhance or diminish consciousness, does not enhance or diminish name and form, does not enhance or diminish the six sense fields, does not enhance or diminish sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish sensation, does not enhance or diminish craving, does not enhance or diminish grasping, does not enhance or diminish the rebirth process, does not enhance or diminish birth, and does not enhance or diminish aging and death; it does not enhance or diminish the perfection of generosity, does not enhance or diminish the perfection of ethical discipline, does not enhance or diminish the perfection of tolerance, does not enhance or diminish the perfection of perseverance, and does not enhance or diminish the perfection of meditative concentration; it does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of internal phenomena, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of external phenomena, [F.218.a] does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of emptiness, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of great extent, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of ultimate reality, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of the unlimited, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of nonexclusion, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of inherent nature, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of all phenomena, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of nonentities, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of essential nature, and does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; it does not enhance or diminish the applications of mindfulness, does not enhance or diminish the correct exertions, does not enhance or diminish the supports for miraculous ability, does not enhance or diminish the faculties, does not enhance or diminish the powers, does not enhance or diminish the branches of enlightenment, and does not enhance or diminish the noble eightfold path; it does not enhance or diminish the truths of the noble ones, does not enhance or diminish the meditative concentrations, does not enhance or diminish the immeasurable attitudes, does not enhance [F.218.b] or diminish the formless absorptions, does not enhance or diminish the liberations, does not enhance or diminish the serial steps of meditative absorption, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, does not enhance or diminish the extrasensory powers, does not enhance or diminish the meditative stabilities, does not enhance or diminish the dhāraṇī gateways, does not enhance or diminish the ten powers of the tathāgatas, does not enhance or diminish the four fearlessnesses, does not enhance or diminish the four kinds of exact knowledge, does not enhance or diminish great compassion, and does not enhance or diminish the distinct qualities of the buddhas; and it does not enhance or diminish the fruit of having entered the stream, does not enhance or diminish the fruit of once-returner, does not enhance or diminish the fruit of non-returner, does not enhance or diminish arhatship, does not enhance or diminish individual enlightenment, does not enhance or diminish the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and does not enhance or diminish enlightenment, the buddhas, or the attributes of the buddhas.

- 25.172 “Moreover, the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart⁸⁰¹ physical forms, does not gather together or scatter apart feelings, does not gather together or scatter apart perceptions, does not gather together or scatter apart formative predispositions, and does not gather together or scatter apart consciousness; it does not gather together or scatter apart the eyes, does not gather together or scatter apart [F.219.a] the ears, does not gather together or scatter apart the nose, does not gather together or scatter apart the tongue, does not gather together or scatter apart the body, and does not gather together or scatter apart the mental faculty; it does not gather together or scatter apart sights, does not gather together or scatter apart sounds, does not gather together or scatter apart odors, does not gather together or scatter apart tastes, does not gather together or scatter apart tangibles, and does not gather together or scatter apart mental phenomena; it does not gather together or scatter apart visual consciousness, does not gather together or scatter apart auditory consciousness, does not gather together or scatter apart olfactory consciousness, does not gather together or scatter apart gustatory consciousness, does not gather together or scatter apart tactile consciousness, and does not gather together or scatter apart mental consciousness; it does not gather together or scatter apart visually compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart aurally compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart nasally compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart lingually compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not gather together or scatter apart mentally compounded sensory contact; it does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; it does not gather together or [F.219.b] scatter apart the earth element, does not gather together or scatter apart the water element, does not gather together or scatter apart the fire element, does not gather together or scatter apart the wind element, does not gather together or scatter apart the space element, and does not gather together or scatter apart the consciousness element; it does not gather together or scatter apart ignorance, does not gather together or scatter apart formative predispositions, does not gather together or scatter apart consciousness, does not gather together or scatter apart name and form, does not gather together or scatter apart the six sense fields, does not gather together or scatter apart sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart sensation, does not gather together or scatter apart craving, does not gather together or scatter apart grasping, does not gather together or scatter apart the rebirth process, does not gather together or scatter apart birth, and does not gather together or scatter apart aging and death; it does not gather together or scatter apart the perfection of generosity, does not gather together or scatter apart the perfection of ethical discipline, does not gather together or scatter apart the perfection of tolerance, does not gather together or scatter apart the perfection of perseverance, and does not gather together or scatter apart the perfection of meditative concentration; it does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of internal phenomena, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of external phenomena, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of emptiness, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of great extent, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of ultimate reality, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, [F.220.a] does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of the unlimited, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of nonexclusion, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of inherent nature, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of all phenomena, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of nonentities, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of essential nature, and does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; it does not gather together or scatter apart the applications of mindfulness, does not gather together or scatter apart the correct exertions, does not gather together or scatter apart the supports for miraculous ability, does not gather together or scatter apart the faculties, does not gather together or scatter apart the powers, does not gather together or scatter apart the branches of enlightenment, and does not gather together or scatter apart the noble eightfold path; it does not gather together or scatter apart the truths of the noble ones, does not gather together or scatter apart the meditative concentrations, does not gather together or scatter apart the immeasurable attitudes, does not gather together or scatter apart the formless absorptions, does not gather together or scatter apart the eight liberations, does not gather together [F.220.b] or scatter apart the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, does not gather together or scatter apart the extrasensory powers, does not gather together or scatter apart the meditative stabilities, does not gather together or scatter apart the dhāraṇī gateways, does not gather together or scatter apart the ten powers of the tathāgatas, does not gather together or scatter apart the four fearlessnesses, does not gather together or scatter apart the four kinds of exact knowledge, does not gather together or scatter apart great compassion, and does not gather together or scatter apart the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and it does not gather together or scatter apart the fruit of having entered the stream, does not gather together or scatter apart the fruit of once-returner, does not gather together or scatter apart the fruit of non-returner, does not gather together or scatter apart arhatship, does not gather together or scatter apart individual enlightenment, does not gather together or scatter apart the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and does not gather together or scatter apart enlightenment, the buddhas, or the attributes of the buddhas.

- 25.173 “Moreover, the perfection of wisdom does not make physical forms measurable or make them immeasurable,⁸⁰² does not make feelings measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make perceptions measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make formative predispositions measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable; it does not make the eyes measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the ears measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make [F.221.a] the nose measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the tongue measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the body measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make the mental faculty measurable or make it immeasurable; it does not make sights measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make sounds measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make odors measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make tastes measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make tangibles measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make mental phenomena measurable or make them immeasurable; it does not make visual consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make auditory consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make olfactory consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make gustatory consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make tactile consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make mental consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable; it does not make visually compounded sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make aurally compounded sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make nasally compounded sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make lingually compounded sensory contact

measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make corporeally compounded sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make mentally compounded sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable; it does not make feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact [F.221.b] measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact measurable or make them immeasurable; it does not make the earth element measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the water element measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the fire element measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the wind element measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the space element measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make the consciousness element measurable or make it immeasurable; it does not make ignorance measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make formative predispositions measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make name and form measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the six sense fields measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make sensation measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make craving measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make grasping measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the rebirth process measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make birth [F.222.a] measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make aging and death measurable or make them immeasurable; it does not make the perfection of generosity measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the perfection of ethical discipline measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the perfection of tolerance measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the perfection of perseverance measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make the perfection of meditative concentration measurable or make it immeasurable; [B17] it does not make the emptiness of internal phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of external phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of external and internal phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of emptiness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of great extent measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of ultimate reality measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of conditioned phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of the unlimited measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of nonexclusion measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of an inherent nature measurable [F.222.b] or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of all phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of nonentities measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of essential nature measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities measurable or make it immeasurable; it does not make the applications of mindfulness measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the correct exertions measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the supports for miraculous ability measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the faculties measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the powers measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the branches of enlightenment measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make the noble eightfold path measurable or make it immeasurable; it does not make the truths of the noble ones measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the meditative concentrations measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the immeasurable attitudes measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the formless absorptions measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the eight liberations measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the nine serial steps of meditative absorption measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the extrasensory powers measurable or make them [F.223.a] immeasurable, does not make the meditative stabilities measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the dhāraṇī gateways measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the ten powers of the tathāgatas measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the four fearlessnesses measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the four kinds of exact knowledge measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make great compassion measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas measurable or make them immeasurable; and it does not make the fruit of having entered the stream measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the fruit of once-returner measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the fruit of non-returner measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make arhatship measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make individual enlightenment measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the knowledge of the aspects of the path measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make enlightenment, the buddhas, or the attributes of the buddhas measurable or make them immeasurable.

25.174 “Moreover, the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress⁸⁰³ physical forms, does not expand or compress feelings, does not expand or compress perceptions, does not expand or compress formative predispositions, and does not expand or compress consciousness; it does not expand or compress the eyes, does not expand or compress the ears, does not expand or compress [F.223.b] the nose, does not expand or compress the tongue, does not expand or compress the body, and does not expand or compress the mental faculty; it does not expand or compress sights, does not expand or compress sounds, does not expand or compress odors, does not expand or compress tastes, does not expand or compress tangibles, and does not expand or compress mental phenomena; it does not expand or compress visual consciousness, does not expand or compress auditory consciousness, does not expand or compress olfactory consciousness, does not expand or compress gustatory consciousness, does not expand or compress tactile consciousness, and does not expand or compress mental consciousness; it does not expand or compress visually compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress aurally compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress nasally compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress lingually compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not expand or compress mentally compounded sensory contact; it does not expand or compress feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress feelings [F.224.a] conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not expand or compress feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; it does not expand or compress the earth element, does not expand or compress the water element, does not expand or compress the fire element, does not expand or compress the wind element, does not expand or compress the space element, and does not expand or compress the consciousness element; it does not expand or compress ignorance, does not expand or compress formative predispositions, does not expand or compress consciousness, does not expand or compress name and form, does not expand or compress the six sense fields, does not expand or compress sensory contact, does not expand or compress sensation, does not expand or compress craving, does not expand or compress grasping, does not expand or compress the rebirth process, does not expand or compress birth, and does not expand or compress aging and death; it does not expand or compress the perfection of generosity, does not expand or compress the perfection of ethical discipline, does not expand or compress the perfection of tolerance, does not expand or compress the perfection of perseverance, and does not expand or compress the perfection of meditative concentration; it does not expand or compress the emptiness of internal phenomena, does not expand or compress [F.224.b] the emptiness of external phenomena, does not expand or compress the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, does not expand or compress the emptiness of emptiness, does not expand or compress the emptiness of great extent, does not expand or compress the emptiness of ultimate reality, does not expand or compress the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, does not expand or compress the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, does not expand or compress the emptiness of the unlimited, does not expand or compress the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, does not expand or compress the emptiness of nonexclusion, does not expand or compress the emptiness of inherent nature, does not expand or compress the emptiness of all phenomena, does not expand or compress the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, does not expand or compress the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, does not expand or compress the emptiness of nonentities, does not expand or compress the emptiness of essential nature, and does not expand or compress the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; it does not expand or compress the applications of mindfulness, does not expand or compress the correct exertions, does not expand or compress the supports for miraculous ability, does not expand or compress the faculties, does not expand or compress the powers, does not expand or compress the branches of enlightenment, and does not expand or compress the noble eightfold path; it does not expand or compress the truths of the noble ones, does not expand or compress [F.225.a] the meditative concentrations, does not expand or compress the immeasurable attitudes, does not expand or compress the formless absorptions, does not expand or compress the eight liberations, does not expand or compress the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, does not expand or compress the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, does not expand or compress the extrasensory powers, does not expand or compress the meditative stabilities, does not expand or compress the dhāraṇī gateways, does not expand or compress the ten powers of the tathāgatas, does not expand or compress the four fearlessnesses, does not expand or compress the four kinds of exact knowledge, does not expand or compress great compassion, and does not expand or compress the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and it does not expand or compress the fruit of having entered the stream, does not expand or compress the fruit of once-returner, does not expand or compress the fruit of non-returner, does not expand or compress arhatship, does not expand or compress individual enlightenment, does not expand or compress the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and does not expand or compress enlightenment, the buddhas, or the attributes of the buddhas.

- 25.175 “Moreover, the perfection of wisdom [F.225.b] does not strengthen or weaken⁸⁰⁴ physical forms, does not strengthen or weaken feelings, does not strengthen or weaken perceptions, does not strengthen or weaken formative predispositions, and does not strengthen or weaken consciousness; it does not strengthen or weaken the eyes, does not strengthen or weaken the ears, does not strengthen or weaken the nose, does not strengthen or weaken the tongue, does not strengthen or weaken the body, and does not strengthen or weaken the mental faculty; it does not strengthen or weaken sights, does not strengthen or weaken sounds, does not strengthen nor weaken odors, does not strengthen nor weaken tastes, does not strengthen nor weaken tangibles, and does not strengthen nor weaken mental phenomena; it does not strengthen or weaken visual consciousness, does not strengthen or weaken auditory consciousness, does not strengthen or weaken olfactory consciousness, does not strengthen or weaken gustatory consciousness, does not strengthen or weaken tactile consciousness, and does not strengthen or weaken mental consciousness; [F.226.a] it does not strengthen or weaken visually compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken aurally compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken nasally compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken lingually compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not strengthen or weaken mentally compounded sensory contact; it does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; it does not strengthen or weaken the earth element, does not strengthen or weaken the water element, does not strengthen or weaken the fire element, does not strengthen or weaken the wind element, does not strengthen or weaken the space element, and does not strengthen or weaken the consciousness element; it does not strengthen or weaken ignorance, does not strengthen or weaken formative predispositions, does not strengthen or weaken consciousness, does not strengthen or [F.226.b] weaken name and form, does not strengthen or weaken the six sense fields, does not strengthen or weaken sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken sensation, does not strengthen or weaken craving, does not strengthen or weaken grasping, does not strengthen or weaken the rebirth process, does not strengthen or weaken birth, and does not strengthen or weaken aging and death; it does not strengthen or weaken the perfection of generosity, does not strengthen or weaken the perfection of ethical discipline, does not strengthen or weaken the perfection of tolerance, does not strengthen or weaken the perfection of perseverance, and does not strengthen or weaken the perfection of meditative concentration; it does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of internal phenomena, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of external phenomena, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of emptiness, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of great extent, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of ultimate reality, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, [F.227.a] does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of the unlimited, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of nonexclusion, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of inherent nature, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of all phenomena, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of nonentities, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of essential nature, and does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; it does not strengthen or weaken the applications of mindfulness, does not strengthen or weaken the correct exertions, does not strengthen or weaken the supports for miraculous ability, does not strengthen or weaken the faculties, does not strengthen or weaken the powers, does not strengthen or weaken the branches of enlightenment, and does not strengthen or weaken the noble eightfold path; it does not strengthen or weaken the truths of the noble ones, does not strengthen [F.227.b] or weaken the meditative concentrations, does not strengthen or weaken the immeasurable attitudes, does not strengthen or weaken the formless absorptions, does not strengthen or weaken the eight liberations, does not strengthen or weaken the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation, does not strengthen or weaken the extrasensory powers, does not strengthen or weaken the meditative stabilities, does not strengthen or weaken the dhāraṇī gateways, does not strengthen or weaken the ten powers of the tathāgatas, does not strengthen or weaken the four fearlessnesses, does not strengthen or weaken the four kinds of exact knowledge, does not strengthen or weaken great compassion, and does not strengthen or weaken the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas; and it does not strengthen or weaken the fruit of having entered the stream, does not strengthen or weaken the fruit of once-returner, does not strengthen or weaken the fruit of non-returner, does not strengthen or weaken arhatship, does not strengthen or weaken individual enlightenment, does not strengthen or weaken [F.228.a] the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and does not strengthen or weaken enlightenment, the buddhas, or the attributes of the buddhas.

25.176 “Blessed Lord, in this way this perfection of wisdom is the great perfection of bodhisattva great beings.

25.177 “Blessed Lord, if bodhisattva great beings who have newly set out in the vehicle, relying on the perfection of wisdom, relying on the perfection of meditative concentration, relying on the perfection of perseverance, relying on the perfection of tolerance, relying on the perfection of ethical discipline, and relying on the perfection of generosity, perceive that ‘the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish physical forms, does not enhance or diminish feelings, does not enhance or diminish perceptions, does not enhance or diminish formative predispositions, and does not enhance or diminish consciousness; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish the eyes, does not enhance or diminish the ears, does not enhance or diminish the nose, does not enhance or diminish the tongue, does not enhance or diminish the body, and does not enhance or diminish the mental faculty; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish sights, does not enhance or diminish sounds, does not enhance or diminish odors, does not enhance or diminish tastes, does not enhance or diminish tangibles, and does not enhance or diminish mental phenomena; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish visual consciousness, does not enhance or diminish auditory consciousness, does not enhance or diminish [F.228.b] olfactory consciousness, does not enhance or diminish gustatory consciousness, does not enhance or diminish tactile consciousness, and does not enhance or diminish mental consciousness; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish visually compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish aurally compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish nasally compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish lingually compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not enhance or diminish mentally compounded sensory contact; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not enhance or diminish feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish the earth element, does not enhance or diminish the water element, does not enhance or diminish the fire element, does not enhance or diminish the wind element, does not enhance or diminish the space element, and does not enhance or diminish the consciousness element; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish ignorance, does not enhance or diminish formative predispositions, does not enhance or diminish consciousness, does not enhance or diminish name and form, does not enhance or diminish the six sense fields, does not enhance or diminish [F.229.a] sensory contact, does not enhance or diminish sensation, does not enhance or diminish craving, does not enhance or diminish grasping, does not enhance or diminish the rebirth process, does not enhance or diminish birth, and does not enhance or diminish aging and death; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish the perfection of generosity, does not enhance or diminish the perfection of ethical discipline, does not enhance or diminish the perfection of tolerance, does not enhance or diminish the perfection of perseverance, and does not enhance or diminish the perfection of meditative concentration; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of internal phenomena, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of external phenomena, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of emptiness, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of great extent, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of ultimate reality, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of the unlimited, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of nonexclusion, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of inherent nature, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of all phenomena, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of nonentities, does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of essential nature, and does not enhance or diminish the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; [F.229.b] the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish the applications of mindfulness, does not enhance or diminish the correct exertions, does not enhance or diminish the supports for miraculous ability, does not enhance or diminish the faculties, does not enhance or diminish the powers, does not enhance or diminish the branches of enlightenment, and does not enhance or diminish the noble eightfold path; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish the truths of the noble ones, does not enhance or diminish the meditative concentrations, does not enhance or diminish the immeasurable attitudes, and does not enhance or diminish the formless absorptions; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish the eight liberations, does not enhance or diminish the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, and does not enhance or diminish the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish the extrasensory powers, does not enhance or diminish the meditative stabilities, and does not enhance or diminish the dhāraṇī gateways; the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish the ten powers of the tathāgatas, does not enhance or diminish the four fearlessnesses, does not enhance or diminish the four kinds of exact knowledge, and does not enhance or diminish great compassion; and the perfection of wisdom does not enhance or diminish the distinct qualities of the buddhas, does not enhance or diminish the fruit of having entered the stream, does not enhance [F.230.a] or diminish the fruit of once-returner, does not enhance or diminish the fruit of non-returner, does not enhance or diminish arhatship, does not enhance or diminish individual enlightenment, does not enhance or diminish the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and does not enhance or diminish enlightenment, the buddhas, or the attributes of the buddhas,' and if, Blessed Lord, bodhisattva great beings who have newly set out in the vehicle, relying on the perfection of wisdom, relying on the perfection of meditative concentration, relying on the perfection of perseverance, relying on the perfection of tolerance, relying on the perfection of ethical discipline, and relying on the perfection of generosity, perceive that 'the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart physical forms, does not gather together or scatter apart feelings, does not gather together or scatter apart perceptions, does not gather together or scatter apart formative predispositions, and does not gather together or scatter apart consciousness; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart the eyes, does not gather together or scatter apart the ears, does not gather together or scatter apart the nose, does not gather together or scatter apart the tongue, does not gather together or scatter apart the body, and does not gather together or scatter apart the mental faculty; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart sights, does not gather together or scatter apart sounds, does not gather together or scatter apart odors, does not gather together or scatter apart tastes, does not gather together or scatter apart tangibles, and does not gather together or scatter apart mental phenomena; [F.230.b] the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart visual consciousness, does not gather together or scatter apart auditory consciousness, does not gather together or scatter apart olfactory consciousness, does not gather together or scatter apart gustatory consciousness, does not gather together or scatter apart tactile consciousness, and does not gather together or scatter apart mental consciousness; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart visually compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart aurally compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart nasally compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart lingually compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not gather together or scatter apart mentally compounded sensory contact; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not gather together or scatter apart feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart the earth element, does not gather together or scatter apart the water element, does not gather together or scatter apart the fire element, does not gather together or scatter apart the wind element, does not gather together or scatter apart [F.231.a] the space element, and does not gather together or scatter apart the consciousness element; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart ignorance, does not gather together or scatter apart formative predispositions, does not gather together or scatter apart consciousness, does not gather together or scatter apart name and form, does not gather together or scatter apart the six sense fields, does not gather together or scatter apart sensory contact, does not gather together or scatter apart sensation, does not gather together or scatter apart craving, does not gather together or scatter apart grasping, does not gather together or scatter apart the rebirth process, does not gather together or scatter apart birth, and does not gather together or scatter apart aging and death; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart the perfection of generosity, does not gather together or scatter apart the perfection of ethical discipline, does not gather together or scatter apart the perfection of tolerance, does not gather together or scatter apart the perfection of perseverance, and does not gather together or scatter apart the perfection of meditative concentration; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of internal phenomena, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of external phenomena, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of emptiness, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of great extent, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of ultimate reality, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of the unlimited, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of that [F.231.b] which has neither beginning nor end, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of nonexclusion, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of inherent nature, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of all phenomena, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of nonentities, does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of essential nature, and does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart the applications of mindfulness, does not gather together or scatter apart the correct exertions, does not gather together or scatter apart the supports for miraculous ability, does not gather together or scatter apart the faculties, does not gather together or scatter apart the powers, does not gather together or scatter apart the branches of enlightenment, and does not gather together or scatter apart the noble eightfold path; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart the truths of the noble ones, does not gather together or scatter apart the meditative concentrations, does not gather together or scatter apart the immeasurable attitudes, and does not gather together or scatter apart the formless absorptions; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart the eight liberations, does not gather together or scatter apart the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, and does not gather together or scatter apart the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart the extrasensory powers, does not gather together or scatter apart [F.232.a] the meditative stabilities, and does not gather together or scatter apart the dhāraṇī gateways; the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart the ten powers of the tathāgatas, does not gather together or scatter apart the four fearlessnesses, does not gather together or scatter apart the four kinds of exact knowledge, and does not gather together or scatter apart great compassion; and the perfection of wisdom does not gather together or scatter apart the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, does not gather together or scatter apart the fruit of having entered the stream, does not gather together or scatter apart the fruit of once-returner, does not gather together or scatter apart the fruit of non-returner, does not gather together or scatter apart arhatship, does not gather together or scatter apart individual enlightenment, does not gather together or scatter apart the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and does not gather together or scatter apart enlightenment, the buddhas, or the attributes of the buddhas,' and if, Blessed Lord, bodhisattva great beings who have newly set out in the vehicle, relying on the perfection of wisdom, relying on the perfection of meditative concentration, relying on the perfection of perseverance, relying on the perfection of tolerance, relying on the perfection of ethical discipline, and relying on the perfection of generosity, perceive that 'the perfection of wisdom does not make physical forms measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make feelings measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make perceptions measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make formative predispositions measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make consciousness [F.232.b] measurable or make it immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make the eyes measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the ears measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the nose measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the tongue measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the body measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make the mental faculty measurable or make it immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make sights measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make sounds measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make odors measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make tastes measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make tangibles measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make mental phenomena measurable or make them immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make visual consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make auditory consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make olfactory consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make gustatory consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make tactile consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make mental consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make visually compounded sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make aurally compounded sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make nasally compounded sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make lingually compounded sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make corporeally compounded sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make mentally compounded sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make feelings conditioned by [F.233.a] visually compounded sensory contact measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact measurable or make them immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make the earth element measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the water element measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the fire element measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the wind element measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the space element measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make the consciousness element measurable or make it immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make ignorance measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make

formative predispositions measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make consciousness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make name and form measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the six sense fields measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make sensory contact measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make sensation measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make craving measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make grasping measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the rebirth process measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make birth measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make aging and death measurable or make them immeasurable; [F.233.b] the perfection of wisdom does not make the perfection of generosity measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the perfection of ethical discipline measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the perfection of tolerance measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the perfection of perseverance measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make the perfection of meditative concentration measurable or make it immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make the emptiness of internal phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of external phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of external and internal phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of emptiness measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of great extent measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of ultimate reality measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of conditioned phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of the unlimited measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of nonexclusion measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of inherent nature measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of all phenomena measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of nonentities measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the emptiness of essential nature measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities measurable or make it immeasurable; [F.234.a] the perfection of wisdom does not make the applications of mindfulness measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the correct exertions measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the supports for miraculous ability measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the faculties measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the powers measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the branches of enlightenment measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make the noble eightfold path measurable or make it immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make the truths of the noble ones measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the meditative concentrations measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the immeasurable attitudes measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make the formless absorptions measurable or make them immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make the eight liberations measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the nine serial steps of meditative absorption measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation measurable or make them immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make the extrasensory powers measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the meditative stabilities measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make the dhāraṇī gateways measurable or make them immeasurable; the perfection of wisdom does not make the ten powers of the tathāgatas measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the four fearlessnesses measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the four kinds of exact knowledge measurable or make them immeasurable, and does not make great compassion measurable or make it immeasurable; [F.234.b] and the perfection of wisdom does not make the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas measurable or make them immeasurable, does not make the fruit of having entered the stream measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the fruit of once-returner measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the fruit of non-returner measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make arhatship measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make individual enlightenment measurable or make it immeasurable, does not make the knowledge of the aspects of the path measurable or make it immeasurable, and does not make enlightenment, the buddhas, or the attributes of the buddhas measurable or make them immeasurable,’ in that case, Blessed Lord, those bodhisattva great beings who perceive in such a way do not practice the perfection of wisdom. [B18]

25.178 “And if, Blessed Lord, bodhisattva great beings who have newly set out in the vehicle, relying on the perfection of wisdom, relying on the perfection of meditative concentration, relying on the perfection of perseverance, relying on the perfection of tolerance, relying on the perfection of ethical discipline,

and relying on the perfection of generosity, perceive that 'the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress physical forms, does not expand or compress feelings, does not expand or compress perceptions, does not expand or compress formative predispositions, and does not expand or compress consciousness; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress the eyes, does not expand or compress [F.235.a] the ears, does not expand or compress the nose, does not expand or compress the tongue, does not expand or compress the body, and does not expand or compress the mental faculty; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress sights, does not expand or compress sounds, does not expand or compress odors, does not expand or compress tastes, does not expand or compress tangibles, and does not expand or compress mental phenomena; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress visual consciousness, does not expand or compress auditory consciousness, does not expand or compress olfactory consciousness, does not expand or compress gustatory consciousness, does not expand or compress tactile consciousness, and does not expand or compress mental consciousness; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress visually compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress aurally compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress nasally compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress lingually compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not expand or compress mentally compounded sensory contact; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress feelings [F.235.b] conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, does not expand or compress feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not expand or compress feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress the earth element, does not expand or compress the water element, does not expand or compress the fire element, does not expand or compress the wind element, does not expand or compress the space element, and does not expand or compress the consciousness element; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress ignorance, does not expand or compress formative predispositions, does not expand or compress consciousness, does not expand or compress name and form, does not expand or compress the six sense fields, does not expand or compress sensory contact, does not expand or compress sensation, does not expand or compress craving, does not

expand or compress grasping, does not expand or compress the rebirth process, does not expand or compress birth, and does not expand or compress aging and death; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress the perfection of generosity, does not expand or compress the perfection of ethical discipline, does not expand or compress the perfection of tolerance, does not expand or compress the perfection of perseverance, and does not expand or compress the perfection of meditative concentration; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress [F.236.a] the emptiness of internal phenomena, does not expand or compress the emptiness of external phenomena, does not expand or compress the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, does not expand or compress the emptiness of emptiness, does not expand or compress the emptiness of great extent, does not expand or compress the emptiness of ultimate reality, does not expand or compress the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, does not expand or compress the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, does not expand or compress the emptiness of the unlimited, does not expand or compress the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, does not expand or compress the emptiness of nonexclusion, does not expand or compress the emptiness of inherent nature, does not expand or compress the emptiness of all phenomena, does not expand or compress the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, does not expand or compress the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, does not expand or compress the emptiness of nonentities, does not expand or compress the emptiness of essential nature, and does not expand or compress the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress the applications of mindfulness, does not expand or compress the correct exertions, does not expand or compress the supports for miraculous ability, does not expand or compress the faculties, does not expand or compress the powers, does not expand or compress the branches of enlightenment, and does not expand or compress the noble eightfold path; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress [F.236.b] the truths of the noble ones, does not expand or compress the meditative concentrations, does not expand or compress the immeasurable attitudes, and does not expand or compress the formless absorptions; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress the eight liberations, does not expand or compress the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, and does not expand or compress the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress the extrasensory powers, does not expand or compress the meditative stabilities, and does not expand or compress the dhāraṇī gateways; the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress the ten powers of the tathāgatas, does not expand or compress the four fearlessnesses, does not expand or compress the four kinds of exact knowledge, and does not expand or compress great compassion; and the perfection of wisdom does not expand or compress the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, does not expand or compress the fruit of having entered the stream, does not expand or compress the fruit of once-returner, does not expand or compress the fruit of non-returner, does not expand or compress arhatship, does not expand or compress individual enlightenment, does not expand or compress the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and does not expand or compress enlightenment, the buddhas, or the attributes of the buddhas,' [F.237.a] in that case, Blessed Lord, those bodhisattva great beings who perceive in such a way do not practice the perfection of wisdom.

25.179 “And if, Blessed Lord, bodhisattva great beings who have newly set out in the vehicle, relying on the perfection of wisdom, relying on the perfection of meditative concentration, relying on the perfection of perseverance, relying on the perfection of tolerance, relying on the perfection of ethical discipline, and relying on the perfection of generosity, perceive that ‘the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken physical forms, does not strengthen or weaken feelings, does not strengthen or weaken perceptions, does not strengthen or weaken formative predispositions, and does not strengthen or weaken consciousness; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken the eyes, does not strengthen or weaken the ears, does not strengthen or weaken the nose, does not strengthen or weaken the tongue, does not strengthen or weaken the body, and does not strengthen or weaken the mental faculty; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken sights, does not strengthen or weaken sounds, does not strengthen or weaken odors, does not strengthen or weaken tastes, does not strengthen or weaken tangibles, and does not strengthen or weaken mental phenomena; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or [F.237.b] weaken visual consciousness, does not strengthen or weaken auditory consciousness, does not strengthen or weaken olfactory consciousness, does not strengthen or weaken gustatory consciousness, does not strengthen or weaken tactile consciousness, and does not strengthen or weaken mental consciousness; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken visually compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken aurally compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken nasally compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken lingually compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not strengthen or weaken mentally compounded sensory contact; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned

by visually compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact, and does not strengthen or weaken feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken the earth element, does not strengthen or weaken the water element, does not strengthen or weaken the fire element, [F.238.a] does not strengthen or weaken the wind element, does not strengthen or weaken the space element, and does not strengthen or weaken the consciousness element; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken ignorance, does not strengthen or weaken formative predispositions, does not strengthen or weaken consciousness, does not strengthen or weaken name and form, does not strengthen or weaken the six sense fields, does not strengthen or weaken sensory contact, does not strengthen or weaken sensation, does not strengthen or weaken craving, does not strengthen or weaken grasping, does not strengthen or weaken the rebirth process, does not strengthen or weaken birth, and does not strengthen or weaken aging and death; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken the perfection of generosity, does not strengthen or weaken the perfection of ethical discipline, does not strengthen or weaken the perfection of tolerance, does not strengthen or weaken the perfection of perseverance, and does not strengthen or weaken the perfection of meditative concentration; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of internal phenomena, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of external phenomena, does not strengthen [F.238.b] or weaken the emptiness of external and internal phenomena, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of emptiness, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of great extent, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of ultimate reality, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of conditioned phenomena, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of the unlimited, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of nonexclusion, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of inherent nature, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of all phenomena, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of nonentities, does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of essential nature, and does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken the applications of mindfulness, does not strengthen or weaken the correct exertions, does not strengthen or weaken the supports for miraculous ability, does not strengthen or weaken the faculties, does not strengthen or weaken the powers, does not strengthen [F.239.a] or weaken the branches of enlightenment, and does not strengthen or weaken the noble eightfold path; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken the truths of the noble ones, does not strengthen or weaken the meditative concentrations, does not strengthen or weaken the immeasurable attitudes, and does not strengthen or weaken the formless absorptions; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken the eight liberations, does not strengthen or weaken the nine serial steps of meditative absorption, and does not strengthen or weaken the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken the extrasensory powers, does not strengthen or weaken the meditative stabilities, and does not strengthen or weaken the dhāraṇī gateways; the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken the ten powers of the tathāgatas, does not strengthen or weaken the four fearlessnesses, does not strengthen or weaken the four kinds of exact knowledge, and does not strengthen or weaken great compassion; and the perfection of wisdom does not strengthen or weaken the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas, does not strengthen or weaken the fruit of having entered the stream, [F.239.b] does not strengthen or weaken the fruit of once-returner, does not strengthen or weaken the fruit of non-returner, does not strengthen or weaken arhatship, does not strengthen or weaken individual enlightenment, does not strengthen or weaken the knowledge of the aspects of the path, and does not strengthen or weaken enlightenment, the buddhas, or the attributes of the buddhas,' in that case, Blessed Lord, those bodhisattva great beings who perceive in such a way do not practice the perfection of wisdom.

25.180 “If you ask why, it is because physical forms that the perfection of wisdom might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, perceptions that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, formative predispositions that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and consciousness that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the eyes that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the ears that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the nose that it might enhance or diminish [F.240.a] is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the tongue that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the body that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the mental faculty that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; sights that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sounds that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, odors that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tastes that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tangibles that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mental phenomena that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; visual consciousness that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, auditory consciousness that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, olfactory consciousness that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, gustatory consciousness that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible [F.240.b] with the perfection of wisdom, tactile consciousness that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mental consciousness that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; visually compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, aurally compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, nasally compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, lingually compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, corporeally compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mentally compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings [F.241.a] conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the earth element that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the water element that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fire element that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the wind element that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the space element that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the consciousness element that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; ignorance that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, formative predispositions that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, consciousness that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome [F.241.b] compatible with the perfection of wisdom, name and form that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the six sense fields that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sensory contact that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sensation that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, craving that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, grasping that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the rebirth process that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, birth that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and aging and death that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the perfection of generosity that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of ethical discipline that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of tolerance that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of perseverance that it might enhance or [F.242.a] diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the perfection of meditative concentration that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of external phenomena that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of emptiness that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of great extent that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of ultimate reality that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of the unlimited that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with [F.242.b] the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonexclusion that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of inherent nature that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of all phenomena that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonentities that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of essential nature that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the applications of mindfulness that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the correct exertions that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the supports for miraculous ability that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the faculties that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the powers that it might enhance or diminish are [F.243.a] not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the branches of enlightenment that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the noble eightfold path that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the truths of the noble ones that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the meditative concentrations that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the immeasurable attitudes that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the formless absorptions that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the liberations that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the extrasensory powers that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible [F.243.b] with the perfection of wisdom, the meditative stabilities that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the dhāraṇī gateways that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the ten powers of the tathāgatas that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fearlessnesses that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the kinds of exact knowledge that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and great compassion that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fruit of having entered the stream that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fruit of once-returner that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fruit of non-returner that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, arhatship that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, individual enlightenment that it might enhance or [F.244.a] diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the knowledge of the aspects of the path that it might enhance or diminish is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and enlightenment, the buddhas, and the attributes of the buddhas that it might enhance or diminish are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom.

- 25.181 “Physical forms that the perfection of wisdom might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, perceptions that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, formative predispositions that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and consciousness that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the eyes that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the ears that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the nose that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the tongue that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the body that it might gather together or [F.244.b] scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the mental faculty that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; sights that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sounds that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, odors that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tastes that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tangibles that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mental phenomena that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; visual consciousness that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, auditory consciousness that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, olfactory consciousness that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, gustatory consciousness that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tactile consciousness that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome [F.245.a] compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mental consciousness that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; visually compounded sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, aurally compounded sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, nasally compounded sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, lingually compounded sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, corporeally compounded sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mentally compounded sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact that it might gather together [F.245.b] or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the earth element that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the water element that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fire element that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the wind element that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the space element that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the consciousness element that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; ignorance that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, formative predispositions that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, consciousness that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, name and form that it might gather together [F.246.a] or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the six sense fields that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sensory contact that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sensation that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, craving that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, grasping that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the rebirth process that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, birth that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and aging and death that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the perfection of generosity that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of ethical discipline that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of tolerance that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of perseverance that it might gather together [F.246.b] or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the perfection of meditative concentration that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of external phenomena that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of emptiness that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of great extent that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of ultimate reality that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of the unlimited that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end that it might gather together or scatter apart is not [F.247.a] an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonexclusion that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of inherent nature that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of all phenomena that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonentities that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of essential nature that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the applications of mindfulness that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the correct exertions that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the supports for miraculous ability that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, [F.247.b] the faculties that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the powers that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the branches of enlightenment that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the noble eightfold path that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the truths of the noble ones that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the meditative concentrations that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the immeasurable attitudes that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the formless absorptions that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the eight liberations that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation that it might gather together [F.248.a] or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the extrasensory powers that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the meditative stabilities that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the dhāraṇī gateways that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the ten powers of the tathāgatas that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the four fearlessnesses that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the four kinds of exact knowledge that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, great compassion that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; and the fruit of having entered the stream that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fruit of once-returner that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, [F.248.b] the fruit of non-returner that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, arhatship that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, individual enlightenment that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the knowledge of the aspects of the path that it might gather together or scatter apart is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and enlightenment, the buddhas, and the attributes of the buddhas that it might gather together or scatter apart are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom.

25.182 “Physical forms that the perfection of wisdom might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, perceptions that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, formative predispositions that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and consciousness that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the eyes that it might make measurable [F.249.a] or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the ears that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the nose that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the tongue that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the body that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the mental faculty that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; sights that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sounds that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, odors that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tastes that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tangibles that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mental phenomena that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; visual consciousness that it might make measurable or make immeasurable [F.249.b] is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, auditory consciousness that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, olfactory consciousness that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, gustatory consciousness that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tactile consciousness that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mental consciousness that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; visually compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, aurally compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, nasally compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, lingually compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, corporeally compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, [F.250.a] and mentally compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the earth element that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the water element that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fire element that it might make measurable or make immeasurable [F.250.b] is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the wind element that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the space element that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the consciousness element that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; ignorance that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, formative predispositions that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, consciousness that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, name and form that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the six sense fields that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sensory contact that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sensation that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, craving that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with [F.251.a] the perfection of wisdom, grasping that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the rebirth process that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, birth that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and aging and death that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the perfection of generosity that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of ethical discipline that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of tolerance that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of perseverance that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the perfection of meditative concentration that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of external phenomena that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, [F.251.b] the emptiness of external and internal phenomena that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of emptiness that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of great extent that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of ultimate reality that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of the unlimited that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonexclusion that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of inherent nature that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of all phenomena that it might make measurable [F.252.a] or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonentities that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of essential nature that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; [B19] “the applications of mindfulness that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the correct exertions that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the supports for miraculous ability that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the faculties that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, [F.252.b] the powers that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the branches of enlightenment that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the noble eightfold path that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the truths of the noble ones that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the meditative concentrations that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the immeasurable attitudes that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the formless

absorptions that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the eight liberations that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; [F.253.a] the extrasensory powers that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the meditative stabilities that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the dhāraṇī gateways that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the ten powers of the tathāgatas that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fearlessnesses that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the kinds of exact knowledge that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, great compassion that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the distinct qualities of the buddhas that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; and the fruit of having entered the stream that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fruit of once-returner that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with [F.253.b] the perfection of wisdom, the fruit of non-returner that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, arhatship that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, individual enlightenment that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the knowledge of the aspects of the path that it might make measurable or make immeasurable is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and enlightenment, the buddhas, and the attributes of the buddhas that it might make measurable or make immeasurable are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom.

25.183 “Physical forms that the perfection of wisdom might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, perceptions that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, formative predispositions that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and consciousness that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the eyes that it might [F.254.a] expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the ears that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the nose that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the tongue that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the body that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the mental faculty that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; sights that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sounds that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, odors that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tastes that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tangibles that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mental phenomena that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; visual consciousness that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, auditory consciousness that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with [F.254.b] the perfection of wisdom, olfactory consciousness that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, gustatory consciousness that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tactile consciousness that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mental consciousness that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; visually compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, aurally compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, nasally compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, lingually compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, corporeally compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mentally compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, [F.255.a] feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the earth element that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the water element that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fire element that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the wind element that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the space element that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the consciousness element that it might expand or compress is not [F.255.b] an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; ignorance that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, formative predispositions that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, consciousness that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, name and form that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the six sense fields that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sensory contact that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sensation that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, craving that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, grasping that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the rebirth process that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, birth that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and aging and death that it might expand or compress are not [F.256.a] an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the perfection of generosity that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of ethical discipline that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of tolerance that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of perseverance that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the perfection of meditative concentration that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of external phenomena that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of emptiness that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of great extent that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of ultimate reality that it might expand or compress is not [F.256.b] an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of the unlimited that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonexclusion that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of inherent nature that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of all phenomena that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonentities that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of essential nature that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, [F.257.a] and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the applications of mindfulness that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the correct exertions that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the supports for miraculous ability that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the faculties that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the powers that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the branches of enlightenment that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the noble eightfold path that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the truths of the noble ones that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the meditative concentrations that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the immeasurable attitudes that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the formless absorptions [F.257.b] that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the liberations which it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption which it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the extrasensory powers that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the meditative stabilities that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the dhāraṇī gateways that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the ten powers of the tathāgatas that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fearlessnesses that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the kinds of exact knowledge that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, great compassion that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, [F.258.a] and the distinct qualities of the buddhas that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; and the fruit of having entered the stream that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fruit of once-returner that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fruit of non-returner that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, arhatship that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, individual enlightenment that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the knowledge of the aspects of the path that it might expand or compress is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and enlightenment, the buddhas, and the attributes of the buddhas that it might expand or compress are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom.

- 25.184 “Physical forms that the perfection of wisdom might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, perceptions that [F.258.b] it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, formative predispositions that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and consciousness that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the eyes that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the ears that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the nose that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the tongue that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the body that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the mental faculty that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; sights that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sounds that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, odors that it might strengthen or weaken are not [F.259.a] an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tastes that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tangibles that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mental phenomena that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; visual consciousness that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, auditory consciousness that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, olfactory consciousness that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, gustatory consciousness that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, tactile consciousness that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mental consciousness that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; visually compounded sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, aurally compounded sensory contact [F.259.b] that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, nasally compounded sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, lingually compounded sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, corporeally compounded sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and mentally compounded sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, [F.260.a] and feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the earth element that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the water element that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fire element that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the wind element that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the space element that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the consciousness element that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; ignorance that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, formative predispositions that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, consciousness that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, name and form [F.260.b] that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the six sense fields that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sensory contact that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, sensation that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, craving that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, grasping that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the rebirth process that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, birth that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and aging and death that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the perfection of generosity that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of ethical discipline that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with [F.261.a] the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of tolerance that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the perfection of perseverance that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the perfection of meditative concentration that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the emptiness of internal phenomena that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of external phenomena that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of external and internal phenomena that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of emptiness that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of great extent that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of ultimate reality that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of conditioned phenomena that it might strengthen or weaken is not [F.261.b] an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of the unlimited that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonexclusion that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of inherent nature that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of all phenomena that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of nonentities that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the emptiness of essential nature that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, [F.262.a] and the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the applications of mindfulness that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the correct exertions that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the supports for miraculous ability that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the faculties that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the powers that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the branches of enlightenment that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the noble eightfold path that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the truths of the noble ones that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the meditative concentrations that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the immeasurable attitudes that it might strengthen [F.262.b] or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the formless absorptions that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the eight liberations that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the nine serial steps of meditative absorption that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the extrasensory powers that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the meditative stabilities that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the dhāraṇī gateways that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; the ten powers of the tathāgatas that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fearlessnesses that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the kinds of exact knowledge that it might strengthen or [F.263.a] weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, great compassion that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom; and the fruit of having entered the stream that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fruit of once-returner that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the fruit of non-returner that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, arhatship that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, individual enlightenment that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, the knowledge of the aspects of the path that it might strengthen or weaken is not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom, and enlightenment, the buddhas, and the attributes of the buddhas that it might strengthen or weaken are not an outcome compatible with the perfection of wisdom.

25.185 “Blessed Lord, [F.263.b] when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, physical forms it enhances or diminishes, or feelings it enhances or diminishes, or perceptions it enhances or diminishes, or formative predispositions it enhances or diminishes, or consciousness it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.

- 25.186 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the eyes it enhances or diminishes, or the ears it enhances or diminishes, or the nose it enhances or diminishes, or the tongue it enhances or diminishes, or the body it enhances or diminishes, or the mental faculty it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.
- 25.187 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, sights it enhances or diminishes, or sounds it enhances or diminishes, or odors it enhances or diminishes, or tastes it enhances or diminishes, or tangibles it enhances or diminishes, or mental phenomena it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.
- 25.188 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, visual consciousness it enhances or diminishes, or auditory consciousness it enhances or diminishes, or olfactory consciousness it enhances or diminishes, or gustatory consciousness it enhances or diminishes, or tactile consciousness it enhances or diminishes, or mental consciousness it enhances or diminishes [F.264.a] are their great apprehending.
- 25.189 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, visually compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes, or aurally compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes, or nasally compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes, or lingually compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes, or corporeally compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes, or mentally compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.
- 25.190 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes, or feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes, or feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes, or feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes, or feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes, or feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.
- 25.191 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the earth element it enhances or diminishes, or the water element it enhances or diminishes, or the fire element it enhances or diminishes, or the wind element it enhances or diminishes, or the space element it enhances or diminishes, or the consciousness element it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.

- 25.192 “Blessed Lord, [F.264.b] when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, ignorance it enhances or diminishes, or formative predispositions it enhances or diminishes, or consciousness it enhances or diminishes, or name and form it enhances or diminishes, or the six sense fields it enhances or diminishes, or sensory contact it enhances or diminishes, or sensation it enhances or diminishes, or craving it enhances or diminishes, or grasping it enhances or diminishes, or the rebirth process it enhances or diminishes, or birth it enhances or diminishes, or aging and death it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.
- 25.193 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the perfection of generosity it enhances or diminishes, or the perfection of ethical discipline it enhances or diminishes, or the perfection of tolerance it enhances or diminishes, or the perfection of perseverance it enhances or diminishes, or the perfection of meditative concentration it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.
- 25.194 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the emptiness of internal phenomena it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of external phenomena it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of external and internal phenomena it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of emptiness it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of great extent it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of ultimate reality it [F.265.a] enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of conditioned phenomena it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of the unlimited it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of nonexclusion it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of inherent nature it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of all phenomena it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of nonentities it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of essential nature it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.
- 25.195 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the applications of mindfulness it enhances or diminishes, or the correct exertions it enhances or diminishes, or the supports for miraculous ability it enhances or diminishes, or the faculties it enhances or diminishes, or the powers it enhances or diminishes, or the branches of enlightenment it enhances or diminishes, or the noble eightfold path it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.

- 25.196 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the truths of the noble ones it enhances [F.265.b] or diminishes, or the meditative concentrations it enhances or diminishes, or the immeasurable attitudes it enhances or diminishes, or the formless absorptions it enhances or diminishes, or the liberations it enhances or diminishes, or the nine serial steps of meditative absorption it enhances or diminishes, or the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.
- 25.197 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the extrasensory powers it enhances or diminishes, or the meditative stabilities it enhances or diminishes, or the dhāraṇī gateways it enhances or diminishes, or the ten powers of the tathāgatas it enhances or diminishes, or the four fearlessnesses it enhances or diminishes, or the four kinds of exact knowledge it enhances or diminishes, or great compassion it enhances or diminishes, or the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.
- 25.198 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the fruit of having entered the stream it enhances or diminishes, or the fruit of once-returner it enhances or diminishes, or the fruit of non-returner it enhances or diminishes, or arhatship it enhances or diminishes, or individual enlightenment it enhances or diminishes, or the knowledge of the aspects of the path [F.266.a] it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.
- 25.199 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, enlightenment, the buddhas, and the attributes of the buddhas it enhances or diminishes are their great apprehending.
- 25.200 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, physical forms it gathers together or scatters apart, or feelings it gathers together or scatters apart, or perceptions it gathers together or scatters apart, or formative predispositions it gathers together or scatters apart, or consciousness it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.
- 25.201 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the eyes it gathers together or scatters apart, or the ears it gathers together or scatters apart, or the nose it gathers together or scatters apart, or the tongue it gathers together or scatters apart, or the body it gathers together or scatters apart, or the mental faculty it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.
- 25.202 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, sights it gathers together or scatters apart, or sounds it gathers together or scatters apart, or odors it gathers together or scatters apart, or tastes it gathers together or scatters apart, or tangibles it gathers together or scatters apart, or mental phenomena it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.

25.203 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, visual consciousness it gathers together or scatters apart, [F.266.b] or auditory consciousness it gathers together or scatters apart, or olfactory consciousness it gathers together or scatters apart, or gustatory consciousness it gathers together or scatters apart, or tactile consciousness it gathers together or scatters apart, or mental consciousness it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.

25.204 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, visually compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart, or aurally compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart, or nasally compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart, or lingually compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart, or corporeally compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart, or mentally compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.

25.205 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart, or feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart, or feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart, or feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart, or feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart, or feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.

25.206 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom [F.267.a] in that manner, the earth element it gathers together or scatters apart, or the water element it gathers together or scatters apart, or the fire element it gathers together or scatters apart, or the wind element it gathers together or scatters apart, or the space element it gathers together or scatters apart, or the consciousness element it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.

25.207 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, ignorance it gathers together or scatters apart, or formative predispositions it gathers together or scatters apart, or consciousness it gathers together or scatters apart, or name and form it gathers together or scatters apart, or the six sense fields it gathers together or scatters apart, or sensory contact it gathers together or scatters apart, or sensation it gathers together or scatters apart, or craving it gathers together or scatters apart, or grasping it gathers together or scatters apart, or the rebirth process it gathers together or scatters apart, or birth it gathers together or scatters apart, or aging and death it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.

25.208 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the perfection of generosity it gathers together or scatters apart, or the perfection of ethical discipline it gathers together or scatters apart, or the perfection of tolerance it gathers together or scatters apart, or the perfection of perseverance it gathers together [F.267.b] or scatters apart, or the perfection of meditative concentration it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.

25.209 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the emptiness of internal phenomena it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of external phenomena it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of external and internal phenomena it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of emptiness it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of great extent it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of ultimate reality it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of conditioned phenomena it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of the unlimited it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of nonexclusion it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of inherent nature it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of all phenomena it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of nonentities it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of essential nature it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.

25.210 “Blessed Lord, [F.268.a] when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the applications of mindfulness it gathers together or scatters apart, or the correct exertions it gathers together or scatters apart, or the supports for miraculous ability it gathers together or scatters apart, or the faculties it gathers together or scatters apart, or the powers it gathers together or scatters apart, or the branches of enlightenment it gathers together or scatters apart, or the noble eightfold path it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.

- 25.211 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the truths of the noble ones it gathers together or scatters apart, or the meditative concentrations it gathers together or scatters apart, or the immeasurable attitudes it gathers together or scatters apart, or the formless absorptions it gathers together or scatters apart, or the eight liberations it gathers together or scatters apart, or the nine serial steps of meditative absorption it gathers together or scatters apart, or the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.
- 25.212 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the extrasensory powers it gathers together or scatters apart, or the meditative stabilities it gathers together or scatters apart, or the dhāraṇī gateways it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.
- 25.213 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, [F.268.b] the ten powers of the tathāgatas it gathers together or scatters apart, or the four fearlessnesses it gathers together or scatters apart, or the four kinds of exact knowledge it gathers together or scatters apart, or great compassion it gathers together or scatters apart, of the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.
- 25.214 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the fruit of having entered the stream it gathers together or scatters apart, or the fruit of once-returner it gathers together or scatters apart, or the fruit of non-returner it gathers together or scatters apart, or arhatship it gathers together or scatters apart, or individual enlightenment it gathers together or scatters apart, or the knowledge of the aspects of the path it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending.
- 25.215 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, enlightenment, the buddhas, and the attributes of the buddhas it gathers together or scatters apart are their great apprehending. [B20]
- 25.216 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, physical forms it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or feelings it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or perceptions it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or formative predispositions it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or consciousness [F.269.a] it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.
- 25.217 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the eyes it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the ears it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the nose it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the tongue it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the body it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the mental faculty it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.218 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, sights it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or sounds it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or odors it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or tastes it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or tangibles it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or mental phenomena it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.219 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, visual consciousness it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or auditory consciousness it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or olfactory consciousness it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or gustatory consciousness it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or tactile consciousness it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or mental consciousness it makes measurable [F.269.b] or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.220 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, visually compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or aurally compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or nasally compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or lingually compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or corporeally compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or mentally compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.221 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.222 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the earth element it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the water element it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, [F.270.a] or the fire element it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the wind element it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the space element it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the consciousness element it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.223 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, ignorance it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or formative predispositions it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or consciousness it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or name and form it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the six sense fields it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or sensory contact it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or sensation it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or craving it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or grasping it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the rebirth process it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or birth it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or aging and death it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.224 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the perfection of generosity it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the perfection of ethical discipline it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, [F.270.b] or the perfection of tolerance it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the perfection of perseverance it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the perfection of meditative concentration it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.225 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the emptiness of internal phenomena it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of external phenomena it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of external and internal phenomena it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of emptiness it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of great extent it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of ultimate reality it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of conditioned phenomena it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of the unlimited it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of nonexclusion it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of inherent nature it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of all phenomena it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, [F.271.a] or the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of nonentities it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of essential nature it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.226 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the applications of mindfulness it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the correct exertions it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the supports for miraculous ability it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the faculties it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the powers it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the branches of enlightenment it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the noble eightfold path it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.227 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the truths of the noble ones it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the meditative concentrations it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the immeasurable attitudes it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the formless absorptions it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the eight liberations it makes measurable [F.271.b] or makes immeasurable, or the nine serial steps of meditative absorption it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.228 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the extrasensory powers it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the meditative stabilities it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the dhāraṇī gateways it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the ten powers of the tathāgatas it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the four fearlessnesses it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the four kinds of exact knowledge it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or great compassion it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.229 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the fruit of having entered the stream it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the fruit of once-returner it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the fruit of non-returner it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or arhatship it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or individual enlightenment it makes measurable or makes immeasurable, or the knowledge of the aspects of the path it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.230 “Blessed Lord, [F.272.a] when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, enlightenment, the buddhas, and the attributes of the buddhas it makes measurable or makes immeasurable are their great apprehending.

25.231 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, physical forms it expands or compresses, or feelings it expands or compresses, or perceptions it expands or compresses, or formative predispositions it expands or compresses, or consciousness it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.

25.232 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the eyes it expands or compresses, or the ears it expands or compresses, or the nose it expands or compresses, or the tongue it expands or compresses, or the body it expands or compresses, or the mental faculty it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.

25.233 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, sights it expands or compresses, or sounds it expands or compresses, or odors it expands or compresses, or tastes it expands or compresses, or tangibles it expands or compresses, or mental phenomena it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.

25.234 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, visual consciousness it expands or compresses, [F.272.b] or auditory consciousness it expands or compresses, or olfactory consciousness it expands or compresses, or gustatory consciousness it expands or compresses, or tactile consciousness it expands or compresses, or mental consciousness it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.

25.235 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, visually compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses, or aurally compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses, or nasally compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses, or lingually compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses, or corporeally compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses, or mentally compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.

25.236 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses, or feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses, or feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses, or feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses, or feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses, or feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.

25.237 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, [F.273.a] the earth element it expands or compresses, or the water element it expands or compresses, or the fire element it expands or compresses, or the wind element it expands or compresses, or the space element it expands or compresses, or the consciousness element it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.

25.238 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, ignorance it expands or compresses, or formative predispositions it expands or compresses, or consciousness it expands or compresses, or name and form it expands or compresses, or the six sense fields it expands or compresses, or sensory contact it expands or compresses, or sensation it expands or compresses, or craving it expands or compresses, or grasping it expands or compresses, or the rebirth process it expands or compresses, or birth it expands or compresses, or aging and death it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.

25.239 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the perfection of generosity it expands or compresses, or the perfection of ethical discipline it expands or compresses, or the perfection of tolerance it expands or compresses, or the perfection of perseverance [F.273.b] it expands or compresses, or the perfection of meditative concentration it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.

25.240 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the emptiness of internal phenomena it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of external phenomena it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of external and internal phenomena it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of emptiness it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of great extent it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of ultimate reality it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of conditioned phenomena it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of the unlimited it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of nonexclusion it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of inherent nature it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of all phenomena it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended it expands or compresses,

- or the emptiness of nonentities it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of essential nature it expands or compresses, or the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.
- 25.241 “Blessed Lord, [F.274.a] when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the applications of mindfulness it expands or compresses, or the correct exertions it expands or compresses, or the supports for miraculous ability it expands or compresses, or the faculties it expands or compresses, or the powers it expands or compresses, or the branches of enlightenment it expands or compresses, or the noble eightfold path it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.
- 25.242 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the truths of the noble ones it expands or compresses, or the meditative concentrations it expands or compresses, or the immeasurable attitudes it expands or compresses, or the formless absorptions it expands or compresses, or the liberations it expands or compresses, or the nine serial steps of meditative absorption it expands or compresses, or the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.
- 25.243 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the extrasensory powers it expands or compresses, or the meditative stabilities it expands or compresses, or the dhāraṇī gateways it expands or compresses, [F.274.b] or the powers of the tathāgatas it expands or compresses, or the fearlessnesses it expands or compresses, or the kinds of exact knowledge it expands or compresses, or great compassion it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.
- 25.244 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the eighteen distinct qualities of the buddhas it expands or compresses, or the fruit of having entered the stream it expands or compresses, or the fruit of once-returner it expands or compresses, or the fruit of non-returner it expands or compresses, or arhatship it expands or compresses, or individual enlightenment it expands or compresses, or the knowledge of the aspects of the path it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.
- 25.245 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, enlightenment, the buddhas, and the attributes of the buddhas it expands or compresses are their great apprehending.
- 25.246 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, physical forms it strengthens or weakens, or feelings it strengthens or weakens, or perceptions it strengthens or weakens, or formative predispositions it strengthens or weakens, or consciousness it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.

- 25.247 “Blessed Lord, [F.275.a] when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the eyes it strengthens or weakens, or the ears it strengthens or weakens, or the nose it strengthens or weakens, or the tongue it strengthens or weakens, or the body it strengthens or weakens, or the mental faculty it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.
- 25.248 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, sights it strengthens or weakens, or sounds it strengthens or weakens, or odors it strengthens or weakens, or tastes it strengthens or weakens, or tangibles it strengthens or weakens, or mental phenomena it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.
- 25.249 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, visual consciousness it strengthens or weakens, or auditory consciousness it strengthens or weakens, or olfactory consciousness it strengthens or weakens, or gustatory consciousness it strengthens or weakens, or tactile consciousness it strengthens or weakens, or mental consciousness it strengthens or weakens are their [F.275.b] great apprehending.
- 25.250 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, visually compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens, or aurally compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens, or nasally compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens, or lingually compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens, or corporeally compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens, or mentally compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.
- 25.251 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens, or feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens, or feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens, or feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens, or feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens, or feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.
- 25.252 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the earth element it strengthens or weakens, or the water element it strengthens or weakens, or the fire element it strengthens [F.276.a] or weakens, or the wind element it strengthens or weakens, or the space element it strengthens or weakens, or the consciousness element it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.

25.253 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, ignorance it strengthens or weakens, or formative predispositions it strengthens or weakens, or consciousness it strengthens or weakens, or name and form it strengthens or weakens, or the six sense fields it strengthens or weakens, or sensory contact it strengthens or weakens, or sensation it strengthens or weakens, or craving it strengthens or weakens, or grasping it strengthens or weakens, or the rebirth process it strengthens or weakens, or birth it strengthens or weakens, or aging and death it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.

25.254 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the perfection of generosity it strengthens or weakens, or the perfection of ethical discipline it strengthens or weakens, or the perfection of tolerance it strengthens [F.276.b] or weakens, or the perfection of perseverance it strengthens or weakens, or the perfection of meditative concentration it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.

25.255 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the emptiness of internal phenomena it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of external phenomena it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of external and internal phenomena it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of emptiness it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of great extent it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of ultimate reality it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of conditioned phenomena it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of the unlimited it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of nonexclusion it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of inherent nature it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of all phenomena it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended it strengthens or [F.277.a] weakens, or the emptiness of nonentities it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of essential nature it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.

25.256 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the applications of mindfulness it strengthens or weakens, or the correct exertions it strengthens or weakens, or the supports for miraculous ability it strengthens or weakens, or the faculties it strengthens or weakens, or the powers it strengthens or weakens, or the branches of enlightenment it strengthens or weakens, or the noble eightfold path it strengthens or weakens, or the truths of the noble ones it strengthens or weakens, or the meditative concentrations it strengthens or weakens, or the immeasurable attitudes it strengthens or weakens, or the formless absorptions it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.

25.257 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the eight liberations it strengthens [F.277.b] or weakens, or the nine serial steps of meditative absorption it strengthens or weakens, or the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.

25.258 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, the extrasensory powers it strengthens or weakens, or the meditative stabilities it strengthens or weakens, or the dhāraṇī gateways it strengthens or weakens, or the powers of the tathāgatas it strengthens or weakens, or the fearlessnesses it strengthens or weakens, or the kinds of exact knowledge it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.

25.259 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, great compassion it strengthens or weakens, or the distinct qualities of the buddhas it strengthens or weakens, or the fruit of having entered the stream it strengthens or weakens, or the fruit of once-returner it strengthens or weakens, or the fruit of non-returner it strengthens or weakens, or arhatship it strengthens or weakens, or individual enlightenment it strengthens or weakens, or the knowledge of the aspects of the path it [F.278.a] strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.

25.260 “Blessed Lord, when they practice the perfection of wisdom in that manner, enlightenment, the buddhas, and the attributes of the buddhas it strengthens or weakens are their great apprehending.

25.261 “If you ask why, it is because there is no ‘enlightenment’ for those with the perception that something is being apprehended. It is like this: because beings are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because physical forms are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because feelings are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because perceptions are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because formative predispositions are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because consciousness is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; because the eyes are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the ears are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the nose is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the tongue is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the body is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because the mental faculty is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; because sights are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because sounds are nonarising [F.278.b] the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because odors are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because tastes are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because tangibles are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because mental phenomena are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; because visual consciousness is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because auditory consciousness is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because olfactory consciousness is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because gustatory consciousness is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because tactile consciousness is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because mental consciousness is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; because visually compounded sensory contact is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because aurally compounded sensory contact is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because nasally compounded sensory contact is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because lingually compounded sensory contact is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because corporeally compounded sensory contact is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, [F.279.a] and because mentally compounded sensory contact is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; because feelings conditioned by visually compounded sensory contact are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because feelings conditioned by aurally compounded sensory contact are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because feelings conditioned by nasally compounded sensory contact are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because feelings conditioned by lingually compounded sensory contact are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because feelings conditioned by corporeally compounded sensory contact are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because feelings conditioned by mentally compounded sensory contact are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; because the earth element is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the water element is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the fire element is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the wind element is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the space element is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because the consciousness element is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; because ignorance is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because formative predispositions are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because consciousness is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, [F.279.b] because name and form are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the six sense fields are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because sensory contact is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because sensation is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because craving is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because grasping is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the rebirth process is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because birth is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because aging and death are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; because the perfection of generosity is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the perfection of ethical discipline is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the perfection of tolerance is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the perfection of perseverance is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because the perfection of meditative concentration is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; because the emptiness of internal phenomena is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of external phenomena is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of external and internal phenomena is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, [F.280.a] because the emptiness of emptiness is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of great extent is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of ultimate reality is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of conditioned phenomena is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of unconditioned phenomena is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of the unlimited is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of that which has neither beginning nor end is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of nonexclusion is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of inherent nature is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of all phenomena is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of intrinsic defining characteristics is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of that which cannot be apprehended is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of nonentities is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness of essential nature is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because the emptiness of an essential nature of nonentities is nonarising [F.280.b] the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; because the applications of mindfulness are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the correct exertions are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the supports for miraculous ability are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the faculties are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the powers are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the branches of enlightenment are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because the noble eightfold path is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; because the truths of the noble ones are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the meditative concentrations are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the immeasurable attitudes are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the formless absorptions are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the liberations are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the serial steps of meditative absorption are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness gateways to liberation are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the extrasensory powers [F.281.a] are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the meditative stabilities are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the dhāraṇī gateways are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the powers of the tathāgatas are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the fearlessnesses are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the kinds of exact knowledge are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because great compassion is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because the distinct qualities of the buddhas are nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising; and because the fruit of having entered the stream is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the fruit of once-returner is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the fruit of non-returner is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because arhatship is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because individual enlightenment is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, because the knowledge of the aspects of the path is nonarising the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising, and because enlightenment, the buddhas, and the attributes of the buddhas are nonarising [F.281.b] the perfection of wisdom is viewed as nonarising.

25.262 “Because beings are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because physical forms are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because feelings are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because perceptions are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because formative predispositions are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, and because consciousness is without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature; because the eyes are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because the ears are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because the nose is without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because the tongue is without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because the body is without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, and because the mental faculty is without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature; because sights are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because sounds are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because odors are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because tastes are without an essential nature [F.282.a] the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, because tangibles are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature, and because mental phenomena are without an essential nature the perfection of wisdom is viewed as without an essential nature; because visual consciousness is without an essential nature

